INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this book is to identify the most common trouble spots for English speakers learning Spanish, to provide a basis for understanding why these trouble spots cause difficulties, and to offer guidance and practice for avoiding potential errors.

Many errors commonly made by speakers and learners of a second language are caused by transferring the patterns of the native language to the language being learned. This happens in all aspects of language, from pronunciation to word formation to sentence structure. Following are some examples of problems English speakers have when learning Spanish.

1. There are only a few sounds in Spanish that do not exist in English. Many sounds common to both languages, however, are represented by different letters in each language. For example, in certain situations the letter d in Spanish is pronounced like the “th” in the English “brother.” Also, English and Spanish have different pronunciation patterns for vowels, which can cause English speakers to mispronounce many words.
2. Although there are some clues as to whether Spanish nouns are masculine or feminine, many nouns seem to defy regular patterns. English speakers must learn the gender of Spanish nouns and be careful to use the correct corresponding articles and pronouns.
3. Although many Spanish words have cognates in English, there are also many false cognates, aptly called falsos amigos in Spanish. One example is sensible, an adjective in both languages; it means “level-headed” in English but “sensitive” in Spanish.
4. In many cases, one word in English has two or more noninterchangeable translations in Spanish. One example of this is the verb “be” in English, whose correspondents in Spanish are ser and estar, as well as other verbs used idiomatically. Another is the English “for,” which has several Spanish translations, among them, por and para.
5. Particles, such as prepositions and conjunctions, have no one-for-one equivalents in both languages. For example, the Spanish preposition en can be translated into English as “in,” “on,” “at,” “of,” and

- “about.” Likewise, the translation of English “on Sunday” is el domingo, “the Sunday.”
6. A more insidious type of falso amigo is encountered in the use of verb tenses. The present tense, for example, can be used identically in both languages for certain functions. It is, therefore, often assumed that the function of the present tense will be the same in all instances. Actually, the Spanish present tense can also be used for functions that are expressed in English in the present progressive, present perfect, past, and future tenses. Every verb tense, in fact, represents a potential trouble spot for English-speaking learners of Spanish.
 7. Information can be expressed one way in one language, and in a different way in the other. In English, for example, one says “I am hungry,” while in Spanish one says the equivalent of “I have hunger.” Likewise, the English “I like ice cream” is stated in Spanish as “Ice cream appeals to me.” Expressions of this type present more complications when their individual words are modified; for example, “I am very hungry” is the equivalent of “I have a lot of hunger.” Again, the pitfall is transferring the English pattern to the Spanish.

In this book you will find the reasons behind these and many other common but lesser-known “blunders” through explanations of how regular patterns of Spanish differ from those of English. You will be made aware of potential trouble spots and shown how to break bad habits and correct your own mistakes. Several examples are given for each topic, followed by exercises that test your understanding and help you avoid the pitfalls encountered when translating word for word, structure for structure, from English.

Because individual words of a language are used in connection with other words, you will find that most topics are mentioned in more than one place. This repetition allows for cross-referencing and provides multiple examples of the most problematic structures. You will find that many of the lists are structured for sense and meaning; adverbs are listed in order of nunca “never” to siempre “always,” for example. Nouns are grouped by their endings, and verbs are grouped by usage. In addition, the comprehensive, detailed index at the back of the book serves as a guide to finding all the references to each topic. At the back of the book you will also find the answers to all the exercises. It is hoped that the materials presented here will help you improve your proficiency in Spanish and avoid the most common blunders.

Suggestions for Using This Book

The book is divided into three parts: Pronunciation and Spelling, Grammar, and Vocabulary. The largest section is Grammar, which identifies the various types of words according to traditional terminology. If you are unfamiliar with these terms, or if you find them more confusing than helpful, follow these suggestions:

- First look for the “Avoid the Blunder” headings in each section. Read the examples, then read the related explanation.
- Use the Index, rather than the Contents, to find what you are looking for.
- Check all the cross-references to a topic you are interested in to find more examples.
- Do the exercises on a separate sheet of paper, then check your answers in the Answer Key at the back of the book. If you have made mistakes, reread the pertinent sections, then do the exercises again.

Throughout the book, all blunders are printed in red type and marked by a stylized X. These are words, phrases, and sentences that are unacceptable.

The guidelines here are based on current standard usage in all countries where Spanish is the native language. However, be aware that language is constantly changing, that there are many different forms of expression, and that certain items identified here as “blunders” are accepted as standard usage in some areas. The biggest blunder of all would be to correct a native speaker, or to in any way imply that he or she doesn’t speak “correct” Spanish. Recognizing the differences you encounter in different places will enrich your Spanish and enable you to identify regional variations. The best way to learn a language is to listen to its native speakers and practice by communicating with them.

Acknowledgments

The author is indebted to her many teachers, colleagues, friends, and students, from whom she continues to learn. She especially appreciates the advice of Ligia Ochoa Sierra, and the help of Jeannette Walters Márquez and Luz Noemí Curet, who read the entire manuscript and provided many insightful comments and suggestions.

Spanish Letters and Sounds

Because the Spanish and English alphabets are so similar, it is important to keep in mind that the sounds represented by most letters in Spanish are different from the sounds they represent in English.

Vowels

Spanish vowel sounds are produced by first positioning the mouth correctly, then uttering the sound without moving the jaw.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not pronounce a single vowel with two vowel sounds.

a pronounced like the a in “father,” but cut short: taco

X ta uh co

e pronounced like the e in “bet”: bueno

X bwayno

i pronounced like the i in “machine,” but cut short: fino

o pronounced like the beginning of o in “open”

Do not glide into an /ow/ sound: fino.

X finow X tacow

u pronounced like the beginning of u in “tuba”

Do not make a /yu/ sound: Cuba.

X kyuwba

Unstressed vowels in English are usually pronounced with the mouth in a relaxed, almost-closed position, making them all sound something like “uh.” In Spanish, each vowel is pronounced clearly.

“ro sas”

buenos días

“bwe nos dee ahs”

AVOID THE Blunder

X bway nuhz dee uhz

Any combination of the vowels i or u with a, e, or o is pronounced as one syllable unless there is an accent mark over one of the vowels.

pia no	die ta	Ma rio	viu da
a gua	bue no	rui nas	cuo ta
Jai me	rei na	oi go	cui dar
Lau ra	Eu ro pa

Any combination of the vowels i or u with a, e, or o is pronounced as two syllables when there is an accent mark over either vowel.

dí a	rí o	Ma ri a	le í
grú a	ac tú a	re ú ne	Ra úl

Any combination of the vowels a, e, or o is pronounced as two syllables. No accent mark is used.

pa e lla fe o po e ma ca os le er

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Jaíme
- ✗ oigo
- ✗ óigo
- ✗ dia
- ✗ Raul
- ✗ paélla
- ✗ féo
- ✗ poéma
- ✗ cáos
- ✗ leér

When a word ends with a vowel, and the following word starts with the same vowel, the vowel is pronounced only once.

Ana anda al parque	"a nan dal par que"
la casa de Eduardo	"la ca sa de duar do"

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Ana | anda | al parque
- ✗ la casa de | Eduardo

When a vowel is repeated within a word, however, like ee or oo, the vowels are pronounced as two syllables that glide together.

leer	"le ER"
coordinar	"co or dee NAR"

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not add a /y/ or /w/ sound, as you would in English.

- ✗ le yer
- ✗ co wor di nar

Words are connected in a stream of speech, without a break between words.

¿Cómo está usted?

Vamos a la piscina a nadar un rato.

“co mwe stau sted”

“va mo sa la pi si na na da run ra to”

AVOID THE Blunder

~~X~~ co mo | está | us ted

~~X~~ va mos | a la pis cina | a na dar | un ra to

Consonants

The sounds /p/, /k/, and /t/ at the beginning of English words are followed by a puff of air. Do not produce this puff of air when pronouncing these sounds in Spanish.

Pepe papá taco capa Paco tapas

The sounds of the Spanish letters b, v, g, and d are similar to their English equivalents at the beginning of words. However, when these letters fall between two vowels, they are softer and may be lengthened.

b, v Keep the lips slightly apart and let the air come through.

bebé habas tuvo uva

g Keep a slight opening at the throat and let the air come through.
(This sound is like the French r.)

haga traigo mago llegue

d Place the tongue between the top and bottom teeth, exactly like the th in “brother.”

cada dedo mide seda

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the English /d/ sound for the Spanish d in the middle or at the end of words. This sound is used for the Spanish r.

Say the following words aloud, pronouncing d like the English tb, and r like the English d.

cada	cara	cedo	cero
todo	toro	dudo	duro
ida	ira	comed	comer
mide	mire	hablad	hablar

Remember that ll and y are consonants and are pronounced like the doubled y in “say yes” or the j in “jar.” They must be pronounced with force to avoid misunderstanding. For example, if the ll is not pronounced forcefully enough, a person might hear you say “I love myself” (me amo) rather than “My name is” (me llamo).

se llama Yolanda

“se yya ma yyo lan da”

OR “se ja ma jo lan da”

ya me llamó

“yya me yya mó” OR “ja me ja mó”

AVOID THE Blunder

X se ama Yolanda

X ya me amó

The sound /r/ in Spanish is very different from the English /r/. To pronounce the English /r/, the lips are rounded, the top teeth are somewhat bared, and the tongue is suspended in the middle of the mouth without touching anything. To pronounce the Spanish /r/, keep your lips in a flat position and tap the tip of your tongue once on the ridge behind your top front teeth. The sound is like the d in the English “body.”

cara cero hora iré loro oro para

Learn to make the trilled Spanish r by placing the tip of your tongue loosely on the ridge behind your top front teeth, then forcing air between the tongue and the ridge, causing it to flap rapidly and automatically. This takes practice, but it’s worth learning.

The letter r before another consonant requires a half-trill.

carta embargo cierto cerca forma

The letter r at the beginning of a word is fully trilled, as is the rr in the middle of a word.

río rama rosa carro perro cierra error

The Spanish s is pronounced like the s in “sun,” even in the middle or at the end of a word. It is never pronounced like the English z, as in the second s of “Susan” or at the end of a word.

AVOID THE Blunder

Pronounce the Spanish s (even in the middle or at the end of a word) like the s in “sun.”

X Suzanna

X rozez

In Spanish, the only consonants that are doubled are l, r, and c; all of the doubled consonants represent sounds that are very different from the sounds of the single letters. (See the chart on pages 3–4.)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a double consonant in Spanish where it is used in the English cognate.

X intelligente X professor X recomendar

SPELLING

Consonants

The sound /k/ is spelled with c before the vowels a, o, and u, and with qu before the vowels e and i.

ca	que	qui	co	cu
casa	queso	quieto	come	cuna

The sound /kw/ is always spelled cu.

cua	cue	cui	cuo
cuatro	cueva	cuidar	cuota

The sound /th/ (in Spain) and /s/ (in Latin America) is spelled with z before the vowels a, o, and u, and with c before the vowels e and i.

za	ce	ci	zo	zu
zapato	cero	cinco	zona	zumo

The sound /g/ is spelled with g before the vowels a, o and u, and with gu before the vowels e and i.

ga	gue	gui	go	gu
gala	guerra	guitarra	goza	gusano

The sound /gw/ is spelled gu before the vowels a and o, and gü before the vowels e and i.

gua	güe	güi	guo
guante	güera	pingüino	antiguo

The “stronger than /h/” sound (more guttural—from the throat—than the English b) is spelled with a j before the vowels a, e, i, o, and u. It can also be spelled with a g before the vowels e and i, and with an x in the words México and mexicano.

ja	je OR ge OR xe	ji OR gi	jo	ju jaleo	jerga	jitomate	joya	jugo
	general	gigante
	México
	mexicano

The sound of the letter ñ is similar to that of the ni in the English “onion.” The ñ represents a combination of the consonants n + y. The tilde that distinguishes this letter from n may be written as a straight line over the n. Always pronounce the /y/ sound clearly after the /n/ sound.

año	“an yo”
baño	“ban yo”
pequeño	“pe ken yo”
niña	“nin ya”

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget to write the tilde.

X ano X bano X pequeno X nina

■ When grammar forces a vowel change, this may affect the consonants described above. This consonant change occurs in the following situations:

- adding a plural ending to a noun or adjective

un lápiz	dos lápices	(X lápizes) la actriz	las actrices	(X actrizes) el arroz	los arroces	(X arrozes)

- present indicative yo forms

recoger	yo recojo	(X recogo) dirigir	yo dirijo	(X dirigo)

- preterite yo forms

sacar	yo saqué	(X sacé) jugar	yo jugué	(X jugé) empezar	yo empecé	(X empezé)

- present subjunctive verb forms

sacar	saque	(X sace) rogar	ruegue	(X ruege) recoger	recoja	(X recoga) almorzar	almuerce	(X almuerze)

- making an adjective from a noun

Nicaragua nicaragüense (X nicaraguense)

- intensifying an adjective

simpático simpatiquísimo (X simpatíssimo) feliz felicísima (X felizísima)

AVOID THE Blunder

- | | | |
|----------------------------|-----------------------|-----------------------|
| X lápizes | X actrizes | X arrozes |
| X recogo | X dirigo | |
| X sacé | X jugé | X empezé |
| X sace | X ruege | X recoga |
| X nicaraguense | | |
| X simpaticísimo | | |
| X felizísima | | X almuerze |

Accent Marks

- Accent marks are used above both uppercase and lowercase letters.

When writing the accent mark by hand, make a small mark directly over the vowel, slanting upward toward the right. When the accent mark is above a lowercase i, do not dot the i.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not “float” accent marks above words.

- ~~X~~ laquíz ~~X~~ dífícl ~~X~~ saqué

- The following present-tense forms of the verb estar require an accent mark.

estás está están estáis

The following present-tense forms of the verb estar do not require an accent mark.

estoy estamos

- Certain verbs whose infinitive ends in -iar require accent marks over the i in the yo, tú, usted/él/ella, and ustedes/ellos/ellas forms of the present tense, but not in the nosotros(-as) and vosotros(-as) forms.

confiar (to trust)	confío	confiamos
	confías	confiáis confía confían

Other verbs of this type include the following.

enviar	to send
guiar	to guide
variar	to vary

Other verbs that end in -iar do not have accent marks over the i in their conjugated forms.

estudiar (to study)	estudio	estudiamos
	estudias	estudiáis estudia estudian

Other verbs of this type include the following.

abreviar	to abbreviate cambiar	to change
limpiar	to clean

- The words quién, cómo, qué, cuál, dónde, cuándo, and por qué have an accent mark when they begin a question, whether direct or indirect. They do not require an accent mark in other contexts.

“Why” is expressed with two words and has an accent mark: ¿Por qué? “Because” is expressed with one word and does not have an accent mark: porque.

ACCENT MARK	¿Quién es?	Who is it?
ACCENT MARK	No sé quién es.	I don't know who it is.
NO ACCENT MARK	Fui yo quien vio el accidente.	I was the one who saw the accident.
ACCENT MARK	¿Cómo estás?	How are you?
ACCENT MARK	No entiendo cómo lo haces.	I don't understand how you do it.
NO ACCENT MARK	Debes trabajar como tu papá.	You should work like your father does.
ACCENT MARK	¿Qué es esto?	What's this?
ACCENT MARK	Él no sabía qué hacer.	He didn't know what to do.
NO ACCENT MARK	Él me dijo que lo haría.	He told me he would do it.
ACCENT MARK	¿Cuál es su nombre?	What's your name?
ACCENT MARK	Quisiera saber cuál de los libros es el mejor.	I would like to know which one is the best book.
NO ACCENT MARK	He perdido mi tarjeta, sin la cual no puedo comprar nada.	I lost my card, without which I can't buy anything.

ACCENT MARK	¿Dónde estás?	Where are you?
ACCENT MARK	Me preguntó dónde estaba su mamá.	He asked me where his mother was.
NO ACCENT MARK	Vamos al restaurante dónde comimos ayer.	Let's go to the restaurant where we ate yesterday.
ACCENT MARK	¿Cuándo es la fiesta?	When is the party?
ACCENT MARK	Tengo que averiguar cuándo es el examen.	I have to find out when the exam is.
NO ACCENT MARK	Cuando lo vio, se desmayó.	When she saw him, she fainted.
ACCENT MARK	¿Por qué no vienes con nosotros?	Why don't you come with us?
ACCENT MARK	Me puedo imaginar por qué lo hiciste.	I can imagine why you did it.
NO ACCENT MARK	Trabaja mucho porque quiere ganar más.	He works hard because he wants to earn more.

- The meaning of certain words is distinguished by the use of an accent mark.

aún	still	aun	even dé	give! (command)	de	of, from
él	he	el	the
más	more, plus	mas	however
mí	me	mi	my
sí	yes	si	if sólo	only	solo	alone té	tea	te	you (object)
tú	you	tu	your

- The following guidelines apply to the use of accent marks with other words.

In order to know where to put an accent mark, you need to know how the word is pronounced and be able to identify the syllable that is stressed or slightly more emphasized.

- When the emphasized syllable is the final syllable:
- there is no accent mark if that syllable ends in a consonant other than -n or -s.

verdad reloj animal error estoy arroz

- an accent mark is required over the vowel of the final syllable if it ends in a vowel, a one-syllable vowel combination (see page 3), -n, or -s.

habló comí comió comerán acción sabrás

- When the emphasized syllable is the next-to-last syllable:

- there is no accent mark if the final syllable ends in a vowel, -n, or -s.

hablo supe comen sabes aprendemos

- there is no accent mark if the stressed vowel is part of a two-syllable vowel combination (any combination of the vowels a, e, and o).

video cacao Corea poema paella

- there is no accent mark if the final syllable is a one-syllable vowel combination.

Mario Colombia agua perpetuo superficie

- there is an accent mark over the stressed vowel if the stressed vowel is part of a normally one-syllable vowel combination (any vowel combination that includes i or u).

María día tío ríe Raúl maíz país

- When the emphasized syllable is the third-, fourth-, or fifth-last syllable, it always has an accent mark.

ámate propósito estudiándolo dígaselo rápidamente

- Adding a syllable can change the need for an accent mark. For example, words that end in -ión always have an accent mark, but when they are made plural, they lose it.

acción acciones lección lecciones

Certain other words may not have an accent mark in the singular but may need one in the plural.

examen exámenes
joven jóvenes

AVOID THE Blunder

X accion	X leccion	X acciones	X lecciones
X exámen	X jóven	X examenes	X jóvenes

PUNCTUATION

- Two question marks are required for every question: an upside-down question mark at the beginning, and one identical to the English question mark at the end.

¿Adónde vas, papá?

Where are you going, Dad?

¿Me compras un juguete?

Will you buy me a toy?

- Two exclamation points are required for every exclamation: an upside-down exclamation point at the beginning, and one identical to the English exclamation point at the end.

¡Váyanse de aquí!

Get out of here!

¡Déjame en paz!

Leave me alone!

The first question mark or exclamation point is placed at the beginning of the question or exclamation, which is not necessarily at the beginning of the sentence.

Papá, ¿adónde vas?

Dad, where are you going?

Chicos, ¡váyanse de aquí!

Guys, get out of here!

- In writing dialogue, a dash, rather than quotation marks, is used to indicate the spoken word or a change in speakers.

—¿Qué piensa hacer usted,

“What are you planning to do,

Sr. Rodríguez?

Mr. Rodriguez?”

—No sé. Tendré que hablarlo

“I don’t know. I’ll have to talk it con mi familia.

over with my family.”

- Quotation marks are used, as in English, to mark someone’s exact words within a text. In Spanish the symbols «...» are often used for this purpose. If the end punctuation of the quote is a question mark or exclamation point, it goes before the final quotation mark. In Spanish, unlike English, this is followed by a period. A colon, rather than a comma, is used to introduce the quote.

El director le preguntó:

The director asked him,

“¿Qué piensa hacer usted,

“What are you planning to do,

Sr. Rodríguez?”.
“Mr. Rodríguez?”

When a quote ends in a period or is followed by a comma, the period or comma goes after the quotation mark.

El Sr. Rodríguez contestó: "No sé, tendré que hablarlo con mi familia".

"No sé", dijo el Sr. Rodríguez.

Mr. Rodríguez answered, "I don't know. I'll have to talk it over with my family."

"I don't know," said Mr. Rodríguez.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Adónde vas, papá?
- ✗ ¿Papa, adónde vas?
- ✗ Déjame en paz!
- ✗ "No voy," dijo Juan.

In Spanish, items in a series are separated by commas. No comma is used between the last two items (that is, before y).

Luisa, Elena y Dolores están en México este verano.

En el mercado compramos carne, queso, tomates, aguacates y fresas.

Luisa, Elena, and Dolores are in Mexico this summer:

At the market we bought meat, cheese, tomatoes, avocados, and strawberries.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Luisa, Elena, y Dolores
- ✗ carne, queso, tomates, aguacates, y fresas

GRAMMAR

NOUNS

A noun is a word that names a person, an animal, an object, a place, an event, an idea, a quality, an action, a state, or other abstract notion.

Gender

Every noun in Spanish has gender—it is either masculine or feminine.

Generally, words that name male people or animals are masculine, and those that name female people or animals are feminine, but there are exceptions.

Words that name objects, places, events, periods of time, and abstract notions are also either masculine or feminine.

The gender of a noun is indicated by the article that precedes it: el indicates a masculine noun; la indicates a feminine noun.

AVOID THE Blunder

Learn nouns with their articles, as if they were one unit.

Nouns That Name People and Animals

Many nouns end in -o for males and -a for females.

el chico	the boy	el cartero	the male mail carrier
la chica	the girl	la cartera	the female mail carrier
el hermano	the brother	el enfermero	the male nurse
la hermana	the sister	la enfermera	the female nurse
el amigo	the male friend
la amiga	the female friend el esposo	the husband
la esposa	the wife

Both males and females can be named by nouns that end in -e. The article used indicates the gender of the person named, el for a male, la for a female.

el estudiante	the student	el paciente	the patient
la estudiante		la paciente
el gerente	the manager	el ayudante	the assistant
la gerente		la ayudante
el hablante	the speaker	el presidente	the president
la hablante		la presidenta*

La presidenta* is used in some countries but not in others.

There are some exceptions.

el jefe	the male boss
la jefa	the female boss el monje	the monk
la monja	the nun

Both males and females can be named by nouns that end in -ista. The article used indicates the gender of the person named.

el optimista	the optimist la optimista
el protagonista	the main character la protagonista
el especialista	the specialist la especialista
el periodista	the journalist la periodista

Both males and females can be named by several common nouns that end in -o.

el modelo	the model	el soprano	the soprano la modelo		la soprano
el piloto	the pilot	el miembro	the member
la piloto		la miembro
el testigo	the witness	el médico	the doctor
la testigo		la médica*

La médica* is used in some countries but not in others.

Both males and females can be named by nouns that end in -ía.

el policía the male police officer la policía the female police officer

el guía the male guide la guía the female guide

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not change the endings of these nouns to -o or -a in an attempt to make them masculine or feminine. The article is all you need to distinguish them.

✗ la estudiante ✗ el artista ✗ la modelo ✗ el policío

Many nouns that name males end in -or. Their counterparts for females end in -ora.

el profesor	}	the teacher la profesora
el doctor	}	the doctor la doctora
el ganador	}	the winner la ganadora
el perdedor	}	the loser la perdedora
el contador	}	the accountant la contadora
el encantador	}	the charmer la encantadora

An exception is the feminine equivalent of el actor: la actriz.

Certain nouns that name males end in -ín or -ón. The counterparts for females end in -ina or -ona.

el parlanchín	}	the talkative one la parlanchina
el comilón	}	the one who eats a lot la comilona
el dormilón	}	the one who sleeps a lot la dormilona
el gruñón	}	the one who growls a lot la gruñona

A few nouns that name people do not change gender, regardless of the gender of the person they refer to.

la persona

María es una persona muy simpática. María is a very nice person.
 José es una persona muy simpática. José is a very nice person.

la víctima

María es la víctima de una tragedia. María is the victim of a tragedy.
 José es la víctima de una tragedia. José is the victim of a tragedy.

la estrella

Verónica es la estrella que le gusta más a Pablo.
Verónica is the movie star that Pablo likes best.
 Antonio es la estrella que le gusta más a Ana.
Antonio is the movie star that Ana likes best.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not try to change the gender of these nouns.

X el persona X el persono X el víctima
X el víctima X el estrella

When referring to a group of people, if there is at least one male in the group, the masculine plural noun is used.

dos hermanas	two sisters dos hermanas y un hermano /	two sisters and one brother /
tres hermanos	three siblings

Gender of Other Nouns

For all nouns that do not name people, the gender refers to the word, not to the person the object belongs to.

el brazo (the arm)	masculine, whether it is the arm of a male or a female la pierna (the leg)	feminine, whether it is the leg of a male or a female la corbata (the necktie)	feminine, even though it is usually worn by males
el vestido (the dress)	masculine, even though it is usually worn by females

AVOID THE Blunder

~~X~~ la braza

~~X~~ el pierno

~~X~~ el corbata

~~X~~ la vestida

Many nouns that end in -o are masculine. Many nouns that end in -a are feminine.

el carro

the car la casa

the house

el año

the year

la empresa

the enterprise

el ojo

the eye

la pulgada

the inch

Certain nouns that end in -ma are masculine.

el problema

the problem

el programa

the program el sistema

the system

el aroma

the aroma el clima

the climate el síntoma

the symptom el trauma

the trauma

el carisma

the charisma

el drama

the drama

Nevertheless, others are feminine.

la trama

the plot

la crema

the cream

la yema

the egg yolk

AVOID THE Blunder

Check the gender of -ma words that are unfamiliar to you.

~~X~~ “no problemo”

~~X~~ la problema

~~X~~ la sistema

~~X~~ la programa

~~X~~ el crema

Nouns that begin with a stressed a- or ha- may be feminine, but they are preceded by el instead of la for pronunciation purposes. Adjectives and other determiners that refer to these nouns are feminine. (See pages 55–56.)

el agua

the water el águila

the eagle

el hambre

the hunger

el asma

the asthma

el alma

the soul

El agua está fría.

The water is cold.

Tengo mucha hambre.

I'm really hungry. (I have a lot of hunger.)

Te amo con toda el alma.

I love you with all my heart. (I love you with all my soul.)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use la with these words. Do not use masculine adjectives with these words.

- X La agua está fría.
- X El agua está frío.
- X Tengo mucho hambre.

Certain nouns that end in -a are masculine. Certain nouns that end in -o are feminine.

el día	the day	el planeta	the planet el mapa	the map	la mano	the hand
el tranvía	the streetcar

Buenos días. El día está muy bonito.
Ella tiene las manos bonitas.

Good morning. It's a beautiful day.
She has pretty hands.

AVOID THE Blunder

Unless the noun begins with a stressed a- or ha-, use the article, not the noun's ending, as a guide to gender. If the article is el, use masculine adjectives. If the article is la, use feminine adjectives.

- X El día está muy bonita.
- X Ella tiene las manos bonitos.

Certain nouns that end in -o are feminine, and they are really just shortened forms of nouns that end in -a.

la foto	the photograph la fotografía
la moto	the motorcycle la motocicleta

AVOID THE Blunder

- X el foto
- X el moto

All nouns that end in -ción, -sión, or -xión are feminine.

la nación	the nation	la tensión	the tension
la evolución	the evolution	la conexión	the connection

Certain other nouns that end in -ión are feminine.

la unión	the union
la reunión	the meeting
la región	the region

Other nouns that end in -ión are masculine.

el avión	the airplane	el camión	the truck
el guión	the script	el sarampión	the measles

AVOID THE Blunder

If an unfamiliar word ends in -ión (but not -ción, -sión, or -xión), check the gender before using it.

X el nación X el régión X la avión X la sarampión

All nouns that end in -tad, -dad, -tud, or -umbre are feminine.

la libertad	the liberty	la costumbre	the custom
la amistad	the friendship	la cumbre	the summit
la facultad	the university department	la muchedumbre	the crowd
la ciudad	the city
la honestidad	the honesty
la nacionalidad	the nationality
la virtud	the virtue
la gratitud	the gratitude
la actitud	the attitude

All nouns that end in -ie are feminine.

la serie	the series
la superficie	the surface
la planicie	the plain

AVOID THE Blunder

X el ciudad X el universidad
X el muchedumbre X el serie

A number of words change in meaning according to their gender. Here are some of the most common.

MASCULINE	FEMININE
el capital the money	la capital the capital city
el cólera the cholera	la cólera the anger el coma the coma	la coma the comma el cometa the comet	la cometa the kite el corriente the current month	la corriente the current
el corte the cut	la corte the court of law el cura the priest	la cura the cure
el defensa the defensive back in soccer	la defensa the defense

el policía the male police officer	la policía the police force, the female police officer
el recluta the male recruit	la recluta the recruitment, the female recruit

AVOID THE Blunder

Be aware that as the role of women in society is changing, nouns that refer to females are changing—and changing differently in different parts of the Spanish-speaking world. When in doubt about the gender of a noun, check it in a current dictionary.

Plurals

There are several different conventions for making nouns plural.

- Add -s to most nouns that end in a vowel.

casa	house	pie	foot
casas	houses	pies	feet libro	book	papá	father libros	books	papás	parents

ejercicio	exercise	sofá	sofa
ejercicios	exercises	sofás	sofas

- Add -es to a noun ending in stressed -í or -íi.

rubí	ruby	marroquí	Moroccan rubíes	rubies	marroquíes	Moroccans esquí	ski	hindú	Hindu
esquíes	skis	hindúes	Hindus

- Add -es to a noun ending in a consonant.

ladrón	thief	reloj	watch ladrones	thieves	relojes	watches ciudad	city
ciudades	cities

- For nouns ending in -z, change the -z to -c and add -es (see page 11).

lápiz	pencil	cruz	cross lápicos	pencils	cruces	crosses arroz	rice
arroces	rice dishes

When making a noun plural, an accent mark may need to be added or deleted to indicate stress on the same syllable as in the singular form (see pages 14–15).

crimen	crime	ladrón	thief crímenes	crimes	ladrónes	thieves orden	order	reunión	meeting
órdenes	orders	reuniones	meetings

AVOID THE Blunder

Double-check the spelling of plurals you use. Keep in mind that accent marks may need to be added or deleted.

X rubís X esquíes X relojs X lápizes
 X crímenes X ladrónes X reuniones X avíones

A family is referred to by the singular form of its surname.

los Santiago	the Santiagos los Galván	the Galvans
los Valdés	the Valdeses los González	the Gonzalezes
los Pérez	the Perezes

Certain nouns are the same in the singular and the plural.

el lunes	Monday	la crisis	the crisis los lunes	Mondays	las crisis	the crises el martes	Tuesday	el virus	the virus los martes	Tuesdays	los virus	the viruses el miércoles	Wednesday los miércoles	Wednesdays el jueves	Thursday
los jueves	Thursdays el viernes	Friday
los viernes	Fridays

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not try to pluralize these nouns.

✗ los luneses ✗ los virus

Certain nouns are plural in English but singular in Spanish.

la gente	people
la ropa	clothes

La gente es muy simpática. The people are very nice.
 La ropa es cara. Clothes are expensive.

The names of certain school subjects end in -s in English, even though they are singular. They do not end in -s in Spanish.

la política	politics la economía	economics
la física	physics

Mi hermana estudia física. My sister is studying physics.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not pluralize these nouns, and do not use plural adjectives and verbs with them.

✗ Las gentes son amables.
 ✗ Voy a comprar las ropas.

Certain nouns are singular (or noncount) in English but plural in Spanish.

las vacaciones	the vacation
los celos	the jealousy
los aplausos	the applause
las elecciones*	the election

La elección* means “the choice.”

Buenos días.*	Good morning.
Buenas tardes.	Good afternoon.
Buenas noches.	Good evening./Good night.

Buen día* is used in some places.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use these nouns in the singular.

- ✗ Voy a tomar una vacación.
- ✗ La elección es en noviembre.

- ✗ Buena tarde.
- ✗ Buen tarde.
- ✗ Buena noche.
- ✗ Buen noche.

Nouns that are compounds of a verb plus a plural noun are singular, even though they end in -s.

el cumpleaños	the birthday (the completion of years) el lavaplatos	the dishwasher (the washer of dishes)
el abrelatas	the can opener (the opener of cans)
el sacacorchos	the corkscrew (the remover of corks)

el paraguas	the umbrella (the water-stopper)
el parabrisas	the windshield (the wind-stopper)
el parachoques	the bumper (the accident-stopper/breaker)

Their plurals have the same form.

Tengo un paraguas.	I have an umbrella.
Mi amigo tiene dos paraguas.	My friend has two umbrellas.

Hoy es el cumpleaños de mi amigo.

En su familia siempre celebran los cumpleaños de los niños con una fiesta.

Today is my friend's birthday.

In his family they always celebrate the children's birthdays with a party.

AVOID THE

Blunder

Do not add -es to these nouns to make them plural.

X dos paraguases

X los cumpleañoses

Review the numbers in the charts on the previous pages.

The Spanish and English numbering systems are very similar. There are, however, several notable differences.

Writing Numbers

In some countries, the numbers 1 and 7 are handwritten in a slightly different manner in Spanish.

- | | | |
|-------|---|--|
| uno |  | a one with a long tail (can look like a seven) |
| siete |  | a seven with a line through the center |

In many, but not all, Spanish-speaking countries, a period is used to mark the thousands, and a comma is used for the decimal point—exactly the opposite of the English system.

- | | |
|-----------|---|
| 2.763 | two thousand, seven hundred sixty-three |
| 3.892.359 | three million, eight hundred ninety-two thousand, three hundred fifty-nine |
| 4,25 | four point two five |
| 3,75 | three point seven five |

The Spanish equivalent of the English nd and th, as in 2nd or 4th, is ^o when referring to a masculine noun and ^a when referring to a feminine noun. The equivalent of the English st, as in 1st, and rd, as in 3rd, is ^{ero} when referring to a masculine noun and ^{era} when referring to a feminine noun. The ^{ero} is shortened to ^{er} (primer and tercer) before a masculine singular noun.

1 ^{ero}	primero	3 ^{ero}	tercero
1 ^{era}	primera	3 ^{era}	tercera
1 ^{er}	primer	3 ^{er}	tercer
2 ^o	segundo	4 ^o	cuarto
2 ^a	segunda	4 ^a	cuarta

Ones

- Note the spelling of seis and siete.

- | | |
|-------|--|
| seis | “SEH ees” (rhymes with English “face”) |
| siete | “SYE teh” |

Watch the spelling of cuatro.

AVOID THE Blunder

X sies X seite X quattro

- The numbers from dos to cien (“two” to “one hundred”) are never pluralized.

cuatro manzanas four apples

siete alumnos

seven students noventa personas ninety people cien libros

a hundred books

AVOID THE Blunder

X cuatros manzanas

X sietes alumnos

X noventas personas

X cientos libros

- In Spanish there are several ways to indicate “one.”

- The word for “one” is the same as the indefinite article, which has three forms.

un, uno, una one —¿Qué tienes?

“What do you have?”

—Tengo un libro.

“I have a book.”

—¿Cuántos libros tienes?

“How many books do you have?”

—Tengo un libro. / Tengo uno.

“I have one book.” / “I have one.”

—¿Quiere un libro?

“Do you want a book?”

—Hay uno en la mesa.

“There is one on the table.”

—¿Quiere una pluma?

“Do you want a pen?”

—Aquí está una.

Numbers above 20 that contain “one” follow the same pattern.

Tengo veintiún libros.

I have 21 books.

Mi hermano tiene treinta y un libros.

My brother has 31 books.

Hay veinte niños y veintiuna niñas.

There are 20 boys and 21 girls.

Necesitamos cuarenta y una camisetas.

We need 41 T-shirts.

AVOID THE Blunder

Drop the -o from uno before a masculine noun. Use una before a feminine noun. Don’t forget the accent mark above the ú in veintiún.

X uno libro

X un pluma

X veintiuno libros

X treinta y uno libros

X veintiún libros

- Ningún, ninguno, or ninguna* is used to express “not one.”

No veo ningún libro.

I don't see a book.

(I don't see any books.)

No hay ninguno.

There aren't any.

(There isn't a single one.)

No tengo ningún amigo aquí.

I don't have any friends here.

—¿Cuántas personas vinieron?

“How many people came?”

—No vino ninguna.

“Not a single one came.”

AVOID THE Blunder

In English, “zero”—or “not any”—is followed by a plural noun. Do not use a plural with ninguno in Spanish.

X No tengo ningunos libros.

X No hay ningunas personas.

- “Another one,” “one more,” and “a different one” are expressed with otro(-a) in Spanish. Alternatively, uno(-a) más can be used for “one more” and uno(-a) distinto(-a) can be used for “a different one.”

Tengo un libro. Quiero otro.

I have a book. I want another one.

Quiero otro./Quiero uno más.

I want one more.

Quiero otro./Quiero uno distinto.

I want a different one.

Tiene una pluma. Quiere otra.

He has a pen. He wants another one.

Quiere otra./Quiere una más.

He wants one more.

Quiere otra./Quiere una distinta.

He wants a different one.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use un, uno, or una before otro or otra.

X un otro libro

X una otra amiga

In English, numbers are placed before the word “other.” In Spanish, they are placed after otros(-as). (See pages 71–72.)

Tenemos otros dos primos.

We have two other cousins.

Necesitan otras cuatro sillas.

They need four more chairs.

AVOID THE Blunder

X dos otros X cuatro otras

Tens

Watch the numbers once, doce, trece, catorce, and quince.

AVOID THE Blunder

X diez y tres X diez y cuatro X diez y cinco

Note that the numbers from 16 through 29 are expressed as one word. It is no longer common to separate these into three-word expressions.

AVOID THE Blunder

X diez y seis X veinte y nueve

Note that the numbers 16, 22, 23, and 26 require an accent mark on the final syllable.

dieciséis veintidós veintitrés veintiséis

Watch the spelling and pronunciation of veinte. The first syllable is spelled and pronounced like the English word “vein.” Similarly, the vowels in the first syllable of treinta are pronounced (but not spelled) like the vowels in the English word “train.”

AVOID THE Blunder

X viente X trienta

Hundreds

Ciento is shortened to cien when it immediately precedes a noun and when it stands alone.

Hay cien alumnos.

There are a hundred students.

Tenemos cien cajas de libros.

We have a hundred boxes of books.

Hay cien.

There are a hundred.

In English, the number “one” or “a” can precede “hundred.” In Spanish, ciento and cien are never preceded by a form of uno.

Hay cien chicos.

Hay ciento veinte chicas.

There are a/one hundred boys.

There are a/one hundred and twenty girls.

AVOID THE Blunder

X un ciento

X una cien

In spoken English, there is a tendency to insert “and” after the hundreds. In Spanish, there is no y after the hundreds. In Spanish, y (“and”) is used in the tens.

ciento tres

one hundred and three quinientos veinte five hundred and twenty doscientos cuarenta y cuatro two hundred and forty-four

AVOID THE Blunder

X ciento y tres

X quinientos y veinte

X cuarenta cuatro

X treinta dos

Multiple hundreds are always plural and are masculine or feminine to agree with the nouns they modify.

doscientos dólares

two hundred dollars trescientos pesos

three hundred pesos cuatrocienas libras

four hundred pounds

Thousands

In English, the number “one” or “a” can precede “thousand.” In Spanish, mil is preceded by un only in cases of ambiguity.

$1.000 mil dólares

one thousand dollars

$400.000 cuatrocientos mil dólares four hundred thousand dollars

$401.000 cuatrocientos un mil dólares four hundred and one thousand dollars

AVOID THE Blunder

X un mil dólares

In English, years above 1000 are often expressed as multiples of hundreds. In Spanish, mil is used.

- 1867 mil ochocientos sesenta y siete
1959 mil novecientos cincuenta y nueve

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use this format to express 1959.

X diecinueve cincuenta y nueve

Millions, Billions, and Trillions

Millón, billón, and trillón are preceded by un to express “one.” To express more than one, they are pluralized.

un millón	one million dos millones	two million
tres billones	three billion
un trillón	one trillion

When the item being counted is stated, it is preceded by de.

- un millón de dólares one million dollars tres billones de pesos three billion pesos

AVOID THE Blunder

X un millón dólares X tres millones pesos

Using Cardinal Numbers

Comparisons

When a comparison includes a number, “more than” is expressed by más de; “less than” is expressed by menos de.

- Tengo que esperar más de dos horas. I have to wait more than two hours.
Tiene menos de cien pesos. He has less than a hundred pesos.

AVOID THE Blunder

X más que tres X menos que cuatro

Dates

In Spanish, when numbers are used to designate a calendar date, the first number indicates the day, the second number indicates the month, and the third number indicates the year.

3/6/05

June 3, 2005

4/7/76

July 4, 1976

6/10/64

October 6, 1964

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use this format to express November 23, 1974.

X 11/23/74

Do not use this format to express March 6, 2006.

X 3/6/06

Telephone Numbers

Telephone numbers are expressed as a sequence of two-digit numbers in Spanish. When there are three digits in a group, the first number is stated in isolation, and the second two as a two-digit number.

64.98.31 sesenta y cuatro, noventa y ocho, treinta y uno

453-8679 cuatro, cincuenta y tres, ochenta y seis, setenta y nueve

301-220-0290 tres cero uno, dos veinte, cero dos, noventa

Street Addresses

Street addresses typically begin with the name of the street followed by the street number, then the floor and apartment or room number, if applicable.

Calle Villamil, 27 3^{ero}B

27 Villamil Street, Third Floor, Apt. B

AVOID THE Blunder

X 27 Villamil Calle

Telling Time

¿Qué hora es? asks for the current time. Following are some common responses. (See page 58.)

Es la una de la madrugada.

It's one o'clock in the morning./

It's 1 A.M.

Son las diez y cuarto de la mañana.

It's a quarter after ten in the morning./It's 10:15 A.M.

Son las cinco y media de la tarde.

It's 5:30 in the afternoon./

It's 5:30 P.M.

Es mediodía.

It's 12 noon.

Es medianoche.

It's 12 midnight.

AVOID THE Blunder

Use es la with “one o'clock” and son las with other times.

X son la una X es las tres X es cinco

En la mañana, en la tarde, and en la noche are correct when used to refer to parts of the day, when the actual time is not expressed. The abbreviation “A.M.” is expressed with de la mañana and “P.M.” is expressed with de la tarde or de la noche.

AVOID THE Blunder

X Son las diez en la mañana.

X Es la una en la tarde.

X Son las once en la noche.

¿A qué hora es? asks the time of an event. The answer is also expressed with a when a specific time is mentioned.

¿A qué hora es la reunión?

What time is the meeting?

Es en la mañana./Es por la mañana.

It's in the morning.

Es a las once de la mañana.

It's at 11 o'clock in the morning./

It's at 11 A.M.

Es en la tarde./Es por la tarde.

It's in the afternoon. OR

It's in the evening.

Es a las siete y media de la tarde.

It's at 7:30 in the evening./

It's at 7:30 P.M.

Es en la noche./Es por la noche.

It's in the evening. OR It's at night.

Es a las diez de la noche.

It's at 10 o'clock at night./

It's at 10 P.M.

AVOID THE Blunder

A—not es or son—must be used when telling the time of an event.

- ~~X~~ La reunión es la una.
- ~~X~~ La clase es son las once.

Using Ordinal Numbers

Review the ordinal numbers in the chart on pages 39–40.

Two ordinal numbers, primero and tercero, are shortened to primer and tercer when used before masculine singular nouns.

el primer presidente	the first president el tercer piso	the third floor

AVOID THE Blunder

- ~~X~~ el primero año
- ~~X~~ el tercero hombre

All ordinal numbers change the final -o to -a before a feminine noun.

la primera presidente	the first president la tercera calle	the third street
la quinta milla	the fifth mile

Primero and primera can be used in the plural.

los primeros días de enero	the first days in January
las primeras llamadas del día	the first calls of the day

Although there are ordinals in Spanish for “eleventh” and above, cardinal numbers are usually used for ordinals higher than décimo.

Está en el piso once.	It's on the eleventh floor.
Vamos a la Calle Cincuenta y cuatro.	Let's go to Fifty-fourth Street.

In spoken language, the names of kings and popes are expressed without the article el.

Carlos V	Carlos quinto	Carlos the Fifth
Alfonso XII	Alfonso doce	Alfonso the Twelfth
Juan XXIII	Juan veintitrés	John the Twenty-third

AVOID THE Blunder

X Carlos el quinto X Alfonso el doce

When giving dates, the “first” of the month is expressed with primero. All other days are expressed with the cardinal number.

el primero de enero	January 1 el dos de febrero	February 2 el dieciséis de septiembre	September 16 el veintiocho de diciembre	December 28

AVOID THE Blunder

X el tercero de marzo X el cuarto de julio

Using Fractions

“One-half” is expressed by using medio(-a) followed by a noun of quantity.

Déme medio kilo de mantequilla.	Give me a half-kilo of butter./ Give me half a kilo of butter.
He traído media docena de huevos.	I brought a half-dozen eggs./ I brought half a dozen eggs.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use un, uno, una before medio + noun.

X un medio kilo X una media docena

“One and a half” is expressed by naming the noun of quantity followed by y medio(-a).

Esperamos hora y media.	We waited an hour and a half.
Ella compró kilo y medio de harina.	She bought a kilo and a half of flour.
Tomé taza y media de café.	I drank a cup and a half of coffee.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use un, uno, una before a quantity noun if a fraction follows.

X una taza y media X una hora y media

“Half of” a commodity can be expressed by la media parte de or la mitad de.

Pablo vendió la media parte de sus tierras. Pablo sold half of his land.

Ella le robó la mitad de sus bienes. She robbed him of half of his assets.

AVOID THE Blunder

Be sure to use la and de with these expressions.

X media parte sus tierras X una mitad sus bienes

A whole number plus a half is always separated by a noun of quantity.

Esperamos dos horas y media. We waited two and a half hours.
He perdido tres kilos y medio. I've lost three and a half kilos.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not put y medio or y media before the noun.

X dos y media horas X tres y medio kilos

When the top number of a fraction is “one,” use la + the ordinal number + parte de.

la tercera parte de	one-third of la cuarta parte de	one-fourth of/a quarter of
la séptima parte de	one-seventh of
la décima parte de	one-tenth of

AVOID THE Blunder

X una tercera de X una cuarta de

Review the forms in the charts on the previous pages.

Noun determiners help identify nouns and are usually placed before the noun, with a few exceptions.

Definite Articles

The definite article—masculine singular el, feminine singular la, masculine plural los, feminine plural las—like English “the,” refers to a particular noun.

The definite article may refer to the only noun possible or simply to one that both the speaker and hearer have mutual knowledge of.

el hijo de Juan	Juan's son la cocina	the (only) kitchen (in this house or restaurant)
los hijos de Juan	Juan's children
las llaves de mi casa	the keys to my house

- Purely for pronunciation purposes, feminine singular nouns that begin with a stressed a- or ha- are preceded by el instead of la (see page 29).

el agua	the water el águila	the eagle
el área	the area
el alma	the soul
el hambre	the hunger

El does not replace la in the following situations, however:

- If another determiner or an adjective separates the definite article from the noun.

Es la primera águila que vemos.	It's the first eagle we've seen.
La otra área es más bonita.	The other area is prettier.

- If the el or la distinguishes whether the person referred to is male or female.

el árabe	the Arab (male) la árabe	the Arab (female)

- If the noun and definite article are plural.

las aguas	the waters
las águilas	the eagles
las áreas	the areas
las almas	the souls

All other determiners and adjectives that relate to these nouns are feminine.

el agua pura	the clean water el águila bella	the beautiful eagle el área seca	the dry area
poca agua	very little water
muchas hambres	a lot of hunger

AVOID THE Blunder

X la área X todo el área X este área
 X los almas X mucho hambre

- When el is preceded by the preposition a, it must be contracted to al. When preceded by de, it must be contracted to del. This does not apply to El when it is part of a proper name.

Vamos al mercado. We're going to the market.
 Vamos a El Salvador. We're going to El Salvador.

Soy del sur del país. I'm from the south of the country.
 Soy del sur de El Salvador. I'm from the south of El Salvador.

AVOID THE Blunder

X a el país X de el hermano

- In Spanish, as in English, no article is used before a title when addressing someone.

Buenos días, Sr. Ochoa. Good morning, Mr. Ochoa.
 Hola, Sra. Rodríguez. Hello, Mrs. Rodríguez.
 Hasta luego, Srt. Díaz. See you later, Miss Díaz.

In Spanish, a definite article is required before a title such as señor, señora, señorita, doctor, doctora, or ingeniero when speaking about someone, even though no article would be used in English.

El señor Ochoa me llamó anoche.	Mr. Ochoa called me last night.
Quiero presentarte a la señora Rodríguez.	I want to introduce you to Mrs. Rodríguez.
Voy a visitar a la señorita Díaz cuando vaya a Chile.	I'm going to visit Miss Díaz when I go to Chile.
Conocimos al doctor Páez el viernes pasado.	We met Dr. Páez last Friday.

AVOID THE Blunder

X Hola, la señorita López.

X Sr. Ochoa me llamó.

Do not forget the “personal a” before a direct object that is a person. When it immediately precedes the article el, the two words are contracted to al.

X Conocimos doctor Páez.

X Conocimos el doctor Páez.

No article is used when referring to people with the titles don, doña, fray, sor, monseñor, San, Santa, or Santo.

Anoche hablé con don Pablo.

Quiero presentarte a fray Luis.

Last night I talked to don Pablo.

I want to introduce you to Brother Luis.

- The article el is used before the name of a day to indicate action occurring on that day.

Te veo el lunes.

El martes vamos a la playa.

I'll see you on Monday.

On Tuesday we're going to the beach.

Se fue el miércoles.

No tenemos clase el jueves.

She left on Wednesday.

We don't have class on Thursday.

AVOID THE Blunder

X en lunes

X en el martes

The article los is used before the name of a day to indicate action that occurs regularly on that day of the week.

Tenemos clase los lunes.

Hay partidos de fútbol los domingos.

Se divierten los fines de semana.

We have class on Mondays.

There are soccer games on Sundays.

They have fun on weekends.

AVOID THE Blunder

X en lunes

X en los lunes

X en los fines de semanas

In telling time, the article la is used to express one o'clock and las is used to express the other hours. No article is used to express noon and midnight. (See page 48.)

Es la una.	It's one o'clock.
Son las diez.	It's 10 o'clock.
Nos vamos a las ocho.	We're leaving at eight.
La fiesta terminó a medianoche.	The party ended at midnight.
Ellos comen a mediodía.	They eat at noon.

In Spanish the definite article is required before the names of seasons.

No hay clases en el verano.	There are no classes in (the) summer.
Esquían en el invierno.	They go skiing in (the) winter.
La primavera es una temporada hermosa.	Spring is a beautiful season.

AVOID THE Blunder

X en verano X en otoño X Me encanta primavera.

- Definite article usage varies to express movement to, movement from, and presence at certain familiar places.

As in English, no article is used to express movement to, movement from, or presence at one's own home.

Voy a casa.	I'm going home.
Salgo de casa a las ocho.	I leave home at eight.
Estamos en casa.	We're at home.

As in English, no article is used to express movement to or from a church service or class session.

Voy a misa.	I'm going to mass.
Salimos de misa a las once.	We get out of mass at eleven.
¿Van Uds. a clase?	Are you all going to class?
Salgo de clase a las cuatro.	I get out of class at four.

In Spanish, an article is used to express movement to certain common destinations, as well as presence at certain locations. English typically does not use an article in these cases.

Voy a la ciudad/a la iglesia/ a la escuela.	I'm going to town/to church/ to school.
Está en la ciudad/en la iglesia/ en la escuela/en el trabajo.	He's in town/at church/ at school/at work.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Voy a ciudad.
- ✗ Va a iglesia.
- ✗ Está en escuela.

■ In Spanish, an article is used to indicate “in care of”: al cuidado de.

Te mandé un paquete al cuidado del Sr. Alberto Sánchez. I sent you a package in care of Mr. Alberto Sánchez.

■ In Spanish, a definite article is used to refer to parts of the body and articles of clothing.

Me lavo las manos.	I wash my hands.
Se lava los dientes.	She brushes her teeth.
Se quitó el sombrero.	He took off his hat.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Lavo mis manos.
- ✗ Lava sus dientes.
- ✗ Se quitó su sombrero.

In Spanish, when referring to one item that pertains to more than one person, the singular noun is used and means “one each.” As in English, when more than one item is referred to, the plural noun is used.

Los chicos se quitaron el sombrero. *The boys took off their hats.
(one each)*

Los chicos se quitaron los zapatos. The boys took off their shoes.

AVOID THE Blunder

Use the singular noun, unless you mean each one took off more than one hat.

✗ Los chicos se quitaron los sombreros.

Use the plural noun, unless you mean each one took off only one shoe.

✗ Los chicos se quitaron el zapato.

- In Spanish, a definite article is used to indicate price per quantity. English uses “a” or “per.”

50 centavos la docena
30 pesos el kilo
20 euros el metro

*50 cents a dozen
30 pesos a kilo
20 euros a meter*

AVOID THE Blunder

X 50 centavos una docena X 30 pesos un kilo

- In Spanish, the names of languages are generally preceded by a definite article. English does not use a definite article before names of languages.

El español es el idioma más hablado en la América del Sur.

Spanish is the most commonly spoken language in South America.

El español y el francés son los idiomas que se enseñan en este colegio.

*Spanish and French are the

AVOID THE Blunder

X Español es difícil.

X Español y francés son los idiomas que se enseñan.

X Van a traducirlo de español a inglés.

X la gramática de inglés

The Spanish article is generally not used when en or a form of hablar precedes the name of the language.

El artículo está escrito en chino.
Mi hijo habla español.

*The article is written in Chinese.
My son speaks Spanish.*

AVOID THE Blunder

X Hablamos el español.

X Está escrito en el chino.

- As in English, nouns that represent some but not all of the members of a class are not preceded by an article in Spanish.

Comemos enchiladas.	We eat enchiladas.
Tiene flores en el balcón.	She has flowers on the balcony.
Hay enchiladas hoy.	There are enchiladas today.
Había flores de toda clase.	There were all kinds of flowers.

- Spanish nouns used in a general sense to represent all members of a class are preceded by a definite article. English does not use an article.

El pollo es rico.	Chicken (all chicken) is delicious.
El pollo me gusta.	I like chicken. (Chicken appeals to me.)
Las enchiladas son ricas.	Enchiladas (all enchiladas) are delicious.
El ruido es un estorbo.	Noise (in general) is a disturbance.
Las flores son caras.	Flowers (in general) are expensive.
Las novelas me fascinan.	Novels (all novels) fascinate me.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not eliminate the article before the subject.

X Pollo es rico.	X Me gusta pollo.
X Flores son caras.	X Me fascinan novelas.

- Spanish nouns that name abstract notions are generally preceded by a definite article. English usually does not use an article.

La contaminación del agua es un problema muy grande.	Water pollution is a big problem.
La salud es más importante que la riqueza.	Health is more important than wealth.

AVOID THE Blunder

X Contaminación es un problema.
X Salud es importante.

- Definite articles are sometimes used with proper nouns.

El or la before a first name can have a derogatory connotation unless there is a descriptive adjective between the article and the noun.

Viene con la Anita.	He's coming with that Anita.
Viene con la adorable Anita.	He's coming with adorable Anita.

El can be part of a proper name, as in El Salvador, where it is always capitalized. The names of certain other countries, cities, and places are traditionally preceded by a lowercase definite article. This usage varies, so these must be learned individually. Following are some common examples.

la Argentina	la Habana
el Ecuador	el Perú
los Estados Unidos	El Morro

When the name of a place is modified by an adjective or phrase, it is preceded by a definite article.

la España del siglo XVI	16th-century Spain la bella Madrid	splendid Madrid

In an appositive phrase that is placed next to a noun and defines it, no article is used in Spanish.

Washington, ciudad capital de los EE.UU.	Washington, the capital of the United States
Miguel Alonso, director del colegio	Miguel Alonso, the school principal

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Washington, la ciudad capital de los EE.UU.
- ✗ Miguel Alonso, el director del colegio

As in English, in an appositive phrase that expresses a superlative or simply gives information about the noun, an article is used in Spanish.

Washington, la ciudad más grande del área	Washington, the largest city in the area
Miguel Alonso, el director que asistió a la conferencia	Miguel Alonso, the director who attended the meeting

Names of bodies of water and mountains are preceded by a definite article.

el Río Grande*	the Rio Grande	los Andes	the Andes el Guadalquivir	the Guadalquivir	los Pirineos	the Pyrenees
el Misisipi	the Mississippi	los Alpes	the Alps

* The river at the border of the United States and Mexico is called “the Rio Grande” north of the border and el Río Bravo south of the border.

- Names of the points of the compass are preceded by a definite article.

el norte	north	al norte de	north of el sur	south	al sur de	south of el este	east	en el norte de	in the north of
el oeste	west	hacia el este	toward the east

AVOID THE Blunder

X Oregón es norte de California.

X Florida es sur de Georgia.

- The article is omitted in certain expressions with prepositions.

con objeto de	for the purpose of con motivo de	for the purpose of
a orillas de	on the banks of
en nombre de	in the name of

Indefinite Articles

The indefinite article—masculine singular un, feminine singular una, masculine plural unos, and feminine plural unas—like English “a,” “an,” and “some,” refers to an unspecified example of a noun.

Tengo un libro.

I have a book.

Buscamos unas revistas.

We're looking for some magazines.

- The indefinite article is not used when expressing nationality or professional, religious, or other affiliation in Spanish. English often uses the indefinite article in such cases.

Miguel es ecuatoriano.

Miguel is an Ecuadorean./

Miguel is Ecuadorean.

Sara es médico.

Sara is a doctor.

Humberto es católico.

Humberto is a Catholic./

Humberto is Catholic.

However, as in English, when an adjective is added to further describe the person as a member of that category, an indefinite article is used in Spanish.

Miguel es un ecuatoriano famoso.

Miguel is a famous Ecuadorean.

Sara es una médica comprensiva.

Sara is an understanding doctor.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Soy un profesor.
- ✗ Es una mexicana.
- ✗ Es médico bueno.

- The indefinite article may be omitted before gran, buen, buena, mal, or mala when showing a certain “affiliation” with a type.

Es muy buena amiga.	She's a good friend.
Es buen católico.	He's a good Catholic.
Es mala persona.	He's a bad person.

- The indefinite article is not used before otro, cierto, medio(-a), cien, and mil, or after ¡Qué!.

Quiero otro libro.	I want another book.
Noto cierto aire de indiferencia.	I note a certain air of indifference.
Quiero medio kilo de azúcar.	I want a half kilo of sugar.
No tenemos mil dólares, sino cien.	We don't have a thousand dollars; we have a hundred.
¡Qué bella vista!	What a beautiful view!
¡Qué chica más inteligente!	What a smart girl!

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ un otro libro
- ✗ un medio kilo
- ✗ un mil dólares
- ✗ ¡Qué una bella vista!
- ✗ ¡Qué una chica inteligente!

- When the indefinite article is omitted after the verb tener, a general, rather than specific, meaning is implied.

Mi amigo tiene un coche.	My friend has a car.
Mi amigo tiene coche.	My friend has his own transportation.
Ella tiene un novio guapo.	She has a cute boyfriend.
Ella tiene novio.	She is unavailable.
Tengo un trabajo interesante.	I have an interesting job.
Tengo trabajo.	I am employed.

No article is used after tener in the following expressions of a condition. English generally uses the indefinite article in such cases.

Tiene fiebre.

She has a fever.

Tiene resfriado.

He has a cold.

Tengo tos.

I have a cough.

Nevertheless, when an adjective describes the noun, the indefinite article is used.

Tiene una tos terrible.

She has a terrible cough.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Tiene una fiebre.

✗ Tengo una tos.

✗ Tiene resfriado terrible.

- The indefinite article is not used when expressing what one doesn't have.

No tengo coche.

I don't have a car.

No tenemos visita.

We don't have a visitor/any visitors.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ No tengo un coche.

✗ No tenemos una visita.

✗ No tenemos visitas.

- The indefinite article is generally not used after sin.

Lo hace sin problema.

She does it without a problem/without any problems.

Viaja sin maleta.

He travels without a suitcase.

Asistió al concierto sin boleto.

He attended the concert without a ticket.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ sin un problema

✗ sin una maleta

✗ sin un boleto

- The indefinite article is generally not used when indicating purpose after por or como.

Tiene por mesa una caja de cartón.

Usa su abrigo como manta.

He has a cardboard box for a table.

She uses her coat as a blanket.

AVOID THE Blunder

X por una mesa

X como una manta

- The indefinite article is generally not used as the first word in the title of a book or article in Spanish.

Comparación de estilos

Nuevo método para leer rápido

Acercamiento al aprendizaje de lenguas

A Comparison of Styles

A New Method for Speed Reading

An Approach to Language Learning

AVOID THE Blunder

X Una comparación de estilos

X Un nuevo método para leer rápido

X Un acercamiento al aprendizaje de lenguas

- The omission of an article can indicate a slight change in meaning.

Es la verdad.

It's the truth.

Es verdad.

It's true.

Es una mentira.

It's a lie.

Es mentira.

It's not true.

- A plural indefinite article—unos or unas—can indicate an approximation.

Están esperando unas veinte personas.

About 20 people are waiting.

Tengo que leer unas cincuenta páginas.

I have to read about 50 pages.

Demonstratives

Demonstratives indicate specific nouns in relationship to their distance from the speaker. Demonstratives also serve as pronouns when it is unnecessary to state the noun. Use of an accent mark above the first vowel of a demonstrative pronoun is now optional.

- Este(-a/-os/-as) is used to indicate something that is so close that the speaker can touch it.

Este libro es interesante.

Éste/Este es interesante.

Esta novela es larga.

Ésta/Esta es larga.

Estos exámenes están corregidos.

Éstos/Estos están corregidos.

Estas respuestas no son correctas.

Éstas/Estas no son correctas.

This book is interesting.

This one is interesting.

This novel is long.

This one is long.

These exams are corrected.

These are corrected.

These answers are not correct.

These are not correct.

When the demonstrative is placed after the noun, it has a negative connotation.

La niña esta me está fastidiando.

This pesky little girl is annoying me.

The demonstrative can also refer to time.

esta mañana this morning

esta noche tonight

esta semana this week

este año this year

estos días these days

- Ese(-a/-os/-as) indicates something that is farther away from the speaker, perhaps close to the person being spoken to.

Ese libro es aburrido.

Ése/Ese es aburrido.

Esa novela es corta.

Ésa/Esa es corta.

Esos exámenes no están corregidos.

Ésos/Esos no están corregidos.

Esas respuestas son correctas.

Ésas/Esas son correctas.

That book is boring.

That one is boring.

That novel is short.

That one is short.

Those exams aren't corrected.

Those aren't corrected.

Those answers are correct.

Those are correct.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the pronouns esto and eso before nouns.

X esto año

X eso beso

When the demonstrative is placed after the noun, it has a negative connotation.

El chico ese vive cerca de mi casa.

That annoying kid lives near my house.

The demonstrative can also refer to time.

esa mañana	that morning
esa tarde	that afternoon esa noche	that night
ese día	that day

- Aquel/aquella/aquellos/aquellas refers to something farther away, not close to either the speaker or the person being spoken to.

Aquel libro es carísimo.

That book over there is really expensive.

Aquella novela no es cara.

That novel over there isn't expensive.

Aquellos exámenes no son míos.

Those exams over there aren't mine.

Aquellas respuestas son interesantes.

Those answers over there are interesting.

The demonstrative can also refer to a distant time.

aquel día	that day aquella semana	that week
aquella primavera	that spring
aquellos años	those years

AVOID THE Blunder

Always put the demonstrative before the noun unless you want to indicate a negative connotation.

✗ la mujer esa

✗ el profesor aquel

✗ los hombres aquellos

Possessives

The possessives, mi(s), tu(s), su(s), nuestro(-a/-os/-as), and vuestro(-a/-os/-as) identify the possessor or owner of something. In Spanish, they are not used with parts of the body. (See page 59.)

mi libro	my book mis libros	my books mi casa	my house
mis casas	my houses

tu libro	your book
tus libros	your books tu casa	your house
tus casas	your houses su libro	your book, his book, her book, their book, your (pl.) book
sus libros	your books, his books, her books, their books, your (pl.) books su casa	your house, his house, her house, their house, your (pl.) house
sus casas	your houses, his houses, her houses, their houses, your (pl.) houses nuestro libro	our book nuestros libros	our books nuestra casa	our house
nuestras casas	our houses
vuestro libro	your (pl.) book vuestros libros	your (pl.) books vuestra casa	your (pl.) house
vuestras casas	your (pl.) houses

AVOID THE Blunder

X nuestros libro X sus casa
 X mi libros X nuestras casa

- Remember that su(s) can mean “your,” “his,” “her,” and “their.” An -s at the end means that the things possessed are plural.

To distinguish between “your,” “his,” “her,” and “their,” a phrase with de may be used.

su coche	}	your car el coche de usted
sus coches	}	your cars los coches de usted
el coche de él	}	bis car los coches de él
el coche de ella	}	ber car los coches de ella

el coche de ustedes	your (pl.) car
los coches de ustedes	your (pl.) cars
el coche de ellos/ellas	their car
los coches de ellos/ellas	their cars

■ The possessive adjectives mío, tuyo, and suyo follow the verb ser, an article, or a noun, and agree with the noun (or pronoun) in number and gender.

Este coche es mío. El suyo está allí.

This car is mine. Yours is over there.

¿Es tuya esta chaqueta? No puedo encontrar la mía.

Is this jacket yours? I can't find mine.

Esos paquetes son suyos.

Those packages are theirs.

Los nuestros están aquí.

Ours are here.

Las flores son nuestras. No sé dónde están las suyas.

The flowers are ours. I don't know where hers are.

AVOID THE Blunder

Suyo(-a/-os/-as) can mean “yours,” “his,” “hers,” and “theirs.” Be sure the ending agrees in number and gender with the item that is possessed.

✗ Los coches son mío.

✗ La chaqueta es suyos.

✗ Esos paquetes son suyo.

“Yours” (with usted and ustedes), “his,” “hers,” and “theirs” can also be expressed with a phrase using de.

El coche es de usted.

The car is yours.

El coche es de él.

The car is his.

El coche es de ella.

The car is hers.

Los coches son de ustedes.

The cars are yours (pl.).

Los coches son de ellos.

The cars are theirs.

Los coches son de ellas.

The cars are theirs.

“Mine” and “yours” (for tú) are not expressed with a phrase.

El coche es mío.

The car is mine.

El coche es tuyo.

The car is yours.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ El coche es de mí.

✗ El coche es de ti.

Other Determiners

algún

Algún/alguna(-os/-as) refers to particular, but unidentified, nouns.

Algún día será feliz.	One day/Some day he'll be happy.

Gana poco dinero. *He earns very little money.
 Tenemos poca agua en el campo. We have very little water in the country.*

Hay pocos alumnos en esa escuela. There are few students at that school.

Hay pocas cosas que hacer allí. There are very few things to do there.

Do not confuse poco with un poco. Poco emphasizes a lack; un poco means “some.”

Gana poco dinero. *He earns very little money.
 Gana un poco de dinero. He earns a little money.*

Hay poca contaminación. *There is very little pollution.
 Hay un poco de contaminación. There is some pollution.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use de with poco. Do not leave it out after un poco.

X Gana poco de dinero.
X Hay un poco contaminación.

mucho

Mucho(-a/-os/-as) indicates a large number or amount of something.

There is a lot of noise in the street.

I'm very hungry. (I have a lot of hunger.)

He reads a lot of books in summer.

I'm looking forward to seeing you.

(I have a lot of wishes to see you.)

Many expressions with tener and hacer indicate a state or condition that is expressed with “be” in English. In English, these are enhanced by “very.” In Spanish they are enhanced by mucho(-a). (See page 311.)

Tengo mucho miedo/frío/calor/suerte.

Tengo mucha hambre/sed.

Hace mucho frío/calor/viento.

I am very afraid/cold/hot/lucky.

I am very hungry/thirsty.

It's very cold/hot/windy.

AVOID THE Blunder

las puede pagar.

There is so much work that I don't know where to start.

She was so thirsty she almost died.

He has so many problems that he can't go on.

She has so many debts that she can't pay them.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ tan mucho

✗ tan muchos

todo

The entirety of something is expressed by todo el, toda la, todos los, or todas las plus the noun.

Voy a trabajar todo el día.

I'm going to work all day.

Toda la clase está aquí.

The whole class is here.

Trabajo todos los días.

I work every day.

Todas las chicas están aquí.

All the girls are here.

Another way to emphasize the whole of a singular noun is by placing entero(-a) after it.

Voy a trabajar el día entero.

I'm going to work the whole day.

La clase entera está aquí.

The entire class is here.

“Everybody” can be expressed three ways, using todo el mundo, todos, or el mundo entero.

Todo el mundo va a la fiesta.

Todos van a la fiesta.

Everybody is going to the party.

Lo van a saber todos.

Lo va a saber el mundo entero.

Everybody is going to find out about it.

AVOID THE Blunder

Use a singular verb with todo el mundo and el mundo entero. Use a plural verb with todos.

✗ Todo el mundo van a la fiesta.

✗ Lo van a saber el mundo entero.

✗ Todos va a la fiesta.

Another way to emphasize the totality of the members of a category is todo(-a) plus a singular noun.

Todo trabajador merece un descanso.

Every worker deserves a break.

Toda niña necesita una muñeca.

Every little girl needs a doll.

Todo un or toda una plus a noun emphasizes the achievement of becoming the embodiment of the noun.

Su hijo es todo un hombre.

Your son is all grown up (a complete man).

Ella es toda una mujer.

She's all grown up (a complete woman).

Ya es toda una estrella de cine.

Now he/she is a real movie star (in every sense of the word).

cada

Cada is used to indicate all the items, emphasizing one at a time. It can be used before uno and una.

Cada alumno recibió su diploma.	Each student received his diploma.
Cada uno recibió su diploma.	Each one received his diploma.
BUT
Todos los alumnos recibieron su diploma.	All the students received their diplomas.
Cada madre recogió a sus niños.	Each mother picked up her children.
Cada una recogió a sus niños.	Each one picked up her children.
BUT
Todas las madres recogieron a sus niños.	All the mothers picked up their children.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use cada for “all” unless you want to emphasize the individuality of each member.

ambos

Ambos(-as) is used to indicate the same, but separate, state or action of two people, animals, or things. Los dos and las dos are used to indicate either joint or separate states or actions.

Ambos chicos fueron a casa.	Each boy went home./Both boys went home (separately).
Los dos chicos fueron a casa.	Both boys went home (separately or together).
Los dos chicos fueron a casa juntos.	Both boys went home (together)./The two boys went home together.
Vine a visitar a los dos.	I came to visit both of you (together).

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use ambos(-as) unless you want to indicate separate circumstances. To emphasize joint action, use los dos or las dos and add juntos(-as).

X Vine a visitar a ambos de ustedes.

los demás

Los demás or las demás refers to “the rest” or “the others.”

Miguel, Juan y los demás chicos ya se fueron.

Ana y las demás chicas se quedaron.

Miguel, Juan, and all the other boys left.

Ana and the rest of the girls stayed.

sólo, solamente, ni un solo

Sólo and solamente emphasize the small number or small amount of something.

Sólo tres coches estaban en el garaje.

Me compró solamente una camiseta.

Only three cars were in the garage.

She only bought me a T-shirt.

A negative statement with the determiner un solo or una sola indicates a total lack.

No me dio un solo centavo.

No tengo ni una sola amiga aquí.

He didn't give me a red cent.

I don't have even one friend here.

único

A definite article plus único(-a/-os/-as) indicates the only one of something.

Es el único lápiz que tengo.

Review the forms in the chart above.

Forms

In Spanish, descriptive adjectives generally are placed after the nouns they describe, and their endings change to agree with them in gender and number.

- Many adjectives end in -o to describe masculine nouns and -a to describe feminine nouns. Their plurals end in -os and -as, respectively.

el hombre alto	the tall man la mujer alta	the tall woman
el edificio alto	the tall building
la casa pequeña	the small house
los hombres altos	the tall men
las mujeres altas	the tall women
los edificios altos	the tall buildings
las casas pequeñas	the small houses

AVOID THE Blunder

Be sure you know the gender of the noun, and make its adjectives match in gender and number.

A number of adjectives end in -e to describe both masculine and feminine nouns. Their plurals end in -es.

el muchacho inteligente	the smart boy la muchacha inteligente	the smart girl
los muchachos inteligentes	the smart boys
las muchachas inteligentes	the smart girls

A number of adjectives end in -ista to describe both masculine and feminine nouns. Their plurals end in -istas.

el hombre optimista	the optimistic man la mujer optimista	the optimistic woman
los hombres optimistas	the optimistic men
las mujeres optimistas	the optimistic women

A number of adjectives end in -or to describe masculine nouns. Their feminine counterparts end in -ora. Their plurals end in -ores and -oras, respectively.

el chico encantador	the charming boy la chica encantadora	the charming girl
los chicos encantadores	the charming boys
las chicas encantadoras	the charming girls

Adjectives that end in -in and -ón describe masculine nouns. Their feminine counterparts end in -ina and -ona (without accent marks), respectively.

Adjectives that end in other consonants have the same form to describe masculine and feminine nouns. Their plurals end in -es. (Note that a final -z changes to -c- in the plural. See pages 11 and 33.)

el lápiz azul	the blue pencil la mujer joven	the young woman
la niña feliz	the happy girl
los lápices azules	the blue pencils
las mujeres jóvenes	the young women
las niñas felices	the happy girls

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not assume that all masculine adjectives end in -o and all feminine adjectives end in -a.

- ~~X~~ inteligenta
- ~~X~~ optimista
- ~~X~~ encantadoro

- When two adjectives describe a noun, they are connected by y.

la rosa roja y bonita	the pretty red rose
el estudiante listo y enérgico	the smart, energetic student

AVOID THE Blunder

- ~~X~~ la bonita roja rosa
- ~~X~~ el enérgico, inteligente estudiante

When one adjective describes two nouns, the adjective is plural.

el coche y el camión nuevos	the new car and truck la falda y la blusa caras	the expensive skirt and blouse
la casa y el jardín hermosos	the beautiful house and garden

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a singular adjective to describe more than one noun.

- ~~X~~ la casa y el jardín hermoso
- ~~X~~ la falda y el vestido caro

When two adjectives describe all components of a plural noun, both adjectives are plural.

las flores rojas y bonitas	(both/all) the beautiful red flowers
los estudiantes listos y enérgicos	(both/all) the smart, energetic students

When two separate items are described by two different adjectives, both adjectives are singular.

las rosas roja y amarilla	both the red rose and the yellow one
los coches blanco y azul	both the white car and the blue one

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a plural adjective to describe one component of a plural noun.

Use singular adjectives to express one red rose and one yellow one.

X las rosas rojas y amarillas

Use singular adjectives to express one white car and one blue one.

X los coches blancos y azules

- While English nouns can function like adjectives when placed before other nouns, Spanish nouns must be preceded by a preposition in order to modify another noun.

un libro de español	a Spanish book* una mesa de vidrio	a glass table una bolsa de papel	a paper bag una casa de adobe	an adobe house

Un libro de español* is a book for learning Spanish. Un libro español is a book written, manufactured, or published in Spain.

AVOID THE Blunder

X una mesa vidrio

X una bolsa papel

X una casa adobe

Adjective Position

The placement of descriptive adjectives varies in Spanish.

- An adjective generally follows the noun it describes.

Adjectives of nationality and religion, as well as adjectives that classify a noun as part of a specific group, always follow the noun.

una mujer norteamericana	a North American woman un hombre judío	a Jewish man la cocina mexicana	Mexican cuisine una casa de estilo colonial	a colonial-style house

AVOID THE Blunder

- ~~X~~ un judío hombre
- ~~X~~ la mexicana cocina

Adjectives that describe a physical quality and distinguish the noun from others of its kind generally follow the noun.

el lápiz amarillo	the yellow pencil la casa grande	the big house el coche viejo	the old car el pelo rizado	the curly hair el muchacho guapo	the cute boy
la chica lista	the smart girl

AVOID THE Blunder

- ~~X~~ el amarillo lápiz
- ~~X~~ el rizado pelo

■ When a descriptive adjective precedes a noun, it indicates that the quality is already known or inseparable from the noun. Compare the following examples.

las bonitas flores	the beautiful flowers (all of which are beautiful)
las flores bonitas	the beautiful flowers (only the beautiful ones)
las caras tiendas del barrio	the expensive neighborhood stores (all of which are expensive)
las tiendas caras del barrio	the expensive neighborhood stores (only the expensive ones)
mi nuevo novio	my new boyfriend (whom you know about)
mi novio nuevo	my new boyfriend (not my old one)

The adjectives bueno and malo are shortened when they immediately precede masculine singular nouns.

la buena muchacha	the good girl (who is known to be good) el buen muchacho	the good boy (who is known to be good)
la mala mujer	the bad woman (who is known to be bad)
el mal hombre	the bad man (who is known to be bad)

The adjective grande is shortened before both masculine and feminine nouns, and it has a different meaning when placed before the noun. Compare the following examples.

la mujer grande	the big woman la gran mujer	the great woman el hombre grande	the big man el gran hombre	the great man
la ciudad grande	the big city
la gran ciudad	the great city

The adjectives listed below also have slightly different meanings depending on whether they are placed before or after the noun. Compare the following examples.

la antigua capital	the former capital city la capital antigua	the very old capital city
la tela de baja calidad	the cloth of low quality
la chica baja	the short girl
las dichosas llamadas	the annoying calls
las chicas dichosas	the lucky girls diferentes maneras	various ways
maneras diferentes	different ways
distintos hombres	various men
hombres distintos	different men
el pobre muchacho	the unfortunate boy el muchacho pobre	the poor boy el raro pájaro	the rare bird el pájaro raro	the strange bird
un simple error	a mere error una casa simple	a modest house mi viejo amigo	my long-time friend mi amigo viejo	my friend who's old

AVOID THE Blunder

Make sure you don't call your best friend old!

Usage

Descriptive adjectives can be used in different ways in a sentence.

- In English, “the” plus an adjective plus “one(s)” distinguishes one or more persons or things from the others in a group. In Spanish, “one(s)” is not expressed.

la roja the red one el grande the big one los pequeños the small ones

 las últimas the last ones

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ la roja una ✗ el grande uno
 ✗ los pequeños unos ✗ las últimas unas

Plural adjectives preceded by a definite article can be used as nouns that refer to an entire class.

los ricos the rich (ones)
 los orgullosos the proud (ones)
 los famosos the famous (ones)
 los ridículos the ridiculous (ones)

- An adjective can be used as the subject of a sentence by placing lo before it. (See pages 226–227.)

Lo bueno es que ella está contenta.	The good thing (about it) is that she is happy.
Lo malo es que vive muy lejos.	The bad thing is that she lives so far away.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ la buena cosa ✗ la cosa mala

Lo before an adjective can also indicate the intensity of the adjective. (See pages 226–227.)

No te imaginas lo difícil que es. Me habla de lo aburrido que está.	You can't imagine how hard it is. He tells me how bored he is.
--	---

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ como difícil que es ✗ como aburrido es

- The past participle of a verb (see page 122) can be used as an adjective. Its ending reflects the gender and number of the noun it modifies. Participles express different meanings, depending on whether they are used with ser or estar.

A sentence with ser plus a past participle gives information about how an action is done. A sentence with estar plus a past participle tells the result of an action.

La puerta es abierta por el guardia.	The door is opened by the guard.
La puerta está abierta.	The door is open.
La pareja va a ser casada por el cura.	The couple is going to be married by the priest.
La pareja está casada.	The couple is married.
Estas mesas son hechas en México. Estas mesas están hechas.	These tables are made in Mexico. These tables are finished (already made).
Los libros son publicados en este país.	The books are published in this country.
Los libros ya están publicados.	The books are already published.

AVOID THE Blunder

Remember that a participle used after ser or estar is an adjective, and its ending changes to agree with the noun it describes.

- ✗ La puerta está abierto.
- ✗ Estas mesas son hecho en México.

Adjectives generally express different meanings, depending on whether they are used with ser or estar. (See page 309.)

abierto

La muchacha es abierta.	The girl is frank.
La puerta está abierta.	The door is open.

aburrido

El maestro es aburrido.	The teacher is boring.
El maestro está aburrido.	The teacher is bored.

alegre

El niño es alegre.	The child has a happy nature.
El niño está alegre.	The child is enjoying himself.

bajo

Mi hermana es baja.	My sister is short.
Mi hermana está baja en la lista.	My sister is way down on the list.

bonito

Eres muy bonita.
¡Estás muy bonita!

*You are a very pretty girl.
You look pretty today!*

callado

La jefa es muy callada.
La jefa está muy callada.

*The boss is not a big talker.
The boss is very quiet today.*

débil

El joven es débil.
El joven está débil.

*The boy is a weakling.
The boy is in a weak condition.*

despierto

La mujer es despierta.
La mujer está despierta.

*The woman is bright.
The woman is awake.*

divertido

La chica es divertida.
La chica está divertida.

*The girl is a lot of fun.
The girl is having fun.*

frío

Esa mujer es fría.
Esta comida está fría.

*That woman is unfeeling.
This food is cold.*

fuerte

El actor es fuerte.
El actor está fuerte.

*The actor is a strong man.
The actor is in shape.*

gordo

Soy muy gorda.
Estoy muy gorda.

*I'm very fat.
I've gained a lot of weight.*

listo

El estudiante es listo.
El estudiante está listo.

*The student is smart.
The student is ready.*

loco

El pobre es loco.
¡Estás loco!

*The poor guy is crazy.
You must be crazy!*

nervioso

Soy nerviosa.
Tengo un examen y estoy nerviosa.

*I'm a nervous person.
I have an exam, and I'm nervous.*

seguro

Esta zona es segura.
Ella está segura de lo que hace.

*This area is safe.
She's sure about what she's doing.*

verde

Estas uvas son verdes.
Estas uvas están verdes.

*These grapes are green.
These grapes aren't ripe.*

viejo

Tú no eres viejo.
Tú estás viejo.

You're not old.
You look old.

vivo

Esa mujer es viva.
Esa mujer está viva.

That woman is “smart like a fox.”
That woman is alive.

AVOID THE Blunder

Use ser with an adjective to describe natural qualities. Use estar to indicate a present condition.

- ✗ Soy nervioso por el examen.
- ✗ La mujer no murió. Es viva.
- ✗ La puerta es abierta.

- Certain adverbs used before an adjective make the adjective more or less intense.

un poco	medio	bastante	muy	demasiado	tan _____ que bien sumamente extremadamente re-/reque-/requete-

El coche es un poco caro.
La blusa es medio cara.
Los boletos son bastante caros.
Las clases son muy caras.
La universidad es demasiado cara.

Ese restaurante es bien caro.
Los libros son recaros/requecaros/requetecaros.
Ese coche es tan caro que no
lo puedo comprar.

Estoy tan cansada que no puedo caminar más.

The car is a little expensive.
The blouse is somewhat expensive.
The tickets are quite expensive.
The classes are very expensive.
The university is extremely expensive.

That restaurant is very expensive.
The books are really expensive.

That car is so expensive that I can't buy it./That car is too expensive.
I'm so tired that I can't walk any farther./I'm too tired to walk.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not change the endings of adverbs.

- X una poca cara X media cara
X bastantes caros X demasiadas caras

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use mucho before an adjective.

- X mucho caro X mucho viejo

Demasiado is often translated as “too”; however, it is better translated as “extremely” because it does not imply a negative result.

Ese coche es demasiado caro.

That car is extremely expensive (no particular implication).

Ese coche es muy caro y no lo puedo comprar / no lo quiero comprar.

That car is too expensive and I can't buy it/I won't buy it.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use demasiado to imply that you are not going to buy it.

- X El vestido es demasiado caro.

Do not confuse re- before an adjective with re- before a verb. Before a verb re- means, as it does in English, “to do again.” Before an adjective it means “very.”

Tienes que reescribir la carta.
Es una clase reaburrida.

*You have to rewrite the letter.
It's a very boring class.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Frijoles refritos are well known in English as “refried beans.” However, rather than being “refried,” they are actually “well fried.”

- To indicate the opinion of the speaker or writer, adjectives that end in a vowel can be intensified by dropping the final vowel and adding -ísimo, -ísima, -ísimos, -ísimas.

la carta importantísima	the extremely important letter
el actor guapísimo	the gorgeous actor

After the final vowel has been dropped, some consonants change before adding -ísimo:

- If the final consonant is c, it changes to qu before -ísimo (see page 10).

el maestro simpatiquísimo	the really nice teacher la comida riquísima	the delicious meal

- If the final consonant is g, it changes to gu before -ísimo (see page 10).

la película larguísima	the very long movie
------------------------	----------------------------

Adjectives that end in -ble add an i between the b and the l.

la mujer amabilísima	the really, really nice woman
el hombre notabilísimo	the very distinguished man

For adjectives that end in -l, add -ísimo, -ísima, -ísimos, -ísimas.

la lección facilísima	the really easy lesson
el curso difficilísimo	the very difficult course/academic year

For adjectives that end in -n, add -císimo, -císima, -císimos, -císimas.

el jefe jovencísimo	the very young boss
---------------------	----------------------------

If the final consonant is z, it changes to c before -ísimo (see page 11).

el animal ferocísimo	the very fierce animal
la niña felicísima	the extremely happy child

AVOID THE Blunder

X jovenísimo	X ricímo	X simpatícísimo
X felicísimo	X ferozísimo	X terriblísimo

- Descriptive adjectives can be used with más ____ que and menos ____ que to compare people or things.

Este coche es más caro que ese.	This car is more expensive than that one.
---------------------------------	--

Ese coche es menos caro que este.	That car is less expensive than this one.
-----------------------------------	--

María es más alta que yo.
Yo soy menos alta que María.
Los zapatos blancos son más bonitos que los negros.

*María is taller than I am.
I'm not as tall as María.
The white shoes are prettier than the black ones.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Always compare subjects with subjects, and possessives with possessives.

✗ María es más alta que mi.

There are four irregular comparative forms: mejor, peor, mayor, and menor.

Esteban es mejor que Pablo.
Pablo es peor que Esteban.
Esteban y Pablo son mejores que los otros.
Los otros son peores que Esteban y Pablo.
Esteban es mayor que Pablo.
Pablo es menor que Esteban.
Esteban y Ricardo son mayores que Pablo.
Pablo y Juan son menores que Esteban.

*Esteban is better than Pablo.
Pablo is worse than Esteban.
Esteban and Pablo are better than the others.
The others are worse than Esteban and Pablo.
Esteban is older than Pablo.
Pablo is younger than Esteban.
Esteban and Ricardo are older than Pablo.
Pablo and Juan are younger than Esteban.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use más bueno unless you mean that Esteban is more saintly.

✗ Esteban es más bueno que Pablo.

Do not use más malo unless you mean that Pablo is more diabolical.

✗ Pablo es más malo que Esteban.

Mayor can mean más grande and, when it refers to people, más viejo.
Menor can mean más pequeño and, when it refers to people, más joven.

Ella va con su hermana mayor.
Ella es menor que su hermana.

*She's going with her older sister.
She is younger than her sister.*

- Descriptive adjectives can be used with tan ____ como to show equality between people or things.

Tu libro es tan caro como el mío.	Your book is as expensive as mine.
Tus libros son tan caros como los míos.	Your books are as expensive as mine.
Esta computadora es tan ligera como la otra.	This computer is as light as the other one.
Estas son tan buenas como esas.	These are as good as those.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use que in place of como.

~~X~~ tan caro que el otro

Do not forget the article before a possessive.

~~X~~ tan caro como mío

~~X~~ tan buenas como tuyas

- Descriptive adjectives can be used to single out people or things as superlative.

Ese es mi mayor problema.	That's my biggest problem.
Ese es su mejor vestido.	That is her best dress.
Es la ciudad más bella del mundo.	It's the most beautiful city in the world.
Este coche es el más caro de todos.	This car is the most expensive of all.
Julia es la más alta de todas las chicas.	Julia is the tallest of the girls.
Esteban es el mejor de la clase.	Esteban is the best (one) in the class.
Julia es la más alta del grupo.	Julia is the tallest (one) in the group.
Mario y Juanita son los mejores de la escuela.	Mario and Juanita are the best in the school.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use en in place of de.

~~X~~ más grande en el mundo

~~X~~ la más bonita en el mundo

~~X~~ los mejores en la clase

VERBS

the infinitive

Verbs are listed in the dictionary in their basic form, the infinitive. The Spanish infinitive is not equivalent to the English infinitive, “to” plus the basic verb. It is simply the basic verb.

The infinitive ending, -ar, -er, or -ir, indicates how the verb is conjugated. Each infinitive ending has a different conjugation pattern in each tense.

Additional Information in the Dictionary

Most dictionaries provide additional information about a verb.

- One or two vowels in parentheses after the infinitive indicate the verb's stem changes in the present tense and present subjunctive (see page 161). -Ir verbs of this type also have a second vowel in parentheses, which indicates the verb's stem changes in the pretérito, the gerund, the imperfect subjunctive, and the nosotros and vosotros forms of the present subjunctive (see page 161).
- An infinitive with -se attached after the -ar, -er, or -ir ending indicates that the verb must always be accompanied by a reflexive pronoun (see pages 103 and 208–214).

Constructions with the Infinitive

Conjugated Verb + Infinitive

Certain verbs may be immediately followed by the infinitive form of another verb. Following are some examples.

deber	be obligated to	preferir (ie, i)	prefer to esperar	hope to	querer (ie)	want to necesitar	need to	saber	know how to
pensar (ie)	plan to	encantar	love to (see page 106)
poder (ue)	be able to	gustar	like to (see page 106)

Debes pagar la multa.	You have to pay the fine.
Esperamos visitar los museos.	We hope to visit the museums.
Piensan salir temprano.	They're planning to leave early.
No puedo ir contigo.	I am not able to/can't go with you.
Prefiere vivir solo.	He prefers to live alone.
Quiero dormir.	I want to sleep.
Mi hermano no sabe manejar.	My brother doesn't know how to drive.
No le gusta bailar.	She doesn't like to dance.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not add a before the infinitive after these verbs.

- | | |
|--|---------------------------------------|
| X Quiero a dormir. | X Prefiere a vivir. |
| X Necesitan a descansar. | X No le gusta a bailar. |

Preposition + Infinitive

In English, certain prepositions are followed by the infinitive form of a verb ("to" + verb), and others are followed by a verb in the "-ing" form. In Spanish, a verb that follows a preposition is always in the infinitive form.

Mis padres vienen a comer con nosotros.	My parents are coming to eat with us.
Fue a la biblioteca para estudiar .	He went to the library to study.
Diego lleva dos meses sin trabajar .	Diego has gone two months without working.
Están cansados de esperar .	They're tired of waiting.

AVOID THE Blunder

- | | |
|-------------------------|--------------------------------|
| X sin trabajando | X cansados de esperando |
|-------------------------|--------------------------------|

Conjugated Verb + Preposition + Infinitive

Many common verb + preposition combinations are followed by an infinitive in Spanish.

+ a aprender a	learn to	empezar (ie) a	begin to, start to ayudar a	help to	ir a	be going to

comenzar (ie) a	begin to, start to	volver (ue) a	_____ again

+ de acabar de	have just _____ed deber de	must be _____ing

dejar de	stop _____ing
haber de	have to
tratar de	try to

+ en insistir en	keep on _____ing pensar (ie) en	concentrate on _____ing

empeñarse en	be determined to

+ para

ofrecerse para	offer to
----------------	-----------------

+ que*

haber que	be necessary to
tener que	have to

*Que acts like a preposition after haber and tener.

Está aprendiendo a cocinar.
Empiezo/Comienzo a trabajar el lunes.

Vamos a hacer una fiesta el viernes.

Mintió y volvió a mentir.

Acaba de terminar el trabajo.

Debe de estar en la oficina.

Dejó de fumar el año pasado.

He de hacerlo por mi madre.

Insiste en llamarle cada noche.

Sólo piensa en estudiar medicina.

Ella se ofreció a recogernos.

Hay que leer mucho en ese curso.

Tenemos que ir a casa.

She's learning to cook.
I start working on Monday.

We're going to have a party on Friday.

She lied and she lied again.

She has just finished the paper.

He must be at the office.

He stopped smoking last year.

I have to do it for my mother's sake.

He keeps on calling me every night.

All she thinks about is studying medicine.

She offered to pick us up.

You have to read a lot in that course.

We have to go home.

Two or more expressions of this type can be used in sequence, following an initial conjugated verb.

Voy a tener que empezar a trabajar.

Acaba de aprender a nadar.

I'm going to have to start working.

She just learned to swim.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not leave out the preposition.

- X Aprende cocinar.
- X Empiezo trabajar.
- X Tenemos ir.

Ver and oír + Infinitive

The infinitive follows the verbs ver and oír to refer to the object's action.

- | | |
|-------------------------------------|---|
| Vi entrar al profesor. | I saw the teacher walk in. |
| Anoche oímos a Sara tocar el piano. | Last night we heard Sara play the piano. |

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget the a to indicate that the direct object is a person.

- X Vi entrar el profesor.
- X Oímos Sara tocar el piano.

Other Uses of the Infinitive

Expressing Orders

As an alternative to the subjunctive, the infinitive can be used after verbs that allow, order, demand, force, prevent, or prohibit another's action. (See page 168 for the use of the subjunctive.) Following are some typical verbs of this type.

aconsejar	advise recomendar (ie)	recommend sugerir (ie, i)	suggest
decir (i)	tell
exigir	demand
hacer	make, cause

dejar	allow
permitir	allow
impedir (i, i)	prevent
prohibir	prohibit

El profesor le exigió disculparse.

The teacher demanded that she apologize.

Mi mamá nos hizo limpiar la casa.

My mom made us clean the house.

El maestro nos dejó salir.
 El guardia le permitió hacer una llamada.
 Sus padres les impidieron verse.
 Mi tío me prohibió hablar con mi amiga.

*The teacher let us leave.
 The guard let him make a call.
 Their parents prevented them from seeing one another.
 My uncle prohibited me from talking to my friend.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use English word order. Use indirect object pronouns with these verbs.

- ✗ El maestro no dejó nos salir.
- ✗ El guardia permitió lo hacer una llamada.
- ✗ Mi mamá hizo nos limpiar la casa.

Do not add prepositions.

- ✗ El maestro nos dejó a salir.
- ✗ El guardia le permitió a hacer una llamada.

Expressing Subjects

The infinitive can be used as a noun.

It can be the subject of a sentence; the masculine article el is optional.

(El) vivir en la ciudad puede ser peligroso.
 Querer es poder.
 Caminar sola por la noche no es buena idea.

*Living in the city can be dangerous.
 Wanting to is being able to.
 Walking alone at night isn't a good idea.*

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Viviendo en la ciudad es peligroso.
- ✗ Caminando sola no es buena idea.
- ✗ Queriendo es pudiendo.

The infinitive is used after al to indicate two simultaneous actions.

Al ver el océano, me sentí contenta.
 Recordó el nombre al llegar a casa.

*When I saw the ocean, I felt happy.
 He remembered the name as soon as he got home.*

Describing Activities

As in English, Spanish uses an infinitive directly after an adjective to describe an activity.

ENGLISH PATTERN “be” + adjective + infinitive

SPANISH PATTERN ser + adjective + infinitive

Es fácil leer este libro.

It's easy to read this book.

Será difícil encontrarlo.

It will be difficult to find him.

Describing Nouns

To describe a noun, an infinitive follows an adjective + de.

ENGLISH PATTERN noun + “be” + adjective + infinitive

SPANISH PATTERN noun + ser + adjective + de + infinitive

Este libro es fácil de leer.

This book is easy to read.

Él será difícil de encontrar.

He will be difficult to find.

Expressing Commands

The infinitive is often used to give commands to the general public.

No fumar.

No smoking.

No pisar el césped.

Do not walk on the grass.

No entrar.

Do not enter.

Exercise

A Use an infinitive construction to write the Spanish equivalent of each of the following English sentences.

1. We have to study more. _____

2. She wrote the exercise again. _____

3. They want to stop smoking. _____

4. We love to go shopping. _____

5. I saw the boss leave. _____

6. She made me work. _____

7. Knowing how to ride a bike is important in this city.

8. He has just arrived. _____

9. It's hard to study here. _____

10. These books are easy to understand.

VERBS

types of verbs

Spanish verbs can be subdivided into several categories according to their usage with or without object nouns and pronouns.

Intransitive Verbs

Intransitive verbs in Spanish, like intransitive verbs in English, have no object.

PATTERN subject + verb (+ adverb or prepositional phrase)

Typical intransitive verbs follow.

caminar	walk	llorar	cry correr	run	nadar	swim
ir	go	salir	leave (go out)

Eva corre.

Eva runs.

Eva corre rápido.

Eva runs fast.

Eva corre en el parque.

Eva runs in the park.

El niño lloró.

The child cried.

El niño lloró mucho.

The child cried a lot.

El niño lloró en los brazos de su mamá.

The child cried in his mother's arms.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use object pronouns when there is no object.

✗ El niño lo lloró.

✗ Eva lo corre en el parque.

Do not use reflexive pronouns with verbs that do not have -se attached to the infinitive.

✗ Eva se corre.

-Se Verbs

Verbs that are listed in the dictionary with -se attached to the infinitive are always used with a reflexive pronoun (me, te, se, nos, os). These verbs are commonly referred to as reflexive verbs, although some of them do not have a reflexive meaning. (See pages 211–214.)

PATTERN subject + reflexive pronoun + verb
(+ adverb or prepositional phrase)

Lastimarse “to hurt oneself” is a typical verb with reflexive meaning.

Verónica se lastimó en el partido Verónica hurt herself in the soccer match.

Levantarse “to get up” (“to raise oneself up”) is a typical verb with reflexive meaning, although the meaning is not expressed as a reflexive in English.

Octavio se levanta a las seis. Octavio gets up at six.

Quejarse “to complain” is a typical verb with no reflexive meaning, even though it requires a reflexive pronoun.

David y sus amigos se quejan de todo. David and his friends complain about everything.

AVOID THE Blunder

If a verb is listed with -se at the end, always use the reflexive pronoun that refers to the same person as the subject of the sentence.

- ✗ Verónica lastimó en el partido.
- ✗ Octavio levanta a las seis.
- ✗ David y sus amigos quejan de todo.

Transitive Verbs

Transitive verbs that have only direct objects depict action by the subject on or toward a target—the direct object (see pages 104–106). Typical verbs that take direct objects follow.

amar	love	mirar	look at anunciar	announce	preferir (ie, i)	prefer dejar	leave (something)	querer (ie)	want, love
escuchar	listen to	recoger	pick up llamar	call	ver	see
manejar	drive	visitar	visit

PATTERN 1 subject + verb + direct object noun
 (+ adverb or prepositional phrase)

Germán llamaba a su papá todas las noches.

Germán called his dad every night.

Germán llamó el número equivocado.

Germán called the wrong number.

Vamos a ver la película.

We're going to watch the movie.

Vamos a ver a la profesora.

We're going to see the teacher.

AVOID THE Blunder

When the direct object is a person or people, do not forget to precede it with the “personal a.”

✗ Germán llama su papá.

✗ Vamos a ver la profesora.

Several common transitive verbs are translated into English using a verb followed by a preposition (see page 215). These verbs are normally not followed by a preposition in Spanish. However, when the direct object is a person or people, the “personal a” is required.

buscar	look for escuchar	listen to

esperar	wait for
mirar	look at

Estoy buscando un libro interesante.

I'm looking for an interesting book.

Estoy buscando a mi hijo.

I'm looking for my son.

Roberto escucha la música.

Roberto listens to the music.

Roberto escucha a la profesora.

Roberto listens to the teacher.

Esperamos el autobús.

We're waiting for the bus.

Esperamos a los niños.

We're waiting for the children.

Las chicas miran los zapatos.

The girls are looking at the shoes.

Las chicas miran a los chicos.

The girls are looking at the boys.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Estoy buscando por un libro.

✗ Estoy buscando para mi hijo.

✗ Esperamos por el autobús.

✗ Roberto escucha a la música.

✗ Las chicas miran a los zapatos.

PATTERN 2 (subject) + direct object pronoun + verb
 (+ adverb or prepositional phrase)

Germán lo llamó dos veces.

Germán called it (the number) two times.

Germán lo llamó anoche.

Germán called him (his father) last night.

Vamos a verla.

We're going to see it (the movie).

Vamos a verla.

We're going to see her (the teacher).

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a + object pronoun (a él, a ella, a mí, a nosotros) for direct objects that refer to people. Use the direct object pronoun instead, and place it before the verb.

X Germán llama a él.

X Vamos a ver a ella.

“Exchange” Verbs

Certain transitive verbs have both a direct and an indirect object. These verbs indicate an exchange of something (the direct object) from the subject to another person (the indirect object). Contrary to English usage, the indirect object pronoun must always appear before the conjugated verb in Spanish, even if it is also otherwise named. Typical “exchange” verbs follow.

dar	give	decir (i)	tell
entregar	hand to, deliver	contar (ue)	tell, relate
mostrar (ue)	show	enviar	send
demonstrar (ue)	demonstrate	mandar	send
enseñar	teach, show	pedir (i, i)	ask for

PATTERN 1 (subject) + indirect object pronoun + verb
 + direct object noun (+ a + indirect object)

Miguel me da el dinero (a mí).

Miguel gives me the money.

Norman te muestra las fotos (a ti).

Norman shows you the pictures.

PATTERN 2 (subject) + indirect object pronoun
 + direct object pronoun + verb (+ a + indirect object)

Miguel me lo da (a mí).

Miguel gives it to me.

Norman te las muestra (a ti).

Norman shows them to you.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not leave out the indirect object pronoun before the verb.

- ~~X~~ Miguel da el dinero a mí.
- ~~X~~ Miguel lo da a mí.
- ~~X~~ Norman muestra las fotos a ti.
- ~~X~~ Norman las muestra a ti.

Verbs of Feeling

Certain verbs require an indirect object pronoun but do not have a direct object (see pages 220–223). Typical verbs of this type follow.

encantar	enchant	gustar	please, appeal to faltar	lack	molestar	bother
fascinar	fascinate

PATTERN (A + noun/pronoun) + indirect object pronoun
+ verb + subject

A mí me falta el tiempo.

I don't have time. (Time is lacking to me.)

A Alejandro le fascina la película.

The movie fascinates Alejandro.

¿Te gustan mis zapatos nuevos?

Do you like my new shoes? (Do my new shoes appeal to you?)

A él le molestan los mosquitos.

Mosquitoes annoy him.

In English, when the subject is not stated, it is replaced by a pronoun. In Spanish, the subject pronoun (él, ella, ellos) may be used if the subject is a person or people. If the subject is a thing, no pronoun is used.

A Alejandro le fascina Ana.

Ana fascinates Alejandro.

A Alejandro le fascina (ella).

She fascinates Alejandro.

A Alejandro le fascina la película.

The movie fascinates Alejandro.

A Alejandro le fascina.

It fascinates Alejandro.

¿Te gustan mis zapatos?

Do you like my shoes?

¿Te gustan?

Do you like them? (Do they appeal to you?)

A él le molestan los mosquitos.

Mosquitoes bother him.

A él le molestan.

They bother him.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use direct object pronouns with these verbs to translate “it” or “them.” Keep in mind that it is the subject (“it” or “they”) that “sends the feeling” to the indirect object.

- X A él le molestan los.
- X ¿Te los gustan?

The subjects of sentences of this type often occur after the verb, whereas in English the usual position of the subject is before the verb.

- | | |
|------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| Me gustan los zapatos rojos. | The red shoes appeal to me. |
| Le molesta el tráfico. | Traffic bothers him. |

In English, an article is not used with plural and noncount nouns when they are used in a general sense. In Spanish, an article must be used before a noun subject, whether it is singular, plural, or noncount.

- | | |
|---------------------------|--|
| Me gusta el chocolate. | I like chocolate. (Chocolate appeals to me.) |
| Me gustan los chocolates. | I like chocolates. (Chocolates appeal to me.) |

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not leave out the article before the subject.

- X Me gusta chocolate.
- X Me gustan chocolates.

Verbs Indicating Advice or Control

Certain verbs that indicate advice or control over the actions of others are preceded by an indirect object pronoun and followed by a clause in the subjunctive (see pages 167–168 and 188–189).

PATTERN subject clause + indirect object pronoun + verb
 (+ a + noun/pronoun) + que + subjunctive clause

- | | |
|---|---|
| La maestra les aconseja a los estudiantes que estudien. | The teacher advises the students to study. |
| Los padres le prohíben al chico que vea la televisión. | The parents don't allow the child to watch television. |

Verbs Indicating Unplanned Occurrences

Certain verbs indicate unplanned occurrences (see pages 224–225). Typical verbs of this type follow.

acabársele	end, run out of caérsele	fall olvidársele	forget

perdérsele (ie)	lose quedársele	remain
rompérsele	break

(A mí) se me olvidó el libro.

I forgot my book. (The book forgot itself, and it is affecting me.)

A Pedro se le perdió la llave.

Pedro lost his key. (The key lost itself, and it is affecting Pedro.)

A Jorge se le quedaron los cuadernos en el coche.

Jorge left the notebooks in the car. (The notebooks stayed in the car, and it is affecting Jorge.)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a possessive adjective before the noun with these verbs.

- ✗ Se me olvidó mi libro.
- ✗ Se le perdió su llave.
- ✗ Se le quedaron sus cuadernos.

Exercise

A Underline the main verb in each of the following sentences, then indicate which of the following is the appropriate category for the verb. (Hint: There are three verbs in each category.)

- a. Intransitive verbs (with no object)
- b. Verbs with a reflexive pronoun only
- c. Verbs with a direct object (noun or pronoun) only
- d. Verbs that indicate an exchange, with both an indirect object pronoun and a direct object
- e. Verbs that indicate a person's feelings, with an indirect object pronoun
- f. Verbs that indicate advice or control over another person's actions, with an indirect object pronoun and a subjunctive clause
- g. Verbs that indicate unplanned occurrences, with reflexive and indirect object pronouns

1. ¿A qué hora sales? _____
2. Me levanto temprano. _____
3. Los chicos caminan en el parque. _____
4. Sara llama a su mamá. _____
5. Ella me cuenta sus ideas. _____
6. Marcos se queja mucho. _____

Stem-changing Verb Patterns

With these verbs, the last vowel in the stem is replaced by another vowel or vowels in the forms for yo, tú, usted/él/ella, and ustedes/ellos/ellas. The change is normally indicated in a dictionary by an annotation after the infinitive. The stem does not change in the forms for nosotros(-as) and vosotros(-as). An example is given below for each stem-changing pattern.

Review the forms on the preceding pages.

Spanish tenses express a different range of meanings than similarly named English tenses.

Uses of the Present Tense

The present tense is used with certain time expressions.

ahora	now	esta semana	this week en este momento	at the moment	este mes	this month actualmente	currently	este semestre	this semester
hoy	today	este año	this year esta mañana	this morning	estos días	these days esta tarde	this afternoon
esta noche	tonight

Stating Facts

The Spanish present tense, like the present tense in English, is used to state facts about the present.

Soy responsable.

I'm responsible.

Tenemos los boletos.

We have the tickets.

Perú está en Sudamérica.

Peru is in South America.

Viven en Nueva York.

They live in New York.

Describing Usual Action

The Spanish present tense, like the present tense in English, is used to describe usual action.

Trabajo a las nueve los lunes.

I work at nine o'clock on Mondays.

Come después de las clases.

She eats after school.

Vamos a la playa en el verano.

We go to the beach in the summer.

Llevan sus paraguas cuando llueve.

They take their umbrellas when it rains.

AVOID THE Blunder

Be sure to use the correct verb ending to correspond with the subject of the sentence. When the subject is not stated, the conjugated ending of the verb acts as the subject of the sentence.

Describing Action in Progress

The Spanish present tense, unlike the present tense in English, can be used to describe action in progress, that is, action that has begun but has not finished.

A progressive construction, formed by conjugating estar in the present tense and adding a verb in the gerund form (ending in -ndo), can be used as an alternative; this is comparable to the English present progressive. (Review the gerund forms on page 113.)

ENGLISH PATTERN “be” + “_____ing”

SPANISH PATTERN present tense of estar
+ _____*ando* OR _____*iendo/yendo*

¿Qué haces?	}	What are you doing?
¿Qué estás haciendo?
Trabajo ahora.	}	I'm working.
Estoy trabajando.
¿Adónde van?*	}	Where are you all going?
Come en este momento.
Está comiendo.	}	She's eating.
Llevan sus paraguas.
Están llevando sus paraguas.		They're carrying their umbrellas.

*The progressive form of ir (yendo) is not used in this construction.

AVOID THE Blunder

X ¿Adónde estás yendo?

The gerund is also used after a conjugated form of the verbs andar, ir, and seguir.

Mi prima anda diciendo mentiras.	My cousin goes around telling lies.
El chico va cantando por la calle.	The boy goes down the street singing.
Las chicas siguen bailando.	The girls keep on dancing.

The Spanish present tense, unlike the present tense in English, is used to tell how long a current action has been taking place.

- ENGLISH PATTERNS
- “have/has” + past participle + “for”
+ period of time
 - “have/has” + “been ____ing” + “for”
+ period of time

- SPANISH PATTERN 1 present tense of llevar + period of time + gerund

Llevo dos años trabajando aquí.

I have worked here for two years.
I have been working here for two years.

- SPANISH PATTERN 2 hace + period of time + que
+ present tense / present progressive tense

Hace dos años que trabajo aquí.
Hace dos años que estoy trabajando aquí.

I have worked here for two years.
I have been working here for two years.

- SPANISH PATTERN 3 present tense / present progressive tense
+ desde hace + period of time

Trabajo aquí desde hace dos años.
Estoy trabajando aquí desde hace dos años.

I have worked here for two years.
I have been working here for two years (since two years ago).

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the word-for-word equivalent of the English present perfect tense to tell how long an action has been taking place.

- ✗ He trabajado aquí por dos años.
✗ He estado trabajando aquí por dos años.

The present tense is used to indicate how long it has been since the last time an action occurred.

- ENGLISH PATTERN
- “haven’t/hasn’t” + past participle + “for”
+ period of time

- SPANISH PATTERN present tense of llevar + period of time
+ sin + infinitive

Llevo tres años sin ver a mi mejor amigo.	I haven't seen my best friend for three years.
Lleva dos meses sin fumar.	He hasn't smoked in two months.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ No he visto a mi amigo por tres años.
- ✗ No ha fumado en dos meses.

The Spanish present tense, unlike the present tense in English, is used to state when an action began.

ENGLISH PATTERN “have/has” + past participle + “since”
 + time activity began

SPANISH PATTERN present tense + desde + time activity began

Trabajo aquí desde enero de 2003.	I have worked here since January of 2003.
Estoy trabajando aquí desde enero de 2003.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the word-for-word equivalent of the English present perfect tense when stating when an action began.

- ✗ He trabajado aquí desde enero de 2003.
- ✗ He estado trabajando aquí desde enero de 2003.

The Spanish present tense, unlike the present tense in English, is used to state that an action is taking place for the first, second, third, etc. time.

ENGLISH PATTERN “the first/second/tenth time” + “have/has”
 + past participle

SPANISH PATTERN la primera/segunda/décima vez + que
 + present tense

Esta es la primera vez que estoy en México.

This is the first time I have (ever) been in Mexico.

Es la segunda vez que come en nuestra casa.

It's the second time he has eaten at our house.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the word-for-word equivalent of the English present perfect tense when stating the number of times an action has taken place.

- ✗ Esta es la primera vez que he estado en México.
- ✗ Es la segunda vez que ha comido en nuestra casa.

Describing Future Action

The Spanish present tense, like the present tense in English, is used to state the time of a scheduled event.

- | | |
|------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| El avión sale a las cinco y media. | The plane leaves at 5:30. |
| La película empieza a las ocho. | The movie starts at eight. |

The Spanish present tense, unlike the present tense in English, is used to make a request.

ENGLISH PATTERN	future tense + question mark
SPANISH PATTERN	question mark + present tense + question mark
¿Me ayudas?	Will you help me?
¿Le traes un vaso de agua?	Will you bring him a glass of water?

The Spanish present tense is used to make an offer.

ENGLISH PATTERN	“can” + basic verb + question mark
SPANISH PATTERN	question mark + present tense + question mark
¿Te ayudo?	Can I help you?
¿Le traigo un vaso de agua?	Can I bring him a glass of water?

The Spanish present tense, unlike the present tense in English, is used to make a commitment or promise.

ENGLISH PATTERN	“will” + basic verb
SPANISH PATTERN	present tense
Te llamo esta noche.	I'll call you tonight.
Sí, me caso contigo en diciembre.	Yes, I'll marry you in December.

The present tense of ir + a + infinitive, like the English “be going to” + basic verb, is used to state a future plan. In English, the progressive—“be” + verb in “-ing” form—can be used as an alternative.

ENGLISH PATTERNS “be going to” + basic verb “be + ___ing”

SPANISH PATTERN ir + a + infinitive form of verb

Voy a cenar con él mañana.

I'm going to have dinner with him tomorrow.
I'm having dinner with him tomorrow.

Sí, nos vamos a casar el año próximo.

Yes, we're going to get married next year.
Yes, we're getting married next year.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the progressive form as you would in English to state a future plan.

- ✗ Estoy cenando con él mañana.
- ✗ Sí, nos estamos casando el año próximo.

Describing Conditional Action

As in English clauses introduced by “if,” the present tense is used in Spanish after the word si to express conditional future action.

ENGLISH PATTERN “if” + present tense + future clause

SPANISH PATTERN si + present tense + future clause

- | | |
|--------------------------------|--|
| Si no llueve, voy a la playa. | If it doesn't rain, I'm going to the beach. |
| Si llegas tarde, no podrás ir. | If you are late, you won't be able to go. |

Describing Past Action

The present tense of the verb acabar + de + infinitive is used to express recently completed action. This is expressed in English by the present perfect tense or the past tense with “just.” (See pages 123–124 for an alternative way to express this meaning in Spanish.)

ENGLISH PATTERNS “have/has just” + past participle
“just” + past tense

SPANISH PATTERN present tense of acabar + de + infinitive

Acabo de comer.

*I have just eaten.
I just ate.*

Acaban de llegar.

*They have just arrived.
They just arrived.*

In English, the present tense is often used to tell jokes or relate the events of a movie or play but not to write formal history. In Spanish the present tense can be used, both formally and informally, to narrate the past.

(En la película) la mujer y su esposo tienen una discusión y luego la mujer sale de la casa y empieza a llorar.

(In the movie) the woman and her husband have an argument, and then she leaves the house and starts to cry.

Cristóbal Colón descubre el Nuevo Mundo en 1492 y lo reclama para España.

Christopher Columbus discovered the new world in 1492 and claimed it for Spain.

The present tense is used in Spanish to express action that almost happened, but in fact didn't. English uses the past tense in this situation.

ENGLISH PATTERN “almost” + past tense

SPANISH PATTERN por poco/casi + present tense

Por poco me caigo.
Casi se muere.

*I almost fell.
He almost died.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a past tense in Spanish with por poco or casi.

✗ Por poco me caí.
✗ Casi se murió.

- For additional Spanish equivalents of the English present tense, see the sections on the present subjunctive (pages 161–176) and reported speech (pages 200–203).

AVOID THE Blunder

Be sure to learn the irregular past participle forms.

X abierto X escrito X hecho
X ponido X rompido

It is easy to make the mistake of thinking that this tense is equivalent to the English present perfect (“have” + past participle), because the formations are similar. In some cases, in fact, the uses are equivalent. In many cases, however, the uses are quite different.

Uses of the Past Tenses

The past tenses are used with certain time expressions.

ayer	yesterday
anoche	last night
anteayer	the day before yesterday
la semana pasada	last week
el mes pasado	last month
el año pasado	last year

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not confuse “last” with “ago.”

X dos semanas pasadas X tres meses pasados

Uses of the Preterite Perfect Tense

Describing Recent Action

The Spanish preterite perfect tense, like the present perfect tense in English, is used to express action that has been recently completed.

ENGLISH PATTERNS subject + “have/has just” + past participle subject + “just” + past tense

SPANISH PATTERN (subject) + present tense of haber + participle

He hablado con Juan. $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} I \text{ have just talked to Juan.} \\ I \text{ just talked to Juan.} \end{array} \right.$

Hemos comido. $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} We \text{ have just eaten.} \\ We \text{ just ate.} \end{array} \right.$

This usage is more common in Spain than in Latin America, where the present tense of acabar + de + infinitive is more often used for this purpose (see pages 119–120).

In English, the word “just” is important in conveying the sense of recent action. In Spanish, an equivalent word is not necessary. Also note that in American English, it is common to use the past tense for this purpose.

Expressing Time of Action

In Spanish, the time of a recent action is often stated with the preterite perfect tense. In English, time is stated with the past tense—never with the present perfect tense.

He hablado con Juan a las tres.	I talked to Juan at three o'clock.
Hemos comido en la tarde.	We ate in the afternoon.
Mi perro ha muerto anoche.	My dog died last night.
Sus amigos han llegado hace poco.	Your friends arrived a short time ago.

AVOID THE Blunder

When translating from Spanish to English, do not use the present perfect if the time of action is stated. Use the past tense instead.

- ✗ My dog has died last night.
- ✗ Your friends have arrived a few minutes ago.

Expressing “Already” and “Not Yet”

The Spanish preterite perfect tense, like the English present perfect tense, is used to express action that has already occurred or that has not yet occurred. Note that the markers ya and todavía are necessary to convey this meaning in Spanish, but “already” and “yet” are optional in conveying this meaning in English.

Ya he hablado con Juan.

Ya hemos comido.

No he escrito el trabajo todavía.

Mis amigos no han llegado todavía.

I've (already) talked to Juan.

We have (already) eaten.

I haven't written the paper (yet).

My friends haven't arrived (yet).

AVOID THE Blunder

If you expect or hope that the action will occur, you must include the marker todavía.

Don't omit todavía if you plan to write the paper.

X No he escrito el trabajo.

Don't omit todavía if you expect your friends to arrive.

X No han llegado mis amigos.

Expressing the Frequency of an Action

The Spanish preterite perfect tense, like the English present perfect tense, is used to express the number of times an action has been performed.

He hablado dos veces con Juan.

Hemos comido muchas veces en este lugar.

I have talked to Juan twice.

We have eaten at this place many times.

Unlike the English present perfect tense, the Spanish preterite perfect tense is not used to express activity that is occurring now for the first, second, third, etc. time (see page 117).

ENGLISH PATTERN “the first time (that)” + subject + “have/has”
 + past participle

SPANISH PATTERN la primera vez que + (subject) + present tense

Esta es la primera vez que comemos en este lugar.

This is the first time we have eaten at this place.

AVOID THE Blunder

X Esta es la primera vez que hemos comido en este lugar.

X Es la segunda vez que he estado en este país.

The Spanish preterite perfect tense, unlike the English present perfect tense, is not used to express how long an activity has been taking place.

ENGLISH PATTERN subject + “have/has” + “been _____ing”

SPANISH PATTERNS (subject) + present tense

(subject) + present progressive tense

Hace diez minutos que hablo con Juan.
Hace diez minutos que estoy hablando con Juan.

I've been talking to Juan for 10 minutes.

Hace seis meses que estoy en este país. I've been in this country for six months.

AVOID THE Blunder

Don't use the preterite perfect tense unless you mean that the action is completed: "I talked to John for 10 minutes."

X He estado hablando con Juan por diez minutos.

Uses of the Preterite Tense

Describing Terminated Actions

The preterite tense in Spanish is used to describe actions that began and terminated in the past, without giving details about other simultaneous or interrupting actions.

Estuve en clase (ayer).

I was in class (yesterday).

Fuimos a la fiesta (el viernes).

We went to the party (on Friday).

No comi  nada (anoche).

He didn't eat anything (last night).

Aprendieron mucho (el a o pasado).

They learned a lot (last year).

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the imperfect tense unless you intend to tell what happened while you were in class.

~~X~~ Estaba en clase ayer.

Describing Actions Simultaneously Begun and Terminated

The Spanish preterite tense is used to describe actions that began and terminated at the same time.

Abrí la puerta.	I opened the door.
Salimos a las ocho.	We left at eight o'clock.
Estornudó.	She sneezed.
Empezaron a escribir.	They started to write.

This kind of action is often accompanied by the following types of expressions.

de repente	suddenly
de pronto	suddenly
a las tres y media	at 3:30

Describing Constant Past Action

The preterite tense is often used with siempre to emphasize that an action or feeling was constant during an entire period of time; it is used with nunca to emphasize that an action did not occur during an entire period of time.

Siempre lo supo.	He always knew it.
Flora nunca estuvo de acuerdo commigo.	Flora never agreed with me.

Narrating

The preterite tense is used in combination with the imperfect tense to narrate a story or an event. For details and examples, see pages 135–137.

Uses of the Imperfect Tense

Describing the Past

The Spanish imperfect tense is used to describe a past period of time—the way things were in the past.

Cuando yo tenía 10 años, era pequeña y muy tímida.

Tenía una amiga que vivía cerca de mi casa.

Había tres escuelas en la ciudad.

Teníamos mucho tiempo libre.

Nuestra casa era muy bonita.

Mis abuelos vivían en el campo.

When I was 10 years old, I was little and very shy.

I had a friend who lived near my house.

There were three schools in the city.

We had a lot of free time.

Our house was really pretty.

My grandparents lived in the country.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the preterite tense to describe a past period of time.

~~X~~ Nuestra casa fue muy bonita.

~~X~~ Mis abuelos vivieron en el campo.

When describing a past period of time, activities that occurred on a regular basis are expressed with the imperfect tense. In English, this can be expressed in three different ways.

Hacía mis tareas en la tarde.

Jugábamos en la calle.

*We (always) played in the street.
We (always) used to play in the street.
We would (always) play in the street.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Rather than translate word for word from English, consider the purpose of your remarks. If you are describing activities that took place on a regular basis, use the imperfect tense in Spanish.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the imperfect progressive tense if you are describing activities that took place on a regular basis.

- ✗ Estaba haciendo mis tareas todos los días.
- ✗ Estábamos jugando en la calle cada tarde.
- ✗ Se estaba preocupando todas las noches.

Describing Simultaneous Past Actions

The imperfect or the imperfect progressive tense is used to express an action that was in progress at the same time that another action was in progress. In English, this type of action can be expressed in the past tense or the past progressive.

Mientras José leía el periódico,
Juana veía la televisión.

Cuando estábamos jugando, nuestros padres estaban hablando.

While José read the newspaper, Juana watched TV.
When we were playing, our parents were talking.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the preterite tense to express two simultaneous past actions.

- ✗ Mientras José leyó el periódico, Juana vio la televisión.
- ✗ Cuando jugamos, nuestros padres hablaron.

Narrating

■ In a narrative, the imperfect or imperfect progressive tense is used to describe an action that had started, but not ended, when another action (expressed in the preterite) began (see pages 129–130). In English, the past progressive tense is used for this purpose.

Pepe leía el periódico cuando llamó Marta.	{	Pepe was reading the newspaper when Marta called.
Pepe estaba leyendo el periódico cuando llamó Marta.
Jugábamos en el jardín cuando Ana se cayó.	{	We were playing in the yard when Ana fell down.
Estábamos jugando en el jardín cuando Ana se cayó.

■ The Spanish imperfect tense is used to describe a condition or state that had started, but not ended, when the preterite action occurred. In English, verbs that describe states or conditions are usually expressed in the past tense, not the past progressive, even though they represent “being in the middle of” a state or condition.

*As an intransitive verb, saber refers to the state of something, not to the conscious act of tasting (probar, transitive).

INTRANSITIVE

La carne sabía rica. The meat tasted delicious.

TRANSITIVE

Probamos la carne. We tasted the meat.

While the Spanish imperfect tense is used to describe ongoing states or feelings in the past, the English past tense (rather than the past progressive) is usually used for this purpose.

Quería seguir durmiendo. I wanted to keep on sleeping.
(NOT was wanting)

Tenía tres coches cuando lo conocí. He had three cars when I met him.
(NOT was having)

Yo no recordaba su nombre en ese momento. I didn't remember his name at the time.
(NOT wasn't remembering)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the preterite to express ongoing feelings or conditions.

- ✗ Quise seguir durmiento.
- ✗ Tuvo tres coches cuando lo conocí.
- ✗ No recordé su nombre en ese momento.

The Imperfect vs. the Preterite

Certain Spanish verbs have different English translations, depending on whether they express an already-started (imperfect) action or condition or a newly initiated or terminated (preterite) action or condition.

Cuando llegué a esta ciudad, conocía a dos personas.

*When I arrived in this city,
I (already) knew two people.*

Cuando llegué a esta ciudad, conocí a dos personas.

*When I arrived in this city,
I met two people.*

La mujer tenía dos niños.

The woman (already) had two children.

La mujer tuvo un niño.

The woman gave birth to a child.

Sabía que él estaba casado.

She knew he was married.

Supo que él estaba casado.

She found out he was married.

Ella estaba aquí a las ocho.

She was (already) here at eight.

Ella estuvo aquí a las ocho.

She got here at eight o'clock.

Cuando Carlos salió de la fiesta,
quería ir a su casa.

*When Carlos left the party,
he wanted to go home.*

Cuando Carlos salió de la fiesta,
quiso ir a su casa.

*When Carlos left the party,
he tried to go home (but was unable to).*

Cuando salió de la fiesta, no
quería ir a su casa.

When he left the party, he didn't want to go home.

Cuando salió de la fiesta, no
quiso ir a su casa.

When he left the party, he refused to go home.

Expressing “Could” and “Had to”

Both the imperfect and the preterite of poder may be translated as “could,” and both the imperfect and the preterite of tener que may be translated as “had to.” The imperfect is used to describe a situation before its resolution. The preterite refers to a situation after its resolution.

Pedro llamó a su hijo porque no podía arreglar su computadora.

Pedro called his son because he couldn't fix his computer.

Pedro compró una computadora nueva porque su hijo no pudo arreglar la otra.

Pedro bought a new computer because his son couldn't fix the other one.

Eran las diez de la noche. Ana quería ir a una fiesta pero no podía porque tenía que estudiar.
Ana no fue a la fiesta anoche.

It was 10 P.M. Ana wanted to go to a party, but she couldn't because she had to study.

No pudo ir porque tuvo que estudiar.

Ana didn't go to the party last night. She couldn't go because she had to study.

Expressing Past Detail

When telling what happened in the past, use the imperfect if you intend to describe the situation in further detail. Use the preterite if you don't intend to say any more about it.

Ayer estaba en la casa de mi amigo cuando empezó a nevar.

Yesterday I was at my friend's house when it started to snow.

Ayer estuve en la casa de mi amigo por dos horas. Luego fui a mi clase.

Yesterday I was at my friend's house for two hours. After that I went to my class.

Mi papá leía el periódico y vio una noticia que le sorprendió.

My dad was reading the newspaper and saw an item that surprised him.

Anoche mi papá llegó a casa a las ocho, leyó el periódico y salió de nuevo.

Last night my dad got home at 8 o'clock, read the newspaper, and then went out again.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Ayer estaba en la casa de mi amigo y luego fui a mi clase.

✗ Mi papá leía el periódico y luego salió de la sala.

✗ Anoche mi papá llegaba a casa a las ocho, leía el periódico y salía de nuevo.

Uses of the Pluperfect Tense

Describing Pre-past Action

The pluperfect tense in Spanish, like the past perfect tense in English, is used to describe actions that terminated before other past actions began.

María llegó a casa muy cansada.
Había trabajado nueve horas seguidas.

Juan no aprobó el examen porque no había estudiado.

María got home exhausted.
She had worked nine hours straight.
Juan didn't pass the test because he hadn't studied.

Expressing "Already" and "Not Yet"

The Spanish pluperfect, like the past perfect in English, is used to tell what had already happened or had not yet happened. (See ya, todavía on pages 124–125.)

Le ofrecí el periódico, pero ya lo había leído.
Eran las dos de la madrugada y mi hermana todavía no había aparecido.

I offered him the newspaper, but he had already read it.
It was 2 A.M. and my sister still hadn't shown up.

Reporting What Was Said

The Spanish pluperfect, like the past perfect in English, is used to report what someone said about a past action (see pages 200–203).

Sara dijo que su hermana no había vuelto a la casa.
Mis amigos me dijeron que me habían llamado.

Sara said that her sister hadn't returned home.
My friends told me that they had called me.

Describing the Frequency of an Action

The Spanish pluperfect, like the English past perfect, is used to express the number of times an action had been performed.

Había hablado dos veces con Juan.
I had talked to Juan twice.

Habíamos comido muchas veces en este lugar.
We had eaten at this place many times.

Unlike the English past perfect, the Spanish pluperfect is not used to express activity that was occurring for the first, second, third, etc. time.

ENGLISH PATTERN “the first time (that)” + subject + “had”
 + past participle

SPANISH PATTERN la primera vez que + (subject) + imperfect tense

Fue la primera vez que comíamos en ese lugar.
That was the first time we had eaten at that place.

Era la segunda vez que estaba en ese país.
It was the second time I had been in that country.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Fue la primera vez que habíamos comido en ese lugar.

✗ Era la segunda vez que había estado en ese país.

Exercise

A Use the pluperfect tense to complete the sentences below.

1. Javier leyó el periódico antes de ir a la oficina.

Cuando Javier llegó a la oficina, ya sabía las noticias porque _____.

2. Comí a las doce. A la una, Mario me invitó a comer.

Uses of the Future Tense

The future tense is used with certain time expressions.

mañana	tomorrow
pasado mañana	the day after tomorrow
la próxima semana	next week
el próximo mes	next month
el próximo año	next year
pronto	soon
dentro de dos días	in two days
algún día	some day
nunca	never

Making a Prediction

The Spanish future tense is used to predict the future.

Mi hijo será médico.	My son will be a doctor.
Usted tendrá buena suerte.	You will have good luck.
Todos viajaremos a la luna.	We will all travel to the moon.
Algún día me graduaré.	Some day I'll graduate.

Stating a Probable Action

The Spanish future tense is used to indicate probability.

Lloverá en la tarde.	It will probably rain this afternoon.
Los muchachos llegarán tarde.	The boys will probably be late.
Te llamará esta noche.	He'll probably call you tonight.
Iré al centro la próxima semana.	I'll probably go downtown next week.

Stating Conjecture

The Spanish future tense is used to indicate conjecture about a present state or situation.

Estarás cansada.	You must be tired.
Serán las seis.	It must be about 6 o'clock.
Estarán enojados.	They're probably mad.
Estarán llegando ahora.	They must be arriving about now.

Expressing “I wonder . . .”

The future tense is used in a question to indicate speculation about a present action.

¿Dónde estará mi hermano?	I wonder where my brother is.
¿Qué hora será?	I wonder what time it is.

ALTERNATIVE CONSTRUCTION FOR EXPRESSING FUTURE ACTIONS

In Spanish, as in English, plans for the near future are usually expressed with a “going to” expression. The present tense of ir + a + infinitive is used.

Vamos a comprar una casa nueva. We're going to buy a new house.

The future tense in Spanish is not used to ask or offer favors. These and other uses of the English “will” should be expressed in the present tense in Spanish (see page 118).

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not assume that the future tense is the exact equivalent of the English future tense with “will.” Many uses of the English “will” are better expressed in Spanish in the present tense.

Clauses After the Future Tense

Expressing Intended or Expected Action

Certain expressions follow a present or future tense verb to indicate action intended or expected in the future. These expressions are followed by a clause with the verb in the present subjunctive (see pages 170–171).

cuando	when (as soon as)	hasta que	until en cuanto	as soon as	antes que	before tan pronto como	as soon as	después que	after
mientras	when/while (at the same time as)

ENGLISH PATTERN subject + future verb + time expression

SPANISH PATTERN (subject) + future verb + time expression
 + present subjunctive verb

Te sentirás mejor cuando salgas del hospital.

You'll feel better when you leave the hospital.

Lo llamaré en cuanto llegue
a casa.

I'll call him as soon as I get home.

Ella estará bien tan pronto como reciba una carta.

She'll be okay as soon as she gets a letter.

Comeremos antes que regresen los otros.

We'll eat before the others get back.

Estudiaré después que termine este programa.

I'll study after this program is over.

Viviremos en esta casa hasta que se vayan nuestros hijos.

We'll live in this house until our children leave.

Nos divertiremos mientras estén ustedes en la ciudad.

We'll have a good time when you all are in town.

AVOID THE Blunder

When these Spanish expressions appear in clauses after a verb in the future tense, they are followed by a subjunctive verb, not a verb in the indicative.

X cuando sales

X después que termina

X en cuanto llego

X hasta que se van

X tan pronto como recibe

X mientras están

X antes que regresan

Expressing Conditional Future Action

Certain expressions indicate conditions on which future action depends. These expressions introduce a clause with the verb in the present subjunctive (see pages 172–173).

con tal (de) que provided that, as long as siempre y cuando provided that, as long as sin que without (something happening/someone knowing)

a menos que unless en caso (de) que if it should happen that, in case

ENGLISH PATTERN subject + future verb + conditional marker

SPANISH PATTERN (subject) + future verb + conditional marker
 + present subjunctive verb

Le prestaré el dinero con tal
(de) que me lo devuelva.

I'll lend him the money as long as he returns it.

Haremos una fiesta siempre y cuando los niños se porten
bien.

We'll have a party provided the children behave.

Trabajará sin que mi familia lo sepa.

*I'll work without my family

He will travel this summer unless he has to work.

Llevará su licencia en caso (de) que quiera manejar.

He'll take his license in case he wants to drive.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the present indicative tense after these expressions when they appear in clauses after a verb in the future tense.

- X con tal de que me lo devuelva
- X siempre y cuando se portan bien
- X sin que mi familia lo sabe
- X a menos que tengo que trabajar
- X en caso que quiere manejar

Both the conditional markers si “if” and por si acaso “just in case” are followed by a verb in the present indicative, not the subjunctive.

Haremos una fiesta si los niños se portan bien.

We'll have a party if the children behave.

Viajará este verano si no tiene que trabajar.

He'll travel this summer if he doesn't have to work.

Llevará su licencia por si acaso quiere manejar.

He'll take his license just in case he wants to drive.

AVOID THE Blunder

- X si los niños se porten bien
- X si no tenga que trabajar

Expressing the Purpose of Future Action

Certain conjunctions indicate the purpose of future action. These expressions are followed by a clause with the verb in the present subjunctive.

para que	so that (expected result)
a fin de que	so that (hoped-for result)

Mi papá me manda dinero para que pueda ir a visitarlo.

Nos vamos a acostar temprano esta noche a fin de que nos podamos despertar temprano mañana.

My father sends me money so I can go visit him.

We're going to bed early tonight so we can wake up early tomorrow.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the present indicative tense after the expressions para que and a fin de que.

X para que puede ir

X a fin de que puedo comprarlo

Uses of the Future Perfect Tense

Predicting Termination of Future Action

The future perfect is used to predict action that will have terminated by a certain future time.

En una semana ya se habrá casado.

In a week he will have already gotten married.

En julio ya me habré graduado.

In July I will have already graduated.

Stating Conjecture About Past Action

The future perfect is used to indicate conjecture about past action.

Habréas trabajado mucho.

You must have worked hard.

Nos habrán visto.

They must have seen us.

Uses of the Conditional

Speculating About the Past

The conditional in Spanish is used in a question to indicate speculation about a past situation.

¿Qué hora sería?

I wonder what time it was.

(What time would it have been?)

¿Dónde estarían mis amigos?

I wonder where my friends were.

(Where would my friends have been?)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not try to translate “I wonder.” Use the conditional in a question instead.

Indicating Probability About Past Action

The conditional is used to indicate the probability of a past situation.

Serían las dos y media.

It must have been about 2:30.

Estarían en el centro.

They were probably downtown.

Tendría hambre.

He must have been hungry.

Mario sabría la verdad.

Mario probably knew the truth.

Expressing Conditional Action

The conditional is used in connection with si and the imperfect subjunctive (see page 195) to express conjecture.

—¿Qué haría usted si fuera el jefe?

“What would you do if you were the boss?”

—Yo sería más organizado.

“I would be more organized.”

—¿Adónde irían ustedes si tuvieran vacaciones?

“Where would you all go if you had time off?”

—Iríamos a Chile.

“We would go to Chile.”

—¿Qué comprarías si tuvieras más dinero?

“What would you buy if you had more money?”

—Compraría un coche nuevo.

“I would buy a new car.”

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a past tense in the indicative after a conditional followed by si, as you would in English. Use the imperfect subjunctive instead.

X ¿Adónde irían ustedes si tenían vacaciones?

X ¿Qué comprarías si tenías más dinero?

Do not use an accent mark on si in these constructions.

X ¿Qué haría sí fuera el jefe?

Exercise

A Use the simple conditional to express the following in Spanish.

1. You must have been cold.

2. She was probably sick.

3. If I were you, I wouldn't go out.

4. If I had more money, I would buy a house.

5. What would you do?

Uses of the Conditional Perfect

Expressing “I wonder . . .”

The conditional perfect in Spanish is used in a question to indicate speculation about an action completed in the past.

¿Qué habrían hecho?	I wonder what they would have done.
¿Qué habría dicho tu papá?	I wonder what your father would have said.

Indicating Probability

The conditional perfect is used to indicate the probability of a past action.

Ellos habrían luchado.	They would have struggled.
Mi papá habría dicho la verdad.	My dad would have told the truth.

Expressing Conjecture

The conditional perfect is used in connection with si and the pluperfect subjunctive (see page 198) to express conjecture about the past.

— ¿Qué habrías hecho si hubieras sido el jefe?	“ What would you have done if you had been the boss? ”
— Habría sido más organizado.	“ I would have been more organized. ”
— ¿Adónde habrían ido si hubieran tenido más tiempo?	“ Where would you all have gone if you had had more time? ”
— Habríamos ido a la Argentina también.	“ We would have gone to Argentina as well. ”

The conditional perfect can also be used after the expression de + haber + past participle to express conjecture about the past.

De haberlo conocido antes, te lo habría presentado.

*If I had known him before,
I would have introduced him to you.*

De haber oído ese rumor, se lo habría dicho.

*If I had heard that rumor,
I would have told him.*

Exercise

*This triggers use of the imperfect subjunctive.

In Spanish, verbs are expressed in the subjunctive mood according to set patterns when the subject feels some emotion, uncertainty, or desire about the action or situation. The subject's feelings are expressed with an indicative verb in a beginning clause that triggers use of the subjunctive in the clause that follows.

Review the expressions that trigger use of the subjunctive in the chart above.

Uses of the Present Subjunctive

When the verb that triggers subjunctive use is in the present or future tense, the verb in the clause that follows is in the present subjunctive.

Expressing What Seems Not to Exist

The present subjunctive in Spanish is used to express that somebody or something doesn't exist, at least in the opinion of the speaker.

No hay ningún trabajo que me interese. There is no job that interests me.

No veo nada que me guste. I don't see anything I like.

No hay nadie que me comprenda. There is nobody who understands me.

No existe nadie que cocine mejor. There's nobody who cooks better.

AVOID THE Blunder

~~X~~ No hay nada que me gusta.

~~X~~ No hay nadie que me comprende.

~~X~~ No conozco a nadie que vive aquí.

Expressing Desired Characteristics

The present subjunctive is used to describe the characteristics desired in someone or something, but the actual person or object sought is as yet unknown.

INDICATIVE

Busco a mi amigo que habla español.

I'm looking for my friend who speaks Spanish.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Busco un amigo que hable español.

I'm looking for a (possible) friend who speaks Spanish.

INDICATIVE

Nuestros amigos tienen una casa que tiene piscina.

Our friends have a house that has a swimming pool.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Nosotros queremos una casa que tenga piscina.

We want (to find) a house that has a swimming pool.

INDICATIVE

Germán tiene un puesto que le paga bien.

Germán has a job that pays him well.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Germán necesita un puesto que le pague bien.

Germán needs (to find) a job that pays him well.

AVOID THE Blunder

Use the indicative if you can picture the actual person or item in question. Use the subjunctive if you only have an idea about what the wished-for person or item should be like.

✗ Busco un asistente que habla español.

✗ Germán quiere un puesto que le paga bien.

- The “personal a,” indicating that the direct object is a person, is not used when the person is as yet unknown.

INDICATIVE

Necesito a mi novio, quien me comprende.

I need my boyfriend, who understands me.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Necesito un novio que me comprenda.

I need (to find) a boyfriend who understands me.

Nevertheless, the “personal a” is used before alguien and nadie when they are direct objects, even if they are unknown.

Busco a alguien que me pueda ayudar.

No he encontrado a nadie que sepa hacer esto.

I'm looking for somebody who can help me.

I haven't found anybody who knows how to do this.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Busco mi amiga Susana.

✗ Busco alguien.

✗ No busco nadie.

Expressing Desire for Action

The subjunctive is used when the subject expresses a desire for action by another person or other people.

Quiero que estudies.

María prefiere que te vayas.

Esperamos que no lleguen tarde.

Mis padres prefieren que trabaje con ellos.

Ojalá que no llueva.

Ojalá que podamos vernos este verano.

I want you to study.

María would like you to leave.

We hope they don't arrive late.

My parents prefer that I work with them.

I hope it doesn't rain. (May God grant that it not rain.)

I hope we will be able to see each other this summer. (May God grant that we see each other this summer.)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not translate the English construction word for word.

✗ Quiero tú estudiar.

✗ Esperamos que no llegan tarde.

✗ Ojalá que no llueve.

When the action of the second verb is to be performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used instead of the subjunctive.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

Quiero estudiar.

I want to study.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

Quiero que estudies.

I want you to study.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

Preferimos comer aquí.

We prefer to eat here.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

Preferimos que coma aquí.

We prefer that he eat here.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

(Ella) espera ser médico.

She hopes to be a doctor.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

(Ella) espera que (él) sea médico.

She hopes he will be a doctor.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

Espero poder ir a la fiesta.

I hope I can go to the party.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

Espero que puedas ir a la fiesta.

I hope you can go to the party.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Ella espera que (ella misma) pueda ser médico.

✗ Preferimos que (él) come aquí.

Expressing Attempt to Control an Action

The present subjunctive is used to indicate an attempt to control the actions of others.

ENGLISH PATTERN subject + verb + direct object + infinitive

SPANISH PATTERN (subject) + indirect object + verb + que
 + subjunctive verb

The subject has one of several different intentions:

- To make a request

Te pido que me acompañes.

I'm asking you to go with me.

Les ruego que me dejen ir.

I beg you all to let me go.

Me suplica que lo perdone.

He begs me to forgive him.

Le implora que tenga paciencia.

He begs her to be patient.

- To give advice

El consejero me recomienda que estudie un idioma.

The counselor recommends that I study a language.

Yo te sugiero que vayas a casa.

I suggest that you go home.

El médico le aconseja que pierda peso.

The doctor advises her to lose weight.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the infinitive to indicate requests or to give advice.

- X Pido a ti acompañarme.
- X Sugiero a ti ir a casa.

- To make a demand

El jefe nos exige que trabajemos.

La maestra le manda a él que se siente.

El oficial les ordena a ellos que marchen.

Mi madre me dice que la ayude.

The boss demands that we work.

The teacher orders him to sit down.

The officer orders them to march.

My mother tells me to help her.

This construction is an alternative to the infinitive construction described on pages 99–100. Both patterns are correct.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not leave out the indirect object pronoun.

- X El jefe exige que trabajemos.
- X La maestra manda a él que se siente.
- X El oficial ordena a ellos que marchen.

- To prohibit an action

Sus padres les prohíben que se casen.

El guardia nos impide que entremos.

Their parents forbid them to marry.

The guard stops us from entering.

This construction is an alternative to the infinitive construction described on pages 99–100. Both patterns are correct.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not leave out the indirect object pronoun.

- X Sus padres prohíben que se casen.
- X El guardia impide que entremos.

Expressing Feelings About a Fact

The subjunctive is used when there is an expression of personal feeling or emotion about a fact.

Es fantástico que estés aquí conmigo.	It's fantastic that you're here with me.
Es una lástima que te vayas.	It's a shame that you're leaving.
Me alegro mucho de que te sientas mejor.	I'm so glad you feel better.
Siento mucho que no te guste.	I'm sorry you don't like it.

When expressing emotion, if the second verb indicates an action performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction after a preposition is used instead of the subjunctive after que (see page 97).

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

Estoy contenta de estar aquí. I'm glad I'm here.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

Estoy contenta que estés aquí. I'm glad you're here.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

Siento no poder visitarte. I'm sorry I can't visit you.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

Siento que no puedas visitarme. I'm sorry you can't visit me.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Estoy contenta que estoy aquí.

✗ Siento que no puedo visitarte.

Expressing Doubt

The subjunctive is used when there is an expression of doubt, possibility, impossibility, probability, or improbability in the present or future.

INDICATIVE

Creo que Julia viene mañana. I think Julia is coming tomorrow.

SUBJUNCTIVE

No creo que Julia venga mañana. I don't think Julia is coming tomorrow.

INDICATIVE

Estoy segura de que es Martín. I'm sure it's Martín.

SUBJUNCTIVE

No estoy segura de que sea Martín. I'm not sure it's Martín.

INDICATIVE

Es cierto que es su novio.

It's certain that he's her boyfriend.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Es imposible que sea su novio.

It's not possible that he's her boyfriend.

INDICATIVE

No hay duda de que es un buen curso.

There's no doubt that it's a good course.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Dudo que sea buen curso.

I doubt it's a good course.

INDICATIVE

Sé que está en su casa.

I know she's at home.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Tal vez/ Quizá(s) no esté en su casa.

Maybe she's not at home.

AVOID THE Blunder

Use the indicative to indicate certainty, the subjunctive to indicate uncertainty.

✗ No creo que Julia viene mañana.

✗ Creo que Julia venga mañana.

Expressing the Time of a Future Action

The subjunctive is used after certain expressions that indicate the time of future action.

- cuando and mientras when they refer to a future action

Te llamo / Te voy a llamar / Te llamaré cuando no estés
ocupada.

I'll call you when you're not busy.

Te lo digo cuando llegues a casa.
Mis primos visitarán todos los museos mientras estén aquí.

I'll tell you when you get home.
My cousins will go to all the museums while they're here.

When cuando or mientras indicates simultaneous action, it is followed by a verb in the indicative.

Siempre me llamas cuando estoy
ocupada.

You always call me when I'm busy.

En la mañana, mientras Claudio prepara el desayuno, Natalia lee el periódico.

In the morning, while Claudio prepares breakfast, Natalia reads the newspaper.

AVOID THE Blunder

- X Te lo digo cuando llegas a casa.
- X Siempre me llamas cuando esté ocupada.

■ en cuanto and tan pronto como

Vamos a empezar en cuanto vengan los otros.

Ella se casará tan pronto como se gradúe.

We're going to start as soon as the others get here.

She will get married as soon as she graduates.

■ antes que and después que

Ricardo se graduará antes que su hermana empiece a estudiar.

Vamos de vacaciones después que Ricardo se gradúe.

Ricardo will graduate before his sister begins her studies.

We're going on vacation after Ricardo graduates.

When expressing “before” or “after,” if the second verb indicates action to be performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction after a preposition is used instead of the subjunctive after que (see page 97).

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (antes de)

Comeremos antes de irnos. We'll eat before we leave.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (antes que)

Comeremos antes que se vaya él. We'll eat before he leaves.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (después de)

Ella va a lavar los platos después de comer. She's going to wash the dishes after she eats.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (después que)

Ella va a lavar los platos después que comamos. She's going to wash the dishes after we eat.

AVOID THE Blunder

- X Comeremos antes que nos vamos.
- X Comeremos antes que se va él.

■ basta que

Margarita va a estudiar hasta que tenga su doctorado.

Margarita is going to study until she gets her doctorate.

Expressing Conditions Required for the Occurrence of an Action

The subjunctive is used after certain expressions that indicate the conditions necessary for the occurrence of some other action.

■ siempre y cuando

Nos pagarán siempre y cuando terminemos el trabajo.

They'll pay us if and when we finish the job.

■ siempre que

El niño puede ver televisión siempre que haga sus tareas primero.

The boy can watch television as long as he does his homework first.

■ con tal (de) que

Te enseño a tocar la guitarra con tal de que me ayudes con la computadora.

I'll teach you to play the guitar provided you help me with the computer.

When using con tal, if the second verb indicates action to be performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used after a preposition instead of the subjunctive after que (see page 97).

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (con tal de)

Iré contigo con tal de no tener que volver sola. I'll go with you as long as I don't have to come back alone.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (con tal (de) que)

Iré contigo con tal de que vuelvas conmigo. I'll go with you as long as you come back with me.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Nos pagarán siempre y cuando terminamos.
- ✗ El niño puede ver televisión siempre que hace sus tareas.
- ✗ Iré contigo con tal que no tengo que volver sola.

■ a menos que

Te llamaré a menos que no funcione mi celular.

I'll call you unless my cell phone doesn't work.

■ en caso (de) que

Llévate el paraguas en caso de que llueva.

Take your umbrella in case it rains.

Les voy a dar mi número en caso de que necesiten algo. I'm going to give you all my number in case you need anything.

Expressing Avoidance of Interference

The present subjunctive is used after sin que to indicate the avoidance of interference with the action of the first verb.

Voy a leer la novela en clase sin que la maestra se dé cuenta. I'm going to read the novel in class without the teacher noticing it.

Ella va a salir con el chico sin que su madre lo sepa. She's going to go out with the guy without her mother knowing about it.

When using sin, if the second verb indicates action performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used instead of the subjunctive (see page 97).

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (sin)

Quiero practicar sin molestar a nadie. I want to practice without bothering anyone.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (sin que)

Quiero practicar sin que nadie me escuche. I want to practice without anybody listening to me.

Expressing Purpose of Action

The present subjunctive is used after para que and a fin de que to indicate the purpose of the action of the first verb.

Felipe le va a mandar un boleto a su madre para que ella lo visite. Felipe is going to send a ticket to his mother so she can visit him.

Te doy la dirección de mi amigo a fin de que puedas localizarlo cuando llegues. I'll give you my friend's address so that you can contact him when you arrive.

When expressing purpose, if the second verb indicates action performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used instead of the subjunctive.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (para)

Su mamá trabaja para poder estudiar. His mother works so she can study.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (para que)

Su mamá trabaja para que él pueda estudiar. His mother works so he can study.

AVOID THE Blunder

- X Su mamá trabaja para que (ella misma) pueda estudiar.
- X Su mamá trabaja para que él puede estudiar.

Commands

The present subjunctive is used in the formation of some commands.

Review the forms in the chart on page 163.

Object pronouns are attached to the end of affirmative commands. An accent mark must be added to the stressed syllable of the verb.

Cómalo.	Eat it.
Abríguese.	Put your coat on. (Wrap yourself up.)
Dígaselo.	Tell it to him.
Váyanse de aquí.	Get out of here.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not attach object pronouns to the verb in negative commands.

- X no cómalo
- X no siéntense
- X no déselo

Affirmative commands of the verbs ir and irse in the nosotros form use the indicative instead of the subjunctive.

Vamos al cine.	Let's go to the movies.
Vámonos.	Let's go./Let's leave.

As an alternative to the nosotros command for other verbs, vamos a plus the infinitive can be used.

Comamos.	}	Let's eat.
Vamos a comer.
Sentémonos aquí.	}	Let's sit here.
Vamos a sentarnos aquí.

Negative commands of the verbs ir and irse use the subjunctive.

No vayamos al cine.	Let's not go to the movies.
No nos vayamos.	Let's not leave.

Note that the present subjunctive tense of haber is irregular.
Be sure to learn the irregular past participle forms.

- ✗ que yo ha decidido
- ✗ que él ha escrito

Uses of the Preterite Perfect Subjunctive

The preterite perfect subjunctive is used to express present or future emotion, doubt, hope, and other feelings about what may or may not have occurred in the past. It follows a “subjunctive signal” that is expressed in the present or future tense.

Expressing What Seems Not to Have Existed

The subjunctive is used to express what—at least for the speaker or writer—doesn’t exist. The preterite perfect subjunctive describes that person or thing according to something that may or may not have occurred in the past.

No veo a nadie que haya estudiado conmigo el año pasado.

I don't see anybody who studied with me last year.

No hay ninguna receta aquí que haya sido comprobada en la cocina.

There isn't a single recipe here that's been kitchen-tested.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget the “personal a” before nadie.

- ✗ No veo nadie que haya estudiado conmigo.
- ✗ No conozco nadie que haya vivido aquí.

Expressing Desired Characteristics Based on Experience

Contrary to English usage, the subjunctive is used in Spanish to refer to someone who is needed by the subject, but who is as yet unknown to him or her. The preterite perfect subjunctive describes what kind of person this could be by telling what he or she has already done.

Necesito a alguien que haya vivido en ese pueblo.
 Busco un asistente que haya estudiado español.
 Quiero un novio que haya empezado su carrera.

*I need someone who has lived in that town.
 I'm looking for an assistant who has studied Spanish.
 I want a boyfriend who has already started his career.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget the “personal a” before alguien.

X Necesito alguien que haya vivido allí.

Do not use an indicative form, as you would in English. Use the subjunctive instead.

X Busco un asistente que ha estudiado español.

X Quiero un novio que ha empezado su carrera.

Expressing Other Desired Characteristics

The subjunctive in Spanish is also used to refer to something that is needed by the subject, but is as yet unknown to him or her. A passive construction in the preterite perfect subjunctive is used to describe what is desired according to what has been done to it.

Queremos un apartamento que haya sido pintado recientemente.

We want an apartment that has been painted recently.

Busco los exámenes que no hayan sido corregidos.

I'm looking for the exams that haven't been corrected.

AVOID THE Blunder

X Queremos un apartamento que ha sido pintado.

X Busco los exámenes que no han sido corregidos.

Expressing Hopes About a Past Event

The preterite perfect subjunctive is used when the subject indicates a hope or wish about a past event.

Esperamos que no hayan llegado tarde.

We hope they didn't arrive late.

Ojalá que no haya llovido.

I hope it didn't rain.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a past indicative tense, as you would in English.

- ✗ Esperamos que no llegaron tarde.
- ✗ Ojalá que no llovió.

Expressing Present Feelings About the Past

The preterite perfect subjunctive is used when there is an expression of present feeling or emotion about a past occurrence.

Es fantástico que hayas estado aquí conmigo.	It's fantastic that you were here with me.
Es una lástima que se haya ido.	It's a shame that he left.
Me alegro que te hayas mejorado.	I'm glad you got better.
Siento mucho que no te haya gustado.	I'm very sorry you didn't like it.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Es una lástima que se fue.
- ✗ Me alegro que te mejoraste.

When the second verb expresses an action performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction (haber + past participle) is used instead of the subjunctive.

ONE PERSON

Ella está contenta de haber estado aquí.	She's glad she was here.
---	---------------------------------

TWO DIFFERENT PEOPLE

Ella está contenta que hayas estado aquí.	She's glad you were here.
--	----------------------------------

ONE PERSON

Siento no haber podido visitarte.	I'm sorry I couldn't visit you.
-----------------------------------	--

TWO DIFFERENT PEOPLE

Siento que no hayas podido visitarme.	I'm sorry you couldn't visit me.
--	---

Expressing Present Doubt About Past Action

The preterite perfect subjunctive is used when there is a present expression of doubt, possibility, impossibility, probability, or improbability about what occurred in the past.

- | | |
|--|--|
| No creo que Julia haya ido
a la fiesta. | I don't think Julia went to the party. |
| No estoy segura que haya sido
Martín. | I'm not sure it was Martín. |
| Es imposible que haya ocurrido
eso. | It's not possible that that happened. |
| Dudo que haya sido muy buen curso. | I doubt that it was a very good course. |

AVOID THE Blunder

When there is present doubt about a past occurrence, do not use a past indicative tense, as you would in English.

- ✗ No creo que Julia fue a la fiesta.
- ✗ No estoy segura que era Martín.

Expressing Possibility of Occurrence

The preterite perfect subjunctive is used after the following expressions to indicate what may or may not have happened at some future time.

■ siempre y cuando

Nos pagarán siempre y cuando hayamos terminado el trabajo.

They'll pay us only when we have finished the job.

■ con tal (de) que

El abogado lo va a ayudar con tal que le haya dicho toda la verdad.

The lawyer is going to help him provided he has told him the whole truth.

■ a menos que

Puedes ver la televisión después de cenar a menos que no hayas hecho tus tareas.

You can watch television after dinner unless you haven't done your homework.

■ en caso de que

He hecho una sopa en caso de que no hayas comido.

I made soup in case you haven't eaten.

■ basta que

Me quedaré en la casa de mis padres hasta que haya encontrado trabajo.

I'll stay at my parents' house until I have found a job.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the indicative with these expressions, as you would in English.

- ✗ Lláname cuando has solucionado el problema.
- ✗ Vamos a empezar en cuanto todos se han sentado.
- ✗ El abogado lo va a ayudar con tal que le ha dicho toda la verdad.
- ✗ Me quedaré en la casa de mis padres hasta que he encontrado trabajo.

Expressing Completion of Future Action

The preterite perfect subjunctive is used after cuando, en cuanto, and tan pronto como to indicate when future action will have been completed.

■ cuando

- | | |
|--|---|
| Llámame cuando hayas
solucionado el problema. | Vamos a celebrar cuando ellas
se hayan graduado. |
|--|---|

- | | |
|--|--|
| Call me when you have solved
the problem. | We'll celebrate when they have graduated. |
|--|--|

■ en cuanto

- Vamos a empezar en cuanto todos se hayan sentado.

- We're going to start as soon as everybody has sat down.*

■ tan pronto como

- Ella se casará tan pronto como su novio haya empezado
a trabajar.

- She will get married as soon as her boyfriend has started to work.*

The preterite perfect subjunctive is used after the following expressions when the verb in the first clause expresses future action and the subject of the second clause is different from that of the first. When the action is to be performed by the subject of the first verb, there is no que and an infinitive construction (haber + past participle) is used instead.

INFINITIVE—ONE PERSON (con tal de)

- Iré contigo al cine con tal de haber arreglado el coche.

- I'll go to the movies with you provided I have fixed the car.*

SUBJUNCTIVE—TWO DIFFERENT PEOPLE (con tal (de) que)

- Iré contigo al cine con tal que hayas arreglado el coche.

- I'll go to the movies with you provided you have fixed the car.*

INFINITIVE—ONE PERSON (antes de)

SUBJUNCTIVE—TWO DIFFERENT PEOPLE (antes que)

Lo sabremos antes que haya salido mi hermano. We'll find out before my brother has left.

INFINITIVE—ONE PERSON (después de)

Ella va a lavar los platos después de haber terminado de comer. She's going to wash the dishes after she has finished eating.

SUBJUNCTIVE—TWO DIFFERENT PEOPLE (después que)

Ella va a lavar los platos después que hayamos terminado de comer. She's going to wash the dishes after we have finished eating.

AVOID THE Blunder

Use the infinitive when the subjects are the same. Use the subjunctive when they are different.

- X Ella lo sabrá antes que ha salido.
- X Lo sabremos antes que ha salido mi hermano.

Review the forms in the charts on the preceding pages.

To form the imperfect subjunctive in Spanish, begin with the third-person plural form of the preterite indicative tense, delete the -ron ending, and add the endings -ra, -ras, etc.

Keep in mind the various irregularities in the formation of the preterite tense.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ estara
- ✗ leera
- ✗ dormiera
- ✗ tenera

Be sure to write an accent mark on the third-last syllable of nosotros forms.

- ✗ trabajaramos
- ✗ leyeramos
- ✗ vivieramos

Uses of the Imperfect Subjunctive

Review expressions that trigger the use of the subjunctive (see pages 158–160).

A subjunctive signal expressed in the imperfect or preterite tense is followed by a clause in the imperfect subjunctive that refers to a past action or situation.

Expressing What Seemed Not to Exist

The imperfect subjunctive in Spanish is used to indicate that—for the speaker—something or someone did not exist.

- No había ningún trabajo que me interesara.
No vi nada que me gustara.
No había nadie que me
comprendiera.
No existía nadie que cocinara mejor.

- There was no job that interested me.*
I didn't see anything I liked.
There was nobody who understood me.
There was nobody who cooked better.

Expressing Desired Characteristics

The imperfect subjunctive is used to describe the characteristics that were desired in someone or something, but the actual person or object sought was as yet unknown.

Buscaba/Busqué un asistente que hablara español.

I was looking for/looked for an assistant who spoke Spanish.

Queríamos una casa que tuviera piscina.

We wanted a house that had a swimming pool.

Germán necesitaba un trabajo que le pagara bien.

Germán needed a job that paid him well.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a past indicative tense in the second clause, as you would in English.

- ✗ Buscaba un asistente que hablaba español.
- ✗ Queríamos una casa que tenía piscina.

- The “personal a,” indicating that the direct object is a person, is not used when the person was as yet unknown.

INDICATIVE

Necesitaba a mi novio, quien me comprendía.

I needed my boyfriend, who understood me.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Necesitaba un novio que me
comprendiera.

I needed (to find) a boyfriend who understood me.

Nevertheless, the “personal a” is used before alguien and nadie when they are direct objects, even if they were unknown.

Buscaba a alguien que me pudiera ayudar.

I was looking for somebody who could help me.

No encontré a nadie que supiera hacer esto.

I didn't find anybody who knew how to do this.

Expressing Desire for Action

The imperfect subjunctive is used when the subject expresses a past desire for action by another person or other people.

Yo quería que estudiaras.

I wanted you to study.

María prefería que te fueras.

Maria wanted you to leave.

Esperábamos que no llegarán tarde.

We hoped they wouldn't arrive late.

Mis padres preferían que trabajara con ellos.

My parents preferred that I work with them.

When the action of the second verb is to be performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used instead of the subjunctive.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

Quería estudiar.

I wanted to study.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

Quería que estudiaras.

I wanted you to study.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

(Ella) esperaba ser médico.

She hoped to be a doctor.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

(Ella) esperaba que (él) fuera médico.

She hoped he would be a doctor.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ (Yo) quería que yo estudiara.

✗ Yo quería que tú estudiara.

✗ Ella esperaba que él sería médico.

✗ Ella esperaba que (ella misma) fuera médico.

Expressing Attempt to Control an Action

The imperfect subjunctive is used to indicate an attempt in the past to control the actions of others.

The subject has one of several different intentions:

- To report a past request

Te pedí que me acompañaras.

I asked you to go with me.

Les rogaba que me dejaran ir.

I begged you all to let me go.

Me suplicaba que lo perdonara.

He begged me to forgive him.

Le imploró que tuviera paciencia.

He begged her to be patient.

- To report past advice

El consejero me recomendó que estudiara un idioma.

The counselor recommended that I study a language.

Yo te sugerí que fueras a casa.

I suggested that you go home.

El médico le aconsejó que

The doctor advised her to lose perdiera peso.

weight.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the infinitive to indicate requests or to give advice.

X Pedí a ti acompañarme.

X Sugerí a ti ir a casa.

■ To report a past demand

El jefe nos exigió que trabajáramos.

La maestra le mandó que se sentara.

El oficial les ordenó que marcharan.

Mi madre me dijo que la ayudara.

The boss demanded that we work.

The teacher ordered him to sit down.

The officer ordered them to march.

My mother told me to help her.

This construction is an alternative to the infinitive construction described on page 99. Both patterns are correct.

■ To report a past prohibition

ENGLISH PATTERN subject + past-tense verb + direct object
+ infinitive

SPANISH PATTERN subject + indirect object
+ preterite or imperfect indicative verb
+ que + verb in imperfect subjunctive

Sus padres les prohibieron que se casaran.

Their parents forbade them to marry.

El guardia nos impedía que entráramos.

The guard stopped us from entering.

This construction is an alternative to the infinitive construction described on page 99. Both patterns are correct.

Expressing Past Feelings About Past Action

The imperfect subjunctive is used when there is an expression of past personal feeling or emotion about a fact.

Fue fantástico que estuvieras aquí conmigo.

It was fantastic that you were here with me.

Fue una lástima que se mudara.

It was a shame that he moved away.

Me alegraba mucho de que te sintieras mejor.

I was so glad you felt better.

Sentía mucho que no te gustara.

I was sorry you didn't like it.

When the second verb indicates an action performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used instead of the subjunctive.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

Estaba contenta de estar allí.

I was glad to be there.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

Estaba contenta que estuvieras allí.

I was glad you were there.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT

Sentía no poder visitarte.

I was sorry I couldn't visit you.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS

Sentía que no vinieras a visitarme.

I was sorry you didn't come to visit me.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ (Yo) estaba contenta que yo estuviera allí.

✗ Yo sentía que no pudiera visitarte.

Expressing Past Doubt

The imperfect subjunctive is used to indicate doubt, possibility, impossibility, probability, or improbability in the past.

INDICATIVE

Creía que Julia venía mañana.

I thought Julia was coming tomorrow.

SUBJUNCTIVE

No creía que Julia viniera.

I didn't think Julia was coming.

INDICATIVE

Estaba segura de que era Martín.

I was sure it was Martín.

SUBJUNCTIVE

No estaba segura de que fuera Martín.

I wasn't sure it was Martín.

INDICATIVE

Fue cierto que era su novio.

It was certain that he was her boyfriend.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Fue imposible que fuera su novio.

It wasn't possible that he was her boyfriend.

INDICATIVE

No había duda de que fue un buen curso.

There was no doubt that it was a good course.

SUBJUNCTIVE

Dudaba que fuera buen curso.

I doubted it was a good course.

AVOID THE Blunder

Use the indicative to indicate certainty, the subjunctive to indicate uncertainty.

- X Creía que Julia viniera mañana.
- X Estaba segura que fuera Martín.
- X No creía que Julia venía.
- X No estaba segura de que fue Martín.

Expressing the Time of a Later Action

The imperfect subjunctive is used after certain expressions that indicate the time of later action.

- cuando when it refers to later action

Te iba a llamar cuando no estuvieras ocupada.	I was going to call you when you weren't busy.
Se lo iba a decir cuando llegara a casa.	I was going to tell him when he got home.

When cuando indicates simultaneous action in the past, it is followed by a verb in the imperfect indicative.

Siempre me llamabas cuando estaba ocupada.	You always called me when I was busy.
Ella siempre me traía flores cuando venía a mi casa.	She always brought me flowers when she came to my house.

AVOID THE Blunder

- X Te iba a llamar cuando no estabas ocupada.
- X Se lo iba a decir cuando llegaba a casa.
- X Siempre me llamabas cuando estuviera ocupada.
- X Ella siempre me traía flores cuando viniera a mi casa.

- en cuanto and tan pronto como

Íbamos a empezar en cuanto vinieran los otros.	We were going to start as soon as the others got here.
Ella se iba a casar tan pronto como se graduara.	She was going to get married as soon as she graduated.

■ antes que and después que

Ricardo se graduó antes que su hermana empezara a estudiar.

Ricardo graduated before his sister began her studies.

Fuimos de vacaciones después que Ricardo se graduara.

We went on vacation after Ricardo graduated.

When expressing “before” or “after,” if the second verb indicates action to be performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used instead of the subjunctive.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (antes de)

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (antes que)

Comimos antes que se fuera mi hermano. We ate before my brother left.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (después de)

Ella lavó los platos después de comer. She washed the dishes after she ate.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (después que)

Ella lavó los platos después que comiéramos. She washed the dishes after we ate.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Comimos antes que salimos de casa.
- ✗ Ella lavó los platos después que comió.
- ✗ Comimos antes que se fue mi hermano.
- ✗ Ella lavó los platos después que comimos.

■ hasta que

Ricardo estudió hasta que supiera todos los datos importantes.

Ricardo studied until he knew all the important facts.

Expressing Conditions Necessary for the Occurrence of an Action

The imperfect subjunctive is used to indicate the conditions that were necessary for the occurrence of some other action.

■ siempre y cuando

Nos pagaban siempre y cuando termináramos el trabajo.

They paid us if and when we finished the job.

■ con tal (de) que

Le enseñaba a tocar la guitarra con tal de que me ayudara con la computadora.

I taught him to play the guitar on the condition that he help me with the computer.

When using con tal, if the second verb indicates action to be performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used instead of the subjunctive.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (con tal de)

La ayudaba con su tarea con tal de repasar un poco las lecciones.

He helped her with her homework so he could review the lessons a bit.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (con tal (de) que)

La ayudaba con su tarea con tal de que ella le prestara su coche.

He helped her with her homework provided she would lend him her car.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (con tal de)

Trabajaba mucho con tal de ganar dinero.

He worked a lot in order to earn money.

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (con tal (de) que)

Trabajaba mucho con tal de que su hija pudiera estudiar.

He worked a lot so that his daughter could study.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ La ayudaba con su tarea con tal de que podía repasar las lecciones.

✗ Trabajaba mucho con tal de que podía ganar dinero.

■ a menos que

Siempre me llamaba a las ocho a menos que no funcionara su celular.

He always called me at eight unless his cell phone wasn't working.

■ en caso (de) que

Las chicas llevaron el paraguas en caso que lloviera.
Les di mi número en caso de que necesitaran algo.

*The girls took the umbrella in case it rained.
I gave them my number in case they needed something.*

Expressing Past Avoidance of Interference

The imperfect subjunctive is used after sin que to indicate the avoidance of interference with an action in the past.

Iba a leer la novela en clase sin que la maestra se diera cuenta.	I was going to read the novel in class without the teacher noticing it.
Ella salió con el chico sin que su madre lo supiera.	She went out with the guy without her mother finding out.

When using sin, if the second verb indicates action performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used instead of the subjunctive.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (sin)

Quería practicar sin molestar a nadie.	I wanted to practice without bothering anyone.
--	---

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (sin que)

Quería practicar sin que nadie me molestara.	I wanted to practice without being bothered by anyone.
--	---

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Quería practicar sin molestando a nadie.

Expressing Past Purpose

The imperfect subjunctive is used after para que and a fin de que to indicate the purpose of the action of the first verb, which is in a past tense.

Felipe le mandó un boleto a su madre para que ella lo visitara.	Felipe sent his mother a ticket so she could visit him.
Te di la dirección de mi amigo a fin de que pudieras localizarlo cuando llegaras.	I gave you my friend's address so you could contact him when you arrived.

When expressing purpose, if the second verb indicates action performed by the subject of the first verb, an infinitive construction is used instead of the subjunctive.

INFINITIVE—SAME SUBJECT (para)

Su mamá trabajaba para poder estudiar.	His mother worked so she could study.
--	--

SUBJUNCTIVE—DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (para que)

Su mamá trabajaba para que él pudiera estudiar.	His mother worked so he could study.
---	---

AVOID THE Blunder

- X Su mamá trabajaba para que (ella misma) podía estudiar.
- X Su mamá trabajaba para que él podía estudiar.

Expressing What Appears to Be True

The imperfect subjunctive is used after como si to indicate an action or situation that appears to be true but isn't.

Ellos lo tratan como si fuera su hijo.
 Habla de la actriz como si la conociera.
 La chica sonríe como si no tuviera tantos problemas.

They treat him as if he were their son.
He talks about the actress as if he knew her.
The girl smiles as if she didn't have so many problems.

Expressing Wishes

The imperfect subjunctive is used after ojalá (que) to indicate a wish that something were true at the present time.

Ojalá que estuvieras aquí.
 Ojalá no lloviera tanto.

I wish you were here.
I wish it didn't rain so much.

Expressing “If Only”

The imperfect subjunctive is used after si to express the notion “if something were true.” A conditional clause, telling what would happen in such a case, usually accompanies this construction (see pages 153–154).

Si estuvieras aquí, nos divertiríamos.
 Si tuviera un coche, iría a la playa.
 Si pudieras viajar a Sudamérica, ¿a qué país irías primero?
 Si fueras rico, ¿qué harías con el dinero?

If you were here, we would have fun.
If I had a car, I would go to the beach.
If you could travel to South America, what country would you go to first?
If you were rich, what would you do with the money?

AVOID THE Blunder

- X Si podrías viajar...
- X Si podías viajar...
- X Si eras rico...

Expressing a Polite Request

The imperfect subjunctive of querer is used to make a polite request.

Quisiera hacerle una pregunta.
Quisiéramos hablar con el médico.

I would like to ask you a question.
We would like to speak with the doctor.

Uses of the Pluperfect Subjunctive

Expressing “If Only” Concerning Past Action

The pluperfect subjunctive in Spanish is used to express “if something had been true” in the past. A clause with a verb in the conditional perfect, indicating what would have occurred in such a case, usually accompanies this construction. (See page 156.)

Si tú me hubieras llamado, yo te habría ayudado.

If you had called me, I would have helped you.

Si yo lo hubiera visto, lo habría
saludado.

If I had seen him, I would have said hello.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the pluperfect indicative tense, as you would in English.

✗ Si me habías llamado...

✗ Si lo había visto...

Using the Pluperfect Subjunctive as an Alternative to the Conditional Perfect

The pluperfect subjunctive can be used as an alternative to the conditional perfect.

Si tú me hubieras llamado,
yo te hubiera ayudado.

*If you had called me, I would
have helped you.*

Si yo lo hubiera visto, lo hubiera
saludado.

If I had seen him, I would have said hello.

Expressing “Should Have”

The pluperfect subjunctive can be used to express “should have.”

¡Hubieras visto lo que pasó!

You should have seen what happened!

Uds. hubieran estado en clase hoy.

You guys should have been in class today.

Exercise

A Change the following sentences to indicate what would have happened if the first part had been true.

1. No lo quería. (me casé con él)

2. Él no me llamaba todas las noches. (no contestaba el teléfono)

3. No quisiste tocar el piano. (practicabas todos los días)

4. Mi papá no estuvo aquí. (me ayudó)

REPORTED SPEECH

Reported-speech expressions are used to relate someone's words without using a direct quote.

Expressing “Say”

Decir without an indirect object usually means “to say.” In Spanish, as in English, when reporting what someone “says,” the tense used in the original statement is also used in the reported-speech expression. When reporting what someone “said,” a past tense is used.

The indicative is used to report what someone says or said. The subjunctive is used to report what someone tells or told someone else to do.

TENSE OF ORIGINAL QUOTE	TENSE AFTER dice que	TENSE AFTER dijo que
INDICATIVE
PRESENT	PRESENT	IMPERFECT
“Trabajo duro”. “I work hard.”	Dice que trabaja duro. He says he works hard.	Dijo que trabajaba duro. He said he worked hard.
“Voy a trabajar duro”. “I’m going to work hard.”	Dice que va a trabajar duro. He says he’s going to work hard.	Dijo que iba a trabajar duro. He said he was going to work hard.

IMPERATIVE “¡Trabaje duro!” “Work hard!”	PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE Me dice que trabaje duro. He tells me to work hard.	IMPERFECT SUBJUNCTIVE Me dijó que trabajara duro. He told me to work hard.

AVOID THE Blunder

In English, “that” is optional in reported speech: “He says he worked hard./He says that he worked hard.” In Spanish, que is not optional.

- ✗ Dice va a trabajar.
- ✗ Dijo trabajaba.

Remember that in Spanish, if the ending punctuation is a period or comma, it is placed after the quotation marks. In English it is enclosed within the quotation marks.

- ✗ “Trabajé duro.”

Expressing “Ask”

Preguntar and pedir are both translated as “ask” and are both used with an indirect object pronoun. They follow the same patterns of reported speech as decir.

- Preguntar is used to ask a question and is followed by a verb in the indicative.
- Questions seeking information are expressed by using preguntar + question words (qué, quién, dónde, cuánto, cuándo, cómo, and por qué). (See pages 231–253.)

Me pregunta qué voy a hacer.
Me preguntó qué iba a hacer.

He asks me what I'm going to do.
He asked me what I was going to do.

Les pregunto dónde viven.
Les pregunté dónde vivían.

Le pregunta cuánto costó.
Le preguntó cuánto había costado.

Les preguntamos cuándo saldrán.
Les preguntamos cuándo saldrían.

Me preguntan cómo lo hacía.
Me preguntaban cómo lo hacía.

Les pregunto por qué lo han hecho.
Les pregunté por qué lo habían hecho.

*I ask them where they live.
I asked them where they lived.*

*He asks her how much it cost.
He asked her how much it (bad) cost.*

*We ask them when they'll leave.
We asked them when they would leave.*

*They ask me how I did it.
They asked me how I did it.*

*I ask them why they did it.
I asked them why they had done it.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget the accent mark in the question word.

- ✗ Les pregunto donde viven.
- ✗ Me pregunta que voy a hacer.

- Yes-or-no questions are expressed by using preguntar + si.

Le pregunto si vive cerca.	I ask him if he lives nearby.
Le pregunté si vivía cerca.	I asked him if he lived nearby.
Me preguntan si hablo español.	They ask me if I speak Spanish.
Me preguntaron si hablaba español.	They asked me if I spoke Spanish.
Les pregunta si trabajarán allá.	He asks them if they plan to work there.
Les preguntó si trabajarían allá.	He asked them if they would work there.

AVOID THE Blunder

When reporting what someone “asks,” use the same tense as in the original question. When reporting what someone “asked,” use a past tense.

- ✗ Le pregunté si vive cerca.
- ✗ Me preguntaron si hablo español.

■ Pedir is used to ask a favor and is followed by que + a verb in the subjunctive.

Me pide que lo acompañe.
Me pidió que lo acompañara.

He asks me to go with him.
He asked me to go with him.

Les pido que me disculpen.
Les pedí que me disculparan.

I ask them to forgive me.
I asked them to forgive me.

Les pide que la corrijan.
Les pidió que la corrigieran.

She asks them to correct her.
She asked them to correct her.

Nos piden que no hablemos.
Nos pidieron que no habláramos.

They ask us not to talk.
They asked us not to talk.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not confuse “ask a question” with “ask a favor.”

- ✗ Te pedí dónde vives.
- ✗ Me pregunta acompañarlo.
- ✗ Les pregunto disculparme.

Subjects

- Subjects can be nouns, pronouns, or infinitives.

In English and in Spanish, singular noun subjects, except for proper first names, are always preceded by an article or other determiner.

El libro está en la mesa.

The book is on the table.

La comida está lista.

The meal is ready.

Maria es simpática.

Maria is nice.

Mario está aquí.

Mario is here.

In Spanish, but not in English, names with a title are preceded by an article (see page 56).

El Sr. Gómez está aquí.

Mr. Gómez is here.

La señora Sánchez no está aquí.

Mrs. Sánchez isn't here.

La Dra. Campos es buena.

Dr. Campos is good.

La señorita Martínez es la jefa.

Miss Martínez is the boss.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Sr. Gómez está aquí.

✗ Señora Sánchez no está aquí.

In English, plural and noncount noun subjects are not preceded by “the” when all members of the noun class are intended. In Spanish, noun subjects are always preceded by an article or other determiner (see pages 53–79).

ENGLISH PATTERN — + plural or noncount noun

SPANISH PATTERN el/la + noncount noun

los/las + plural noun

La leche es buena fuente de calcio. Milk is a good source of calcium.

El tiempo vuela. Time flies.

Las ventanas son de vidrio. Windows are made of glass.

Los hombres son todos iguales. Men are all alike.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Leche es buena fuente de calcio.

✗ Tiempo vuela.

✗ Ventanas son de vidrio.

The definite article el is optional before an infinitive subject (see page 100).

(El) vivir aquí es difícil.
 (El) saber español lo ayudará.

Living here is hard.
Knowing Spanish will help him.

In Spanish, pronouns are used as subjects only for emphasis or clarification. The subject of the sentence is expressed in the conjugated ending of the verb (see individual verb tenses).

- To determine the subject of a sentence, first find the conjugated ending of the verb, then match it with the corresponding noun or pronoun, which may be in a previous sentence.

ENGLISH PATTERN I/you/he/she/it/we/they + verb

SPANISH PATTERN (subject pronoun) + verb with subject ending

NORMAL STATEMENT

Voy a pagar la cuenta.

I'm going to pay the bill.

STATEMENT WITH EMPHASIS ON THE SUBJECT

Yo voy a pagar la cuenta.

I (not you) am going to pay the bill.

NORMAL STATEMENT

Viene mañana.

She's coming tomorrow.

STATEMENT WITH EMPHASIS ON THE SUBJECT

Ella viene mañana.

She (not someone else) is coming tomorrow.

NORMAL STATEMENT

La visitamos con frecuencia.

We visit her often.

STATEMENT WITH EMPHASIS ON THE SUBJECT

Nosotros la visitamos con frecuencia.

We (others may not) visit her often.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not keep repeating subject pronouns. Once it is established who you are talking about, use the pronoun only for emphasis—the equivalent in English of underlining the word or saying it louder.

- ✗ Yo soy Ana. Yo soy de Nueva York y ahora yo vivo en Chicago.
 Yo trabajo en un restaurante.
- ✗ Elena es mi amiga. Ella vive muy cerca de mi casa y ella trabaja en la misma parte de la ciudad que yo.

- The Spanish subject is not necessarily at the beginning of a sentence.

ENGLISH PATTERN subject + verb + object + adverb
John calls me every day.

SPANISH PATTERN 1 subject + object + verb + adverb
Juan me llama todos los días.

SPANISH PATTERN 2 object + verb + subject + adverb
Me llama Juan todos los días.

SPANISH PATTERN 3 adverb + object + verb + subject
Todos los días me llama Juan.

Objects

In English, object pronouns have only one form (“me,” “you,” “him,” “her,” “it,” “us,” “them”) and are used to replace direct objects, indirect objects, and objects that follow prepositions. In Spanish, each type of object pronoun has its own set of forms, as well as different usage patterns.

Pronouns After Prepositions

In Spanish, the subject pronouns (except yo and tú) are used after prepositions.

Los regalos son para él.	The presents are for him.
Lo hicieron por ella.	They did it because of her.
Gracias a usted, estamos bien.	Thanks to you, we're okay.
¿Es la casa de ustedes?	Is it your house?
Fui al cine sin ellos.	I went to the movies without them.
Vamos con vosotros.	We're going with you all.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use direct object pronouns after prepositions.

X para lo
X para la
X de nos
X por los

The pronouns mí and ti are used for “me” and “you” after a preposition.

El regalo es para mí.
Lo hicieron por ti.

The present is for me.
They did it because of you.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use other object pronouns after prepositions.

- ✗ de me
- ✗ por te
- ✗ de yo
- ✗ para tú

There is an accent mark in mí to distinguish it from the possessive mi; there is no accent mark in ti.

- ✗ para mi
- ✗ para tí

Conmigo and contigo are used instead of con + mí and con + ti.

¿Vienes conmigo?	Are you coming with me?
Quiero hablar contigo.	I want to talk to you.

Consigo is used when the object of the preposition is the same person as the subject él, ella, usted, or ustedes.

Marcos llevó la maleta consigo.	Marcos took the suitcase with him.
¿Tiene usted los boletos consigo?	Do you have the tickets with you?
Ella trae la comida consigo.	She's bringing the food with her.
Traigan sus pasaportes consigo.	Bring your passports with you.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use consigo if the object of the preposition is a different person from the subject.

- ✗ Voy al cine consigo.
- ✗ ¿Vienes consigo?

Reflexive Pronouns

Reflexive pronouns indicate that the subject and the object are the same person or thing. They are placed before the conjugated verb.

Me miro en el espejo.
Ella se cuida.

I look at myself in the mirror.
She takes care of herself.

Los chicos se hieren.
Nos servimos en estas fiestas.

*The kids hurt themselves.
We serve ourselves at these parties.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not put the pronoun after the verb.

- ✗ Miro me.
- ✗ Ella cuida se.
- ✗ Los chicos hieren se.
- ✗ Servimos nos.

- When an infinitive construction (see page 96) or gerund construction (see page 113) is used, the reflexive pronoun can be placed either before its corresponding conjugated verb or attached to the end of the infinitive or gerund.

INFINITIVE CONSTRUCTION

Me voy a mirar en el espejo.
Voy a mirarme en el espejo. } I'm going to look at myself in the mirror.

GERUND CONSTRUCTION

Me estoy mirando en el espejo.
Estoy mirándome en el espejo. } I'm looking at myself in the mirror.

INFINITIVE CONSTRUCTION

Ella se va a cuidar.
Ella va a cuidarse. } She's going to take care of herself.

GERUND CONSTRUCTION

Ella se está cuidando.
Ella está cuidándose. } She's taking care of herself.

INFINITIVE CONSTRUCTION

Los chicos se van a herir.
Los chicos van a herirse. } The kids are going to hurt themselves.

GERUND CONSTRUCTION

Los chicos se están hiriendo.
Los chicos están hiriéndose. } The kids are hurting themselves.

INFINITIVE CONSTRUCTION

Nos vamos a servir.
Vamos a servirnos. } We're going to serve ourselves.

GERUND CONSTRUCTION

Nos estamos sirviendo.
Estamos sirviéndonos. } We're serving ourselves.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget to add an accent mark to the gerund if you have attached a reflexive pronoun.

~~X~~ mirandome ~~X~~ cuidandose
~~X~~ hirriendose ~~X~~ sirviendonos

Do not add an accent mark to the gerund if it does not have a pronoun attached.

~~X~~ mirándo ~~X~~ cuidándo
~~X~~ hiriéndo ~~X~~ sirviéndo

In affirmative commands (see page 163), the reflexive pronoun is attached to the end of the verb and an accent mark is added to the third-last syllable.

Síntate aquí.	Sit here.
Cúdese.	Take care of yourself.
Levántense, por favor.	Please stand up.

In negative commands (see page 163), the reflexive pronoun is placed between the no and the verb.

No te sientes aquí.	Don't sit here.
No se pierda.	Don't get lost.
No se levanten.	Don't get up.

■ Reflexive pronouns used with plural verbs can also indicate reciprocal action.

Los chicos se hieren (el uno al otro).	The kids hurt each other.
Nos servimos (el uno al otro).	We serve each other.

El uno al otro can be used to distinguish the reciprocal meaning from the reflexive meaning.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not try to translate the words “each other.” Use a plural reflexive pronoun (nos or se) (+ el uno al otro) to express this.

~~X~~ Los chicos hieren cada otro.

■ Many reflexive expressions in Spanish have equivalents in English that are not expressed in reflexive terms. Following are some examples.

TRANSITIVE VERBS		REFLEXIVE VERBS
VERB + DIRECT OBJECT NOUN OR PRONOUN		VERB + REFLEXIVE PRONOUN
acostar (ue)	put someone to bed	acostarse (ue)	lie down / go to bed afeitar	shave someone else	afeitarse	shave arreglar	arrange something	arreglarse	freshen up
bañar	bathe someone else	bañarse	take a bath
despertar (ie)	wake someone up	despertarse (ie)	wake up
divertir (ie, i)	entertain someone	divertirse (ie, i)	have a good time levantar	get someone up / lift something	levantarse	get up llamar	call someone	llamarse	be named preocupar	worry someone	preocuparse	worry sentar (ie)	seat someone	sentarse (ie)	sit down
cansar	tire someone out	cansarse	get tired emocionar	excite someone	emocionarse	get excited enfadarse	make someone mad	enfadarse	get mad
enfriar	cool something	enfríarse	get cold
enojar	make someone mad	enojarse	get mad organizar	organize something	organizarse	get organized
vestir (i, i)	dress someone else	vestirse (i, i)	get dressed

Despertamos a los chicos a las nueve.

We wake the kids up at nine.

Nos despertamos a las ocho.

We wake up at eight.

El payaso divierte a los niños.
Los niños se divierten en el parque.

*The clown entertains the children.
The children have fun (entertain themselves) at the park.*

Su mamá lo llama todos los días.
El niño se llama Nicolás.

*His mother calls him every day.
The child's name is Nicolás.*

Mi prima me preocupa mucho.
Me preocupo mucho por mi prima.

*My cousin worries me a lot.
I worry a lot about my cousin.*

El oficial me enfadó.
Me enfadé con el oficial.

*The officer made me mad.
I got mad at the officer.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Note that in Spanish you do not say “I get dressed,” but rather “I dress myself.” Do not try to translate “up,” “down,” “get,” “take,” or “have” in this type of expression. Use the reflexive verb instead.

- ✗ Despertamos arriba a los niños.
- ✗ Los niños tienen diversión en el parque.
- ✗ Los niños tienen un buen tiempo en el parque.
- ✗ Conseguí enfadarme con el oficial.

In Spanish you can say su nombre es _____ or mi nombre es _____. To express the same meaning with llamarse, you must use the reflexive pattern.

(Yo) me llamo John.	(Nosotros) nos llamamos John y Sara.
¿(Tú) te llamas María?	¿(Vosotros) os llamáis María y Elena?
¿(Usted) se llama Eduardo?	¿(Ustedes) se llaman Eduardo y Javier?
(Él) se llama José.	(Ellos) se llaman José y Francisco.
(Ella) se llama Margarita.	(Ellas) se llaman Margarita y Julia.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Su llamo es Nicolás.
- ✗ Mi llamo es John.

■ A reflexive construction is used when indicating action to or on one’s own body. Unlike English, Spanish uses a definite article rather than a possessive (see page 59).

Me lavo la cara.	I wash my face.
Se lava los dientes.	She brushes (washes) her teeth.
Nos pintamos las uñas.	We polish our nails.
Se pintan el pelo.	They color their hair.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Lavo mi cara.
- ✗ Se lava sus dientes.
- ✗ Pintan su pelo.

- Certain verbs have different meanings when used with reflexive pronouns. Following are some examples.

acordar (ue)	decide	acordarse (ue) de	remember aprovechar de	take advantage of an opportunity	aprovecharse de	take advantage of a person
burlar	evade	burlarse de	make fun of comer	eat	comerse	eat up
despedir (i, i)	fire someone	despedirse (i, i) de	say good-bye to
dormir (ue, u)	sleep	dormirse (ue, u)	fall asleep
negar (ie)	deny	negarse a (ie)	refuse to ofrecer	offer something to someone	ofrecerse a/para	offer to do something
quedar	result in, fit, agree	quedarse	remain
sentir (ie, i)	be sorry	sentirse (ie, i)	feel

El jefe despidió a tres empleados.
The boss fired three employees.
El jefe se despidió.
The boss said good-bye.

Duermo ocho horas.
I sleep eight hours.
Me duermo en el coche.
I fall asleep in the car.

Ese vestido te queda bien.
That dress fits you well.
Mi hermana se queda aquí.
My sister is staying here.

Quedamos en vernos esta tarde.
We agreed to meet this afternoon.
Nos quedamos con ustedes.
We're staying with you all.

Siento no poder acompañarte.
I'm sorry I can't go with you.
Me siento muy mal.
I feel really bad.

AVOID THE Blunder

Be sure you know the different meanings indicated by a reflexive pronoun.

- ✗ Mi hermana queda aquí.
- ✗ Siento muy mal.

- A few verbs that do not have a reflexive meaning must nevertheless be used with reflexive pronouns. Following are some examples.

arrepentirse (ie, i)	regret obstinarsel en	stand firm on, insist on
quedarse	remain, stay
quejarse	complain
reírse (i, i)	laugh

Me arrepiento de haberlo dicho.
 Los profesores se obstinan en no cambiar la fecha del examen.
 Me quedo aquí contigo.
 Los alumnos se quejan de la comida.
 Nos reímos mucho anoche.

I regret having said that.
The professors stand firm on not changing the date of the exam.
I'm staying here with you.
The students complain about the food.
We laughed a lot last night.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not try to find a reflexive meaning in these verbs, but do always use reflexive pronouns with them.

- ✗ Arrepiento de haberlo dicho.
- ✗ Los alumnos quejan.
- ✗ Reímos.

Direct Objects

A direct object can be a noun, a pronoun, or an infinitive (see page 99).

- As in English, direct object nouns may follow the verb.

Compramos la casa.	We bought the house.
Juan perdió dinero.	Juan lost money.
Vi una película.	I watched a movie.
Ganaron el partido.	They won the game.

In contrast to English, direct object nouns may precede the verb in Spanish. This word order requires including a direct object pronoun as well as the direct object noun.

La casa la compramos ayer.	We bought the house yesterday.
El dinero lo perdió Juan.	Juan lost the money.
Esa película la vi anoche.	I saw that movie last night.
El partido lo ganaron los Tigres.	The Tigers won the game.

When the direct object is a person, the preposition a must precede the person's name or any other noun that refers to that person. This a has no English translation (see pages 261–262).

Miguel ayuda a María.
Vimos a su hermano.
Reconozco al Sr. García.
Visitaron a sus amigos.

Miguel helps María.
We saw his brother.
I recognize Mr. García.
They visited their friends.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Miguel ayuda María.
- ✗ Reconozco Sr. García.
- ✗ Vimos su hermano.

Remember that mirar means “look at,” buscar means “look for,” and esperar means “wait for” (see page 104). No preposition is necessary unless the direct object is a person. The “personal a” is a signal that the direct object is a person. Compare the following sentences.

Carlos mira el coche.
Carlos mira a su papá.
Busco un apartamento.
Busco a Pepe.
Espera un cheque.
Espera a su esposo.

Carlos is looking at the car.
Carlos is looking at his dad.
I'm looking for an apartment.
I'm looking for Pepe.
She's waiting for a check.
She's waiting for her husband.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Carlos mira su papá.
- ✗ Busco por un apartamento.
- ✗ Espera por un cheque.

■ In contrast to English, direct object pronouns are placed immediately before the conjugated verb in Spanish.

Alberto come la tortilla.
La come.
Luisa compra el periódico.
Lo compra.
Susana lee las novelas.
Las lee.
Marta ve los programas.
Los ve.

Alberto is eating the tortilla.
He is eating it.
Luisa buys the newspaper.
She buys it.
Susana reads the novels.
She reads them.
Marta watches the programs.
She watches them.

AVOID THE Blunder

Remember that each noun is either masculine or feminine. The “it” or “them” denoted by the direct object pronoun must reflect the gender of the noun it replaces.

- X Alberto lo come. (la tortilla)
- X Luisa la compra. (el periódico)
- X Marta las ve. (los programas)
- X Susana los lee. (las novelas)

Direct object pronouns that refer to people follow the same pattern.

Mi amigo me llama.	My friend calls me.
Te llamo mañana.	I'll call you tomorrow.
Mis padres nos ayudan.	My parents help us.
José invita a Elena.	José invites Elena.
José la invita.	José invites her.
Elena mira a Alfredo.	Elena is looking at Alfredo.
Elena lo mira.	Elena is looking at him.
Visitamos a nuestros abuelos.	We're visiting our grandparents.
Los visitamos.	We're visiting them.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a prepositional construction instead of the direct object pronoun.

- X Mi amigo llama a mí.
- X Llamo a ti.
- X José invita a ella.
- X Elena mira a él.
- X Mis padres ayudan a nosotros.
- X Visitamos a ellos.

In some parts of Spain, le and les are used as direct object pronouns in place of lo, la, los, and las when referring to people.

- In constructions with infinitives or gerunds, direct object pronouns can be placed either before the conjugated verb or attached to the end of the infinitive or gerund (see pages 96 and 113).

Tengo que ayudar a mi hermano.	I have to help my brother.
Tengo que ayudarlo.	I have to help him.
Lo tengo que ayudar.
Vamos a visitar a los abuelos.	We're going to visit our grandparents.
Vamos a visitarlos.	We're going to visit them.
Los vamos a visitar.
Está esperando a Pablo.	She's waiting for Pablo.
Está esperándolo.	She's waiting for him.
Lo está esperando.
Están buscando a las niñas.	They're looking for the girls.
Están buscándolas.	They're looking for them.
Las están buscando.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget to use an accent mark when you attach the object pronoun to the gerund. Do not use an accent mark if the pronoun is placed before the conjugated verb.

✗ esperandolo
✗ esperández

- In affirmative commands (see pages 163–164), the direct object pronoun is attached to the end of the verb and an accent mark is added to the third-last syllable.

Espérame aquí.	Wait for me here.
Búsquelo.	Look for him.
Mírenla.	Look at her.

- In negative commands (see pages 163–164), the direct object pronoun is placed between the no and the verb. No accent mark is added.

¡No me hables!	Don't talk to me!
¡No lo llame usted!	Don't call him!
¡No lo lean ustedes!	Don't read it!
¡No lo hagamos!	Let's not do it!

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ ¡No hábleme!
✗ ¡No llámelo!

Indirect Objects

The use of indirect objects is determined by the kind of verb used. Four types of verbs require indirect object pronouns—even when the indirect object is stated in noun or pronoun form after a.

VERBS THAT REQUIRE INDIRECT OBJECT PRONOUNS

■ Some verbs indicate a transfer of something (the direct object) from one person (the subject) to another (the indirect object). Following are some examples.

darle algo a alguien	give something to somebody prestarle algo a alguien	lend something to somebody
comprarle algo a alguien	buy something for somebody
regalarle algo a alguien	give a gift to somebody mandarle algo a alguien	send something to somebody enviarle algo a alguien	send something to somebody mostrarle algo a alguien	show something to somebody demostrarle algo a alguien	show something to somebody
enseñarle algo a alguien	teach something to somebody
decirle algo a alguien	tell something to somebody explicarle algo a alguien	explain something to somebody
creerle algo a alguien	believe something of somebody (that he or she has said)

Although the person who receives something may be indicated by a plus a noun or pronoun, this is optional. The indirect object pronoun, however, is always required with these verbs.

Le doy el dinero a Juan.	I'm giving the money to Juan.
Mi madre me manda los paquetes (a mí).	My mother sends me the packages.
A mis padres les mandó una tarjeta.	He sent my parents a card.
Nos enseña el baile (a nosotros). (A mí) me dijo la verdad.	She teaches the dance to us. She told me the truth.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not leave out the indirect object pronoun that denotes the receiver, even when there is a prepositional phrase that tells who the receiver is.

- X Mi madre manda los paquetes a mí.
- X Doy el dinero a Juan.
- X Enseña el baile a nosotros.
- X Mandó una tarjeta a mis padres.
- X Dijo la verdad a mí.

When the direct object is also expressed in pronoun form, it is placed between the indirect object pronoun and the conjugated verb.

María me muestra las manzanas.	María is showing me the apples.
María me las muestra.	María is showing them to me.
Él nos explicó la lección.	He explained the lesson to us.
Nos la explicó.	He explained it to us.

AVOID THE Blunder

- X María me muestra las.
- X María muestra me las.
- X María las me muestra.
- X María las muestra a mí.

When the indirect object pronoun le or les precedes a direct object pronoun, the indirect object pronoun changes to se.

María le muestra las manzanas a Pedro.	María is showing the apples to Pedro.
María se las muestra.	María is showing them to him.
Él les explicó la lección a ellos.	He explained the lesson to them.
Él se la explicó.	He explained it to them.

AVOID THE Blunder

- X María le las muestra.
- X María muestra le las.
- X Él le la explicó.
- X Él le explicó la.

Because se can refer to “you,” “him,” “her,” “you all,” and “them,” it is helpful to add a usted, a él, a ella, a ustedes, or a ellos for clarification.

Remember that both the indirect object pronoun and the a + mí/ti/usted/él/ella/nosotros/vosotros/ustedes/ellos/ellas constructions refer to the person who is the receiver of the direct object. The use of both objects in the same sentence is not considered redundant in Spanish, as it is in English.

Indirect and direct object pronouns may be attached to infinitives and gerunds (see pages 209 and 216–217).

María va a mostrármelas.	}	María is going to show them to me.
María me las va a mostrar.
Él va a explicárnosla.	}	He is going to explain it to us.
Él nos la va a explicar.
María va a mostrárselas.	}	María is going to show them to him.
María se las va a mostrar.
Él va a explicársela.	}	He is going to explain it to them.
Él se la va a explicar.
María está mostrándoselas.	}	María is showing them to him.
María se las está mostrando.
Él está explicándosela.	}	He is explaining it to them.
Él se la está explicando.

AVOID THE Blunder

Be sure to add an accent mark to the infinitive or gerund when two pronouns are attached.

- ✗ mostrarmelas
- ✗ mostrándoselas
- ✗ explicarnosla
- ✗ explicándosela

- A number of verbs indicate a feeling imparted by the subject (a person or thing) to another person (the indirect object) (see page 106). There is no direct object in these constructions. Following are some examples.

parecerle _____ a alguien	seem _____ to somebody caerle bien a alguien	make a good impression on somebody interesarle a alguien	interest somebody, be interesting to somebody importarle a alguien	be important to somebody gustarle a alguien	be pleasing to somebody, appeal to somebody, charm somebody fascinarle a alguien	fascinate somebody, be fascinating to somebody encantar le a alguien	be pleasing to somebody, appeal to somebody, charm somebody emocionarle a alguien	excite somebody, be exciting to somebody caerle mal a alguien	make a bad impression on somebody fastidiarle a alguien	annoy somebody, be annoying to somebody
molestarle a alguien	bother somebody faltarle a alguien	be lacking to somebody
hacerle falta a alguien	be lacking to somebody

The English verbs “like,” “love,” “need,” and “care about” are often translated with verbs from the above list. In English, however, these verbs are expressed as feelings of the subject. In Spanish, the subject is a person or thing that “imparts” a feeling to another person (the indirect object).

ENGLISH PATTERN subject + verb + direct object (noun or pronoun)
 You like Alex/him.
 I like the house / it.

SPANISH PATTERN 1 subject + indirect object + verb
 Alex te gusta.
 (Alex appeals to you.)
La casa me gusta.
 (The house appeals to me.)

SPANISH PATTERN 2 indirect object + verb + subject
Te gusta Alex/él.
 (Alex/He appeals to you.)
Me gusta la casa.
 (The house appeals to me.)

SPANISH PATTERN 3 indirect object + verb
Te gusta. (He appeals to you.)
Me gusta. (It appeals to me.)

A José le gusta el chocolate.	José likes chocolate. (Chocolate appeals to José.)
A José le gustan las enchiladas.	José likes enchiladas. (Enchiladas appeal to José.)
A las chicas les encanta el cine.	The girls love the cinema. (The cinema enchant the girls.)
A las chicas les encantan las películas.	The girls love the movies. (Movies enchant the girls.)
(Tú) me importas.	I care about you. (You are important to me.)
Me importan todos mis amigos.	I care about all my friends. (All my friends are important to me.)
Nos falta el dinero.	We need money. (Money is lacking to us.)
Nos faltan los recursos.	We need resources. (Resources are lacking to us.)
Tu novio me cae muy bien.	I like your boyfriend very much. (Your boyfriend makes a very good impression on me.)
Tus amigos me caen bien.	I like your friends. (Your friends make a good impression on me.)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not try to translate English verbs of this type into Spanish. Rather, think about what feelings are being conveyed by the Spanish verbs. Make sure the subject and verb agree.

- ✗ Me gusto el chocolate.
- ✗ José le gusta las enchiladas.
- ✗ Nos faltamos los recursos.

The prepositional phrase a + noun or pronoun that indicates the person affected by the subject is optional. It is always the same person as the indirect object pronoun.

(A mí) me gusta el libro.	I like the book. (The book appeals to me.)
¿Qué te gusta (a ti)?	What do you like? (What appeals to you?)

Este libro le gusta mucho (a Juan / a él).	Juan/He likes this book a lot. (This book appeals a lot to Juan/ to him.)
(A Luisa / A ella) no le gusta.	Luisa/She doesn't like it. (It doesn't appeal to Luisa/to her.)
(A nosotros) nos gusta la clase.	We like the class. (The class appeals to us.)
No les gusta la clase (a María y a Susana / a ellas).	María and Susana/They don't like the class. (The class doesn't appeal to María and Susana/to them.)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget the a before the noun or pronoun that indicates the person affected by the subject.

- ✗ Juan no le gusta este libro.
- ✗ Luisa no le gusta el libro.

Verbs of this type are always accompanied by indirect objects but do not have direct objects. The subjects “it” and “they” are expressed in the conjugation of the verb.

Me gusta el vestido.	The dress appeals to me.
Le encantan esos zapatos.	Those shoes appeal to her.
Me gusta.	I like it. (It appeals to me.)
Le encantan.	She loves them. (They enchant her.)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use lo, la, los, or las with these verbs.

- ✗ Me lo gusta.
- ✗ Se los encantan.
- ✗ Te la gusta.

■ In constructions with verbs that express requests, demands, or suggestions, indirect object pronouns are used with que + the subjunctive (see pages 167–168 and 188–189).

Te pido que me prestes dinero.	I'm asking you to lend me money.
Le ruega que lo llame.	He begs her to call him.
Nos recomienda que estudiemos.	She recommends that we study.
Les sugerimos que trabajen.	We suggest that they work.

- Certain verbs combine a reflexive se with an indirect object to indicate accidental occurrences. In these constructions, the subject is a thing that has an accidental occurrence (“loses itself,” “forgets itself,” “breaks itself”), and in doing so it affects a person (the indirect object) (see page 108). Following are some typical verbs of this type.

acabársele a alguien	run out of caérsele a alguien	drop descomponérsele a alguien	break olvidársese a alguien	forget perdérsele a alguien	lose
quebrársele a alguien	break
quedársele a alguien en algún lugar	leave by mistake
quemársele a alguien	burn
rompérsele a alguien	break

Se le cayó la taza.	He dropped the cup. (The cup fell from him.)
Se le cayeron las tazas.	He dropped the cups. (The cups fell from him.)
La computadora se nos descompuso.	The computer broke down on us.
Las máquinas se nos descompusieron.	The machines broke down on us.
Se le olvidó el libro.	He forgot the book. (The book got forgotten by him.)
Se le olvidaron los libros.	He forgot the books. (The books got forgotten by him.)
Se me perdió la llave.	I lost my key. (The key got lost from me.)
Se me perdieron las llaves.	I lost my keys. (The keys got lost from me.)
Se les quedó el libro en el coche.	They left the book in the car. (The book got left in the car by them.)
Se les quedaron los libros en el coche.	They left the books in the car. (The books got left in the car by them.)
Se le quemó el dedo.	She burned her finger. (The finger got burned on her.)
Se le quemaron los dedos.	She burned her fingers. (The fingers got burned on her.)

Se me rompió el brazo.

I broke my arm.

(The arm got broken on me.)

Se me rompieron los brazos.

I broke my arms.

(The arms got broken on me.)

When the action is done on purpose, the subject takes the responsibility for the action.

Quemé los documentos.

I burned the documents.

El hombre rompió el contrato.

The man tore up the contract.

La mujer olvidó su triste pasado.

The woman forgot her sad past.

Dejamos los libros en el coche.

We left the books in the car.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not attribute the action of breaking, forgetting, losing, dropping, or similar accidental occurrences to the subject, unless he or she does it on purpose. Do not use possessive pronouns with these constructions.

✗ Quemé mi dedo.

✗ Rompió su brazo.

✗ Olvidamos nuestros libros.

The Impersonal se

Se + a third-person singular verb is used to make a general observation that refers to everybody. This is often expressed in English with an impersonal “one,” “you,” “they,” or “people.”

Se siente en casa en ese hotel.

One feels at home at that hotel.

Se estudia más en la universidad.

You study more in college.

Se camina más rápido en la ciudad.

People walk faster in the city.

No se puede fumar en este edificio.

You can't smoke in this building.

Se + a third-person singular or plural verb + a noun can be used to make a passive statement, indicating a general custom. The verb is singular for a singular noun, plural for a plural noun. In English, “you,” referring to everybody in general, is often used for this purpose.

¿Dónde se compra el pan?

Where do you buy bread?

(Where is bread bought?)

Se compra el pan en la panadería.

You buy bread at the bakery.

(Bread is bought at the bakery.)

¿Dónde se puede comprar el pan?

Where can you buy bread?

Se puede comprar el pan en la panadería.

You can buy bread at the bakery.

¿Dónde se reparan los zapatos?

Where do you get shoes repaired?

(Where are shoes repaired?)

Se reparan los zapatos en la zapatería.

They repair shoes at the shoe store.

(Shoes are repaired at the shoe store.)

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the personal pronoun to translate the English “you” unless you are talking about the habits of a particular person.

- ✗ Tú estudias más en la universidad.
- ✗ Usted compra el pan en la panadería.
- ✗ Tú no fumas en este edificio.
- ✗ Dónde compras el pan?

The Pronoun lo

The pronoun lo has several uses (see page 86).

- Lo can be used before the verbs ser and estar to refer to an adjective in a previous statement.

—Ella es bonita.	“She’s pretty.”
—Sí, lo es.	“Yes, she is.”
—¿Estás cansado?	“Are you tired?”
—Sí, lo estoy.	“Yes, I am.”

- An adjective can be used as a subject by placing lo before it.

Lo bueno del curso es que es muy útil.	The good thing about the course is that it’s very useful.
Lo malo es que la clase es a las ocho.	The bad thing is that the class is at 8 o’clock.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ la buena cosa es

- ✗ la mala parte es

- Lo can refer to a masculine singular direct object, whether it is a person or a thing (see page 204).

Compré el libro.
Lo compré en la librería.

I bought the book.
I bought it at the bookstore.

Ví a tu hermano.
Lo vi en el parque.

I saw your brother.
I saw him in the park.

- Lo que can refer to an object, an entire phrase, or an abstract idea.

Lo que ella compró no te importa.
Lo que está haciendo es un secreto.
Lo que él dice no es verdad.
Lo que ustedes quieren es imposible.

What she bought is none of your business.
What he's doing is a secret.
What he says isn't true.
What you all want is impossible.

- Lo cual can follow an entire clause, adding a comment about it.

Ella compró un coche de lujo, lo cual nos sorprendió a todos.

She bought a luxury car, which surprised everybody.

el cual

- El cual/la cual/los cuales/las cuales is used after prepositions to refer to a previously mentioned noun.

Me dio una cantidad de dinero, con el cual pagué mis estudios.

*He gave me some money,
with which I paid for my education.*

Decidió comprar la casa, por la cual tuvo que pagar una fortuna.

*She decided to buy the house,
for which she had to pay a fortune.*

Ella cuida a seis niños, cuatro de los cuales son de su hermana.

She takes care of six children, four of whom are her sister's.

AVOID THE Blunder

As in formal English, do not put a preposition at the end of the sentence. Place it before el cual/la cual/los cuales/las cuales.

X Compró la casa, que tenía que pagar una fortuna por.

Review the forms in the charts on the preceding pages.

Adverbs give information about the time, place, direction, number of occasions, frequency, and manner of the action of verbs. They do not change in form. Often a longer expression or prepositional phrase functions as an adverb.

Adverbs can also modify the meaning of adjectives and other adverbs (see pages 89–90).

Time Markers

Review the time markers on pages 231–232.

Time markers can be placed at the beginning of a sentence, after a verb, or at the end of a sentence.

- Actualmente is a false cognate, or falso amigo (see pages 303–305). It means “at present,” “at this time,” “right now.” “Actually” is translated as realmente in Spanish.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use actualmente when you mean “actually.”

X Actualmente, no es mi hermano.

- The English word “last” is expressed in different ways in Spanish.
anoche last night
- When it means “the period before this one,” pasado(-a) is typically used.

el año pasado	last year el viernes pasado	last Friday
la semana pasada	last week

AVOID THE Blunder

X la noche pasada X el día pasado

- When it means “the final period,” último(-a) is used.

el último día	the last day
la última noche	the last night

la última semana de julio	the last week of July
las últimas semanas del verano	the last weeks of summer
los últimos días del año	the last days of the year

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ el pasado día
✗ la pasada noche

■ The English word “next” is expressed in two different ways in Spanish.

- When it means “the period after this one,” próximo(-a) is used.

la próxima semana	next week
el próximo mes	next month
el próximo año	next year

- When it means “the period after that one,” siguiente is used.

el día siguiente	the next (following) day el mes siguiente	the next (following) month
el año siguiente	the next (following) year

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use próximo to express “the next day” if the action has been completed. Use siguiente to express this meaning.

- ✗ Fuimos al cine el próximo día.

■ Hace is used to express the English “ago” (see page 123).

hace media hora	a half hour ago hace diez días	10 days ago
hace catorce años	14 years ago

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ una media hora pasada
✗ diez días pasados

- The English word “time” is expressed in several ways in Spanish.
- To tell the current time, the pattern es la una/son las dos is used. To tell the time of an event or activity, the pattern a la una/a las dos is used (see page 261).

AVOID THE Blunder

X El concierto son las ocho.

- The English adverb “again” can be expressed with otra vez, de nuevo, or nuevamente. It can also be expressed with the verb phrase volver a + infinitive.

Mañana nos vemos otra vez.

Tomorrow we'll see each other again.

Te vuelvo a llamar el viernes.

I'll call you again on Friday.

- Tiempo* is used to express time as a commodity.

No tengo mucho tiempo.

I don't have much time.

No hay tiempo para hacerlo.

There's no time to do it.

El tiempo vuela.

Time flies.

Salud, dinero, amor y tiempo para gastarlos.

Health, money, love—and time to enjoy them.

- Buen tiempo* means “good weather” in Spanish. To express “to have a good time,” pasarlo bien or divertirse is used (see page 308).

Lo pasé muy bien en la Argentina.

I had a good time in Argentina.

¿Lo pasaste bien?

Did you have a good time?

Nos divertimos mucho en la fiesta.

We had a good time at the party.

Espero que se diviertan.

I hope you all have a good time.

AVOID THE Blunder

Don't confuse time with the weather!

X Tuve un buen tiempo en la Argentina.

X ¿Tuviste un buen tiempo?

- In English, the markers “before” and “after” are followed by indicative constructions. In Spanish, there are two different patterns.
- When the subject of the first verb is the same person who performs the action of the second verb, the second verb is in the infinitive form after the preposition de.

Quiero estudiar antes de salir.

Fueron a casa después de hacer el examen.

Voy a llamarte antes de hablar con ella.

Vamos a jugar cartas después de comer.

I want to study before I go out.

They went home after they took the exam.

I'm going to call you before I talk to her.

We're going to play cards after we eat.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Quiero estudiar antes que hablo con ella.

✗ Fueron a casa después que hago el examen.

- When the subject of the first verb is a different person from the subject of the second verb, a subjunctive form is used after antes que or después que (see page 171).

Quiero estudiar antes que regresen a casa los niños.

La profesora fue a casa después que hicieran el examen los estudiantes.

Voy a llamarte antes que salga mi esposo.

Vamos a comer después que hayan descansado un poco.

I want to study before the children get home.

The teacher went home after the students took the exam.

I'm going to call you before my husband leaves.

We'll eat after you all have rested a bit.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the indicative after antes que or después que.

✗ Quiero estudiar antes que regresan los niños.

✗ Fue a casa después que hicieron el examen.

✗ Voy a llamarte antes que sale mi esposo.

✗ Vamos a comer después que han descansado.

Frequency Markers

Review the frequency markers in the chart on page 233.

- To tell the number of times an activity takes place, expressions such as una vez, dos veces, and muchas veces are used.

Estuve en México una vez.

Mi tío hizo el examen dos veces.

Ella bailó con Juan muchas veces.

Quiero ver la película otra vez.

I was in Mexico once.

My uncle took the test two times.

She danced with Juan many times.

I want to see the movie again.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Estuve allí un tiempo.

✗ Comimos en ese restaurante muchos tiempos.

- To modify a frequency expression, más de or menos de is used.

Mi tía come más de tres veces al día.

Voy al gimnasio menos de cuatro veces a la semana.

My aunt eats more than three times a day.

I go to the gym less than four times a week.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use más que before a number.

✗ Mi tía come más que tres veces al día.

✗ Tengo más que veinte dólares.

- A veces* is used to express “sometimes.”

A veces estudiamos hasta muy tarde.

Ellos me ayudan a veces.

Sometimes we study until very late.

They help me sometimes.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ algunos tiempos

- The adverbs siempre and nunca can be used with both the imperfect and the preterite tenses, with slightly different meanings.

When used with the imperfect, siempre and nunca emphasize the meaning of the imperfect tense. They stress the fact that the verb describes a past period of time, and that the action occurred over and over in a general way (see pages 133–134).

Mi hermana siempre ayudaba a mi mamá.	My sister would always help my mother.
Siempre íbamos juntos al cine los sábados.	We always used to go to the movies together on Saturdays.
Su novio nunca se olvidaba de llamarla.	Her boyfriend would never forget to call her.
Nunca estábamos de acuerdo en nada.	We used to never agree on anything.

When used with the preterite, siempre and nunca refer to a whole period of time that is now over and that the speaker chooses not to describe any further (see page 130).

Mi hermana siempre lo quiso.	My sister loved him the whole time.
Siempre supimos la verdad.	We knew the truth all along.
Nunca pude olvidarte.	I never managed to forget you.
Nunca tuviste tiempo para mí.	You didn't (even once) have time for me.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not assume that siempre, like “always” in English, refers only to a description of habitual past action.

- To express action that occurs regularly on certain days, no preposition is used in Spanish. Also note that all the days whose names end in -s have only one form and do not change in the plural; sábado and domingo are the only days that add -s in the plural.

Tenemos clases los lunes.	We have classes on Mondays.
Salimos los viernes por la noche.	We go out on Friday nights.
¿Qué haces los fines de semana?	What do you do on weekends?
No trabaja los sábados.	She doesn't work on Saturdays.

AVOID THE Blunder

X en los lunes
X en los fines de semana

Place Markers

Review the place markers in the chart on pages 233–234.

- The preposition en can indicate “in a place,” “on a place,” or “at a place.”

Las cartas están en la caja.
 Los platos están en la mesa.
 Los niños están en la escuela.
 Comemos a menudo en este restaurante.

The letters are in the box.
The plates are on the table.
The children are at school.
We often eat at this restaurant.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Está al aeropuerto.
- ✗ Comemos al restaurante.
- ✗ Ella está a casa.

- The preposition a can indicate movement toward a place. When a verb that indicates movement toward a place (such as ir) is combined with another verb, a is used instead of en to indicate “in” or “at.”

Vamos al aeropuerto.
 Vamos a comer al restaurante.

We're going to the airport.
We're going to eat at the restaurant./
We're going to the restaurant to eat.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Voy a comer en el restaurante.

- In many countries, acá is used instead of aquí when used with a verb of movement, such as venir. Likewise, allá is used instead of allí when used with a verb of movement, such as ir.

Estoy aquí.	I'm here.
Juana está allí.	Juana is over there.
Ven acá.	Come here.
Ve allá.	Go over there.

- Certain adverbs of place are different from their prepositional counterparts.

Mis cosas están arriba.	My things are up there.
Mis cosas están encima de las tuyas.	My things are on top of yours.

Las maletas están abajo.	The suitcases are down there.
Las maletas están debajo de los libros.	The suitcases are underneath the books.
El dinero está adentro.	The money is inside.
El dinero está dentro de la maleta.	The money is inside the suitcase.
El coche está afuera.	The car is outside.
El coche está fuera del garaje.	The car is outside (of) the garage.
Tenemos que seguir adelante.	We have to go forward.
Hay muchas personas delante de nosotros.	There are a lot of people ahead of us.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ adentro de la maleta
- ✗ afuera de la casa
- ✗ adelante de nosotros

■ Delante de and enfrente de both mean “in front of,” but they do not express the same concept. Delante de expresses the concept “ahead of,” as in a row or line. Enfrente de expresses the concept “facing.”

Esta cola es muy larga y hay muchas personas delante de mí.

This line is really long, and there are a lot of people in front of me.

La maestra está enfrente de la clase.

The teacher is in front of the class.

Enfrente also translates into English as “across from.”

La casa enfrente de mi casa es blanca.

The house across (the street) from mine is white.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use enfrente de to indicate someone or something whose back is in front of you.

- ✗ Él está enfrente de mí en la cola.

■ Prepositional phrases that indicate place include the word de (adentro de, enfrente de), with three exceptions: en, sobre, and entre.

Los documentos están en la mesa.

The documents are on the table.

He puesto las fotos sobre la mesa.

I put the photographs on the table.

El libro pequeño está entre dos libros grandes.

Encontramos sus papeles entre los de otras personas.

The little book is between two big ones.

We found your papers among those of other people.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ El libro está sobre de la mesa.

✗ El libro pequeño está entre de dos libros grandes.

Adverbs of Manner

Adverbs of manner are formed by adding -mente to the feminine or neutral form of an adjective. If there is an accent mark in the adjective, it is retained in the adverb.

El chico corrió rápidamente.

Ella pronunció cuidadosamente cada palabra.

The boy ran fast.

She pronounced each word carefully.

- When two or more adverbs of manner modify the same verb, -mente is omitted from all but the last one.

Ella leyó lenta y cuidadosamente cada palabra.

She read each word slowly and carefully.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ lentamente y cuidadosamente

- When recientemente directly precedes a past participle (see page 87), it is shortened to recién.

Llevaron al niño recién nacido a casa.

Los recién casados están en Madrid.

They took the newborn child home.

The newlyweds are in Madrid.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ el niño recientemente nacido

✗ la mujer recientemente casada

- Several masculine adjectives are used as adverbs of manner.

alto	high	derecho	straight
bajo	low	despacio	slowly barato	cheaply	hondo	deeply
caro	dearly, expensively	recto	straight

Tiró la pelota muy alto.	He threw the ball very high.
Canta bajo.	He sings low.
Me costó muy caro.	It cost me dearly.
Siga derecho.	Continue straight ahead.
Caminaron despacio.	They walked slowly.
Respiré hondo.	Breathe deeply.

- Certain adverbs have two alternative forms: the masculine or neutral singular adjective form and the feminine or neutral singular adjective form + -mente.

claro/claramente	clearly
fuerte/fuertemente	strongly, tightly justo/justamente	exactly
lento/lentamente	slowly
seguro/seguramente	safely

El profesor habló claro/claramente.	The teacher spoke clearly.
Sujétalo fuerte/fuertemente.	Fasten it tightly.
El chico corrió rápido/rápidamente.	The boy ran fast.

AVOID THE Blunder

Only certain adverbs have two alternative forms.

X altamente X bajamente X caramente
 X baratamente X hondamente

- Prepositional phrases are often used to express manner.

a ciegas	blindly con calma	calmly con cuidado	carefully
con esmero	with care

Tomó la decisión a ciegas.	She made the decision blindly.
Reportó las noticias con calma.	He reported the news calmly.

Ella pronunció cada palabra con cuidado.

She pronounced each word carefully.

Cocinó el plato con esmero.

He prepared the dish with care.

- Cada vez más + an adverb of manner indicates steadily increasing intensity.

La chica corre cada vez más rápido.

The girl runs faster and faster.

Sus padres son cada vez más estrictos.

His parents are getting stricter.

Adverbs of Degree

Review the adverbs of degree in the chart on page 235.

- The adverbs un poco, bastante, muy, bien, and demasiado can modify adjectives (see pages 89–91), as well as adverbs of manner.

Es un poco tarde.

It's a little late.

Está bastante lejos de aquí.

It's pretty far from here.

Ella maneja muy lentamente.

She drives very slowly.

Ella maneja bien lentamente.

She drives really slowly.

Él corre demasiado rápido.

He runs extremely fast.

Él corre rapidísimo.

He runs extremely fast.

AVOID THE Blunder

Demasiado is better translated as “extremely” rather than “too.” “Too” indicates a negative consequence, while demasiado does not.

✗ Su casa está demasiado lejos.

(meaning you are not going to go there)

- Unlike “very” in English, the adverb muy cannot stand alone in answer to a question. Mucho is used instead.

—¿Estás cansado? —Sí, mucho.

“Are you tired?” “Yes, very.”

—¿Es bonita? —Sí, mucho.

“Is she pretty?” “Yes, very.”

AVOID THE Blunder

—¿Estás cansado?

✗ —Sí, muy.

- To compare adverbs of manner, tan + adverb + como is used.

Ella cocina tan bien como su mamá.	She cooks as well as her mother (does).
Él canta tan dulcemente como su hermana.	He sings as sweetly as his sister (does).

To indicate “as much as,” tanto como is used.

Susana habla tanto como su mamá.	Susana talks as much as her mother (does).
Roberto come tanto como su papá.	Roberto eats as much as his father (does).

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ tan bien que su mamá
- ✗ tanto que su papá

- To indicate “to what extent,” lo + adverb is used.

Es impresionante lo bien que canta.	It's impressive how well she sings.
Me preocupa lo rápido que maneja.	It worries me how fast she drives.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Es impresionante como bien canta.
- ✗ Me preocupa como rápido maneja.

- When an adverbial comparison is made that involves two different subjects and verbs, más/menos + adverb + de lo que is used between the two clauses.

Ella trabaja más duro de lo que piensas.	She works harder than you think (she does).
Su hijo maneja más rápido de lo que ella quiere.	Her son drives faster than she wants (him to).

The adverb apenas is used to indicate “hardly” or “just barely.”

Apenas tiene suficiente para comer.	He hardly has enough to eat.
Apenas podía verlos.	I could barely see them.

Questions

Questions are always preceded by an upside-down question mark and followed by a standard question mark. The question mark immediately precedes the question, even if the question does not begin the sentence. In this case, the first word of the question is not capitalized.

A propósito, ¿va Roberto a la reunión?

By the way, is Roberto going to the meeting?

Y tú, ¿qué vas a hacer?

What about you? What are you going to do?

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ ¿A propósito, va Roberto a la reunión?

✗ ¿Y tú, qué vas a hacer?

✗ Y tú, ¿Qué vas a hacer?

Questions are formed in several ways in Spanish.

- Yes-or-no questions are usually formed by reversing the order of the subject and the verb, using question marks at the beginning and at the end of the question, or using rising intonation at the end.

¿Estudia Jaime?

Does Jaime study?

¿Eres (tú) de Lima?

Are you from Lima?

¿Viven ustedes aquí?

Do you all live here?

¿Trabajan tus hermanos?

Do your brothers work?

AVOID THE Blunder

There is no equivalent of “do you?”/“does he?”/“are they?” in Spanish. Do not try to translate these expressions.

✗ Hace Jaime estudiar?

✗ Hacen ustedes vivir aquí?

- When the answer is “yes,” it is expressed by sí. The following expressions may also be used.

Cómo no.

Yes, indeed.

Por supuesto.

Yes, (naturally).

Claro.

Of course.

To add another positive element, también may be used.

Sí, Jaime estudia, y yo también.	Yes, Jaime studies, and so do I.
Sí, soy de Lima, y mi papá también.	Yes, I'm from Lima, and so is my dad.

□ When the answer is “no,” it is expressed by no. The following expressions may also be used.

De ninguna manera.	No way.
Todavía no.	Not yet.
Hoy no.	Not today.
Ahora no.	Not now.
Mañana no.	Not tomorrow.

AVOID THE Blunder

In a short negative answer, put the no after the adverb.

- ¿Vas a comprarlo?
- ✗ —No hoy.
- ✗ —No ahora.
- ✗ —No mañana.

When a sentence contains a negative word in any position other than the first word in the sentence, the verb is preceded by no.

No tengo nada.	I don't have anything.
No vamos a ninguna parte.	We're not going anywhere.
No lo hace nunca.	He never does it.
No conozco a nadie.	I don't know anybody.
No hay ningún libro en la mesa.	There's no book on the table./ There are no books on the table.

AVOID THE Blunder

Double negatives are correct in Spanish.

- ✗ Tengo nada.
- ✗ No hay un libro en la mesa.

In the examples below, the first no answers a question; the second no is used before the verb to make the sentence negative.

No, Jaime no estudia.	No, Jaime doesn't study.
No, no soy de Lima.	No, I'm not from Lima.

To add an additional negative element, tampoco may be used.

No, Jaime no estudia, ni yo tampoco.

No, Jaime doesn't study, and neither do I.

No, no soy de Lima, ni mi papá
tampoco.

No, I'm not from Lima, and neither is my dad.

- Many questions can be formed with interrogative words.

An accent mark is used over the stressed vowel of an interrogative word in a question.

¿Quién es?

Who is he?

¿De dónde es?

Where is he from?

¿Hasta cuándo te quedas?

How long are you staying?

- Two interrogative words, quién and cuánto, can be either singular or plural.

If you are sure the answer is singular, or do not know if the answer is singular or plural, quién is used to ask “who.”

¿Quién es ese chico?

Who is that boy?

¿Con quién estás?

Who are you with?

If you are pretty sure the answer is plural, quiénes is used to ask “who.”

¿Quiénes son esos chicos?

Who are those boys?

¿Quiénes van a la fiesta?

Who is going to the party?

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use quién if you expect the answer to be plural.

✗ ¿Quién va a la fiesta/a la reunión?

Cuánto is used to express “how much.” Cuántos is used to express “how many.”

¿Cuánto cuestan estos zapatos?

How much do these shoes cost?

¿Cuántas personas vienen esta noche?

How many people are coming tonight?

- Both qué and cuál can mean “what” and “which,” but they are not interchangeable.

Qué can ask for an identification or a definition.

¿Qué es esto?

What's this?

¿Qué es eso?

What's that?

¿Qué es un abrelatas?

What's an “abrelatas”?

Qué followed by a noun asks “which one.”

¿Qué vestido te gusta más?

Which dress do you like best?

¿Qué abreletas vas a usar?

Which can opener are you going to use?

AVOID THE Blunder

X ¿Cuál vestido te gusta más?

X ¿Cuál abreletas vas a usar?

Cuál followed by a form of the verb ser asks “what” (which one of all the possibilities).

¿Cuál es su nombre?

What's your name?

¿Cuál es la fecha?

What's the date?

¿Cuál es su número de teléfono?

What's your telephone number?

Cuál + de + a plural noun asks “which” of two or more alternatives.

¿Cuál de los libros prefieres?

Which book do you prefer?

¿Cuál de las ideas te interesa más?

Which idea interests you the most?

AVOID THE Blunder

X ¿Qué es su nombre?

X ¿Qué es su número de teléfono?

In Spanish, prepositions precede a question word. They never go at the end of a question.

¿De qué hablas?

What are you talking about?

¿De dónde son ellos?

Where are they from?

¿Para quién es el regalo?

Who is the present for?

¿Con quién vas?

Who are you going with?

¿De quién es este suéter?

Whose sweater is this?

¿A quién llamas?

Who are you calling?

A dónde is usually contracted to adónde.

¿Adónde van Uds.?

Where are you all going?

¿Adónde quieren ir?

Where do they want to go?

AVOID THE Blunder

X ¿Qué hablas de?

X ¿Quién es el regalo para?

X ¿Dónde vas?

- Por qué is used to ask “why.” It is two words, with an accent mark in qué. To answer “because,” porque is used. It is one word and does not have an accent mark.

—¿Por qué no está trabajando tu hermano hoy?
—Porque está enfermo.

*“Why isn’t your brother working today?”
“Because he’s sick.”*

AVOID THE Blunder

- X —¿Porque no trabaja?
X —Por que está enfermo.

- Questions may be asked indirectly, following certain clauses. As in direct questions, the interrogative word has an accent mark.

José me preguntó qué hiciste con el dinero.

José asked me what you did with the money.

Dime a qué hora quieres venir.

Tell me what time you want to come.

Lack of knowledge can also be expressed with a question word within a sentence. An accent mark is used in the question word.

No sé cómo lo hace.

I don’t know how he does it.

Necesitamos saber adónde fue.

We need to know where she went.

When there is no direct or indirect question, que, cuando, como, and donde do not have accent marks.

Pedro me dijo que quería acompañarnos.

Pedro told me (that) he wanted to go with us.

Estoy contenta cuando estás aquí.

I’m happy when you’re here.

Corre como el viento.

He runs like the wind.

Vamos al restaurante donde comimos la semana pasada.

Let’s go to the restaurant where we ate last week.

Exclamations

Exclamations are preceded by an upside-down exclamation point and followed by a standard exclamation point. The exclamatory word has an accent mark. The following patterns are used.

- ¡Qué + noun + más/tan + adjective!

¡Qué niño más adorable!
¡Qué clase tan aburrida!

*What an adorable child!
What a boring class!*

- ¡Qué + adjective + noun!

¡Qué buena idea!

What a good idea!

¡Qué mala suerte!

What bad luck!

AVOID THE Blunder

~~X~~ ¡Qué un adorable niño!

~~X~~ ¡Qué una clase aburrida!

- ¡Qué + adjective/adverb + verb!

¡Qué bonita estás!

How pretty you look!

¡Qué bien hablas español!

How well you speak Spanish!

¡Qué rápido corre!

How fast he runs!

AVOID THE Blunder

~~X~~ ¡Cómo bonita estás!

~~X~~ ¡Cómo bien hablas!

- ¡Cómo + verb!

¡Cómo habla!

How she talks!/The way she talks!

¡Cómo corre!

How he runs!/The way he runs!

- ¡Cuánto + (object) + verb!

¡Cuánto te quiero!

I love you so much!

¡Cuánto gastas!

You spend so much!

- ¡(object) + verb + tanto!

¡Te quiero tanto!

I love you so much!

¡Gastas tanto!

You spend so much!

en	in, on, at	tras	behind

Review the prepositions in the chart above.

Form and Function of Prepositions

Prepositions are invariable in form. They often have no exact English equivalents.

- When the prepositions a and de are used immediately before the masculine definite article el, the two words are contracted to al and del, unless the el is part of a proper name.

Vamos al mercado.

We're going to the market.

Ya salieron del edificio.

They already left the building.

Eduardo va a El Salvador la próxima semana.

Eduardo is going to El Salvador next week.

AVOID THE Blunder

X Vamos a el mercado.

X Ya salieron de el edificio.

- Pronouns that follow prepositions have several variations.
- In Spanish the subject pronouns él, ella, usted, ustedes, ellos, ellas, nosotros, and vosotros are used after prepositions, unlike English where the object pronouns (“him,” “her,” “you,” “you all,” “them,” and “us”) are used.

Voy con ella.

I'm going with her.

Lo hice por él.

I did it because of him.

El regalo es para nosotros.

The present is for us.

La carta es de ellos.

The letter is from them.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the direct and indirect object pronouns le, lo, la, les, los, las, nos, and os after prepositions.

X Lo hice por lo.

X La carta es de los.

- The subject pronouns yo and tú are used after the prepositions entre, según, salvo, and excepto.

El asunto es entre tú y yo.

The matter is between you and me.

Según tú, todo el mundo está loco.

According to you, everyone is crazy.

Todo el mundo salvo yo se va.

Everybody except me is leaving.

- The object pronouns mí and ti are used after other prepositions.

Lo hizo por mí.

He did it because of me.

Tienes que ir sin mí.

You have to go without me.

El regalo es para ti.

The present is for you.

Estoy pensando en tí.

I'm thinking about you.

AVOID THE Blunder

Mí after a preposition has an accent mark to distinguish it from the possessive mi. Tí does not have an accent mark.

X por mi

X para mi

X mí casa

X para tí

- When the preposition con is followed by the pronoun mí, ti, or si (“me,” “you,” “himself,” “herself,” “themselves”), -go is added to form one word. The accent mark in mí is dropped (see page 14).

Puedes ir conmigo.

You can go with me.

No quiero hablar contigo.

I don't want to talk to you.

Rubén trajo sus libros consigo.
Los chicos se fueron, y se llevaron la pizza consigo.

*Rubén brought his books with him.
The boys left and took the pizza with them.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use él, ella, ellos, or ellas to express “himself,” “herself,” or “themselves.”

X con mí X con ti X con sí
X con él X con ella
X con ellos X con ellas

- In Spanish, the preposition is usually repeated when there is more than one object.

El regalo es para ti y para Carlos.	The present is for you and Carlos.
Lo hizo por mí y por ti.	He did it because of me and you.
Estoy pensando en ti y en él.	I'm thinking about you and him.
Vive lejos de mí y de mis hermanos.	She lives far away from me and my brothers.

AVOID THE Blunder

X El regalo es para ti y Carlos.
X Lo hizo por mí y ti.
X Estoy pensando en ti y él.
X Vive lejos de mí y mis hermanos.

- A verb that directly follows a preposition is in the infinitive form (see page 97).

Voy a llamarlo antes de salir.	I'm going to call him before I leave.
Van al mercado a comprar pan.	They're going to the market to buy bread.
Vimos la película después de comer.	We watched the movie after we ate.
Come menos para perder peso.	She eats less in order to lose weight.

AVOID THE Blunder

X Voy a llamarlo antes de yo salgo.
X Vimos la película después que comimos.

- In Spanish, a sentence never ends with a preposition. In both direct and indirect questions the preposition goes before the interrogative word.

¿De qué se queja?	What is she complaining about?
¿En quién piensas?	Who are you thinking about?
¿Desde cuándo están aquí?	How long have you been here?
¿Hasta cuándo se queda?	How long is he staying?
No sé con quién fue.	I don't know who he went with.
Díganos de quién es esta carta.	Tell us who this letter is from.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ ¿Qué se queja de? ✗ No sé quien fue con.
 ✗ ¿Quién piensas de?

- Certain verb + preposition combinations in English are translated into Spanish using a verb without a preposition. The following verbs are some common examples (see page 104).

agradecer	be grateful for	escuchar	listen to buscar	look for	llorar	cry over esperar	wait for	mirar	look at
pagar	pay for	padecer	suffer from
pedir (i, i)	ask for
votar	vote for (something)
atender (ie)	wait on, take care of
comentar	comment on

Te agradezco tus consejos.	I'm grateful for your advice.
Estoy buscando mis lentes.	I'm looking for my glasses.
Espérame aquí.	Wait for me here.
Tenemos que pagar la luz.	We have to pay for the electricity.
Tienes que pedirle un cupón.	You have to ask him for a coupon.
¿Qué miras?	What are you looking at?

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Estoy buscando para mis lentes.
 ✗ Tienes que pedirle por un cupón.
 ✗ Espera por mí aquí.
 ✗ ¿A qué miras?

Usage of Common Prepositions

Individual prepositions have a variety of uses.

a

The preposition a has specific uses and is sometimes required in set phrases.

- A is used after ir and other verbs that indicate movement to another place.

Voy a la universidad.

I'm going to the university.

La chica corrió a la casa.

The girl ran to the house.

Nos mudamos a la ciudad.

We moved to the city.

Caminaron al mercado.

They walked to the market.

- In only a few instances is a translated into English as “at” (see pages 272–273).

- With the verb ir to indicate the activity intended.

Voy a estudiar a la universidad.

I'm going to study at the university. (I'm going to the university to study.)

Fueron a comer a un restaurante.

They went to eat at a restaurant. (They went to a restaurant to eat.)

- With the verb sentar to indicate “facing.”

La familia estaba sentada a la mesa.

The family was seated at the table.

La mujer se sentaba a la ventana y miraba a la gente.

The woman used to sit at the window and watch people.

- To ask for and to indicate the time of an event.

¿A qué hora es la reunión?

(At) what time is the meeting?

Es a las diez.

It's at 10 o'clock.

Es a mediodía.

It's at noon.

- The personal “a” is used before a direct object noun that refers to a person or a pet (see page 215).

Llamo a mi mamá todos los días.

I call my mother every day.

Vio a su amiga en la tienda.

He saw his friend at the store.

¿Cuándo visitan a su abuela?

When do you visit your grandmother?

¿Encontró al señor Sánchez?

Did you find Mr. Sánchez?

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget the a, even though it is not translated.

X Llamo mi mamá. X Vio su amiga.

The “personal a” is typically not used after the verb tener.

Tengo tres primos en California. I have three cousins in California.
Tienen un hijo. They have one child.

- A is used before an indefinite pronoun that refers to an unidentified person.

—¿Conoces a alguien que hable italiano?	“ Do you know anyone who speaks Italian? ”
—No, no conozco a nadie aquí.	“ No, I don’t know anybody here. ”
—¿Ves a algún chico de nuestro colegio?	“ Do you see any boys from our school? ”
—No, no veo a ninguno.	“ No, I don’t see any (not a single one). ”

- A is used with exchange-type verbs that indicate something taken from another person or something done to or for another person (see pages 105–106 and 218–219).

Raúl le compró un coche a ese tipo.	Raúl bought a car from that guy.
A mí me robaron la cartera.	They stole my purse (from me).
Ana le regaló una corbata a su hijo.	Ana gave her son a necktie.
Miguel le mandó la carta a Pedro.	Miguel sent the letter to Pedro.

AVOID THE Blunder

X Robaron mi cartera de mí.
X Ana regaló su hijo una corbata.

- A is used before indirect object nouns and the pronouns that refer to them.

A mí me gustan las telenovelas.	I like soap operas. (They appeal to me.)
A Juan no le molesta el ruido.	The noise doesn’t bother Juan.
A nosotros no nos gusta el frío.	We don’t like the cold. (It doesn’t please us.)
Y a ti, ¿qué te interesa?	And you, what are you interested in? (What is interesting to you?)

- A is used after certain verbs and is followed by another verb in the infinitive form (see page 97). Following are some common examples.

aprender a	learn to	invitar a	invite to atreverse a	dare to	negarse a	refuse to ayudar a	help (do)	obligar a	make (someone) do
comenzar a	begin to	ofrecerse a	offer to decidirse a	decide to	oponerse a	be opposed to
detenerse a	stop to	ponerse a	begin, set out to
empezar a	begin to	resolverse a	make up one's mind to
enseñar a	teach (to)	volver a	(do) again

Aprendí a manejar el año pasado. I learned to drive last year.

Se atrevió a decirme eso. He dared to tell me that.

Empezó a llover. It started to rain.

Volvió a llamarle. She called me again.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not forget the a, even though the English infinitive begins with “to.”

✗ Aprendí manejar.

✗ Empezó llover.

- A is used after certain verbs and is followed by a noun.

acercaarse a	approach	condenar a	condemn to acostumbrarse a	get used to	dar a	have a view of
asistir a	attend	dirigirse a	head toward
asomarse a	lean out of	jugar a	play

La chica asiste a todas sus clases. The girl attends all her classes.

Mi habitación da a la plaza. My room overlooks the plaza.

VERBS RELATED TO THE SENSES

oler a	smell like	saber a	taste like
parecerse a	look like	sonar a	sound like

La casa olía a humo.

Ella se parece a su mamá.

The house smelled like smoke.

She looks like her mother.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use a different preposition, and do not leave the preposition out.

X Asiste las clases.

X La casa olía como humo.

- A is used before certain nouns to indicate the manner in which something is done.

La blusa fue bordada a mano.

The blouse was embroidered by hand.

Escribe el trabajo a máquina.

Type the paper.

- De... en... indicates a repetitive activity, translated as “from ... to ...” in English.

El príncipe fue de casa en casa en busca de la princesa.

The prince went from house to house looking for the princess.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ de casa a casa
- ✗ de pueblo a pueblo

- De can indicate possession.

—¿De quién es este libro?
—Es de Carlos.

*“Whose book is this?”
“It’s Carlos’s.”*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use an apostrophe + s in Spanish.

- ✗ Es Carlos’s.

- De can indicate the material something is made of.

—¿De qué material es tu blusa?
—Es de seda.

*“What material is your blouse made of?”
“It’s silk.”*

✗ Vamos por coche.

- De... en... indicates a repetitive activity, translated as “from ... to ...” in English.

Los chicos fueron de casa en casa vendiendo revistas.

The children went from door to door selling magazines.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Los chicos fueron de puerta a puerta.

- When used after el primero and el último to indicate an activity performed by someone, en is followed by a verb in the infinitive form.

Fui el primero en levantar la mano.
Fue la última en salir.

I was the first to raise my hand.
She was the last to leave.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not try to translate English prepositions for these functions.

✗ Fui el primero a levantar la mano.
✗ Fue la última a salir.

- En is used in certain negative expressions.

En mi vida he visto tanta gente.

I've never seen so many people in all my life.

—¿Me vas a dejar ir?
—En absoluto.

*“Are you going to let me go?”
“No way!”*

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not add no to en mi vida.

X En mi vida no he visto _____.

Do not use en absoluto if you mean “yes.” Do not confuse en absoluto, which means “absolutely not,” with absolutamente, which means “yes, indeed.”

X Sí, en absoluto.

■ En is used in certain set expressions.

en balde	in vain	en llamas	in flames

- Para can be followed by a verb in the infinitive form to indicate purpose.

Vamos a casa para descansar.	Let's go home to rest.
Jorge fue al mercado para comprar uvas.	Jorge went to the market to buy grapes.

AVOID THE Blunder

Rather than translate para as “to” or “for,” think of its function as an indicator of purpose.

- ✗ Tengo que estudiar por un examen.
- ✗ Vamos a casa por descansar.

- Para can be followed by que + a verb in the subjunctive to indicate the purpose of the action of the first verb. The subject of the second clause must be different from the subject of the first clause.

Vamos a casa para que los niños descansen.

Let's go home so the children can rest.

Jorge fue al parque con los niños para que su esposa pudiera descansar.

Jorge went to the park with the children so that his wife could rest.

- Para can indicate destination.

Salieron para la estación.

They left for the station.

Voy para tu casa esta tarde.

I'm coming to your house this afternoon.

Estos chocolates son para ti.

These chocolates are for you.

AVOID THE Blunder

Rather than translate para as “to,” “toward,” or “for,” think of its function as an indicator of destination.

✗ Salieron por la estación.

✗ Voy por tu casa.

✗ Estos chocolates son por ti.

- Para can indicate future time.

Termínalo para el 15 de septiembre.

Finish it by September 15.

Nació para ser cantante.	She was born to be a singer.
No te preocunes. No es para tanto.	Don't worry. It's not such a big deal.

para serte sincero	to tell you the truth para servirle	at your service para colmo	to top it all off para mi gran sorpresa	to my surprise para siempre	forever
para su desgracia	unfortunately for him/her

Estoy resfriada, tengo dolor de cabeza y para colmo, tengo que estar en una reunión a las ocho de la mañana.

Para su gran sorpresa, le ascendieron de puesto.

Te amaré para siempre.

Mi hermano, para su desgracia, tuvo que trabajar diez años en ese lugar.

I have a cold, my head aches, and to top it all off, I have to be at a meeting at 8 A.M.

To his great surprise, they promoted him.

I'll love you forever.

My brother, unfortunately for him, had to work in that place for 10 years.

AVOID THE Blunder

Rather than translate word for word, think of set expressions as complete units.

X a mi sorpresa

X por colmo

X por su desgracia

para que te enteres/	for your information / para que lo sepas	just so you know para variar	for a change

—Cenicienta, eres muy poca cosa.

Nadie se casará contigo.

—Pues, para que te enteres, el príncipe me propuso matrimonio anoche.

Esteban no vino a clase hoy, ¡para variar!

"Cinderella, you're a nobody.

No one will marry you."

"Well, for your information, the prince proposed to me last night."

Esteban didn't come to class today, for a change!

AVOID THE Blunder

These expressions are used sarcastically; do not use them if you want to express a sincere feeling.

por

The preposition por has specific uses and is sometimes required in set phrases.

- Por can indicate the agent or means of the action of the verb.

La novela fue escrito por su abuela.

The novel was written by his grandmother.

Anoche hablamos por teléfono.
Le mandé el paquete por correo aéreo.

*We talked on the phone last night.
I sent him the package via air mail.*

■ Por can indicate a route or vague location.

Caminaron por el parque.
Anda por el jardín, viendo las flores.
Está por aquí.
—¿Dónde estabas?
—Por ahí.

*They walked through the park.
He's walking around the garden,
looking at the flowers.
It's near here.
“Where were you?”
“Not too far away.”*

■ Por can indicate time, as an alternative to en.

Tenemos clases por la mañana, descansamos por la tarde y estudiamos por la noche.

We have classes in the morning, we rest in the afternoon, and we study at night.

AVOID THE Blunder

When an actual time is expressed, use the pattern a las diez de la mañana, a las cuatro de la tarde.

✗ a las diez por la mañana
✗ a las cuatro por la tarde

■ Por can indicate the duration of planned future action.

Van a Guatemala por dos años.
Voy a estudiar por cinco horas.

*They're going to Guatemala for two years.
I'm going to study for five hours.*

When indicating the duration of past action, por is not necessary.

Estuvimos dos años en Guatemala.
Estudié cinco horas anoche.

*We were in Guatemala for two years.
I studied (for) five hours last night.*

When the duration of planned future action is indicated after the verb estar, por is not necessary.

Vamos a estar dos años en Guatemala.
Voy a estar cinco horas en la biblioteca.
Vamos a estar en Guatemala dos años.

*We're going to be in Guatemala for two years.
I'm going to be at the library for five hours.
We're going to be in Guatemala for two years.*

Por can indicate an exchange of one thing for another.

---	--

Por can indicate a substitution of one thing for another.

Ella va a asistir al congreso por su jefe. Ana trabaja por mí mañana.	She's going to attend the conference in place of her boss. Ana is substituting for me tomorrow.
---	--

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not confuse “work in my place” (por mí) with “work for me” (para mí).

■ Por can indicate the motive, reason, or cause of an action.

Lo hizo por amor. Vendió su coche por necesidad. —¿Por qué te vas? —Porque no me gusta el trabajo. Ella se perdió por mi culpa. Él se mudó a otro país por ella. Por ser de Canadá, hablaba inglés con fluidez.	She did it out of love. He sold his car out of necessity. “Why are you leaving?” “Because I don't like the job.” She got lost because of me. He moved to another country for her. Since he was from Canada, he spoke English fluently.
--	---

■ There is a distinction between por ser, which explains a reason for something being as it is, and para ser, which compares something or someone with others of its type (see page 278).

Por ser de Londres, habla inglés con fluidez. Para ser angloparlante, habla español muy bien.	Since he's from London, he speaks English fluently. For a native speaker of English, he speaks Spanish very well.
--	--

■ Por indicates a more dramatic motive than para.

Su esposo compró la casa por ella. Su esposo compró la casa para ella.	Her husband bought the house for her (because of her needs). Her husband bought the house for her (as a gift).
---	---

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not confuse ¿por qué? “for what reason?” with ¿para qué? “for what purpose?”

■ Por can indicate the benefactor of an action.

¡Brindemos por la salud de nuestro gran amigo!	Let's drink to the health of our great friend!
Voy a votar por la maestra, porque conoce los problemas de las escuelas.	I'm going to vote for the teacher, because she knows the problems with the schools.

■ Por can be used after ir to mean “to go get.”

Fueron al centro por pan.	They went to town for bread.
Voy a la biblioteca por un libro.	I'm going to the library to get a book.

■ Por can indicate action yet to be done.

Tengo tres trabajos por terminar.	I still have three papers to finish.
Tiene dos coches por reparar.	He still has two cars to repair.

■ Por can indicate a lack of purpose.

Este político habla por hablar.	This politician talks just for the sake of talking.
---------------------------------	--

■ Por can mean “per.”

Pagamos casi dos dólares por galón.	We paid almost two dollars per gallon.
Ahorró el 10 por ciento de su sueldo.	She saved 10 percent of her salary.

■ Por can mean “times” in multiplication.

—¿Cuánto es tres por tres?	“How much is three times three?”
—Tres por tres es nueve.	“Three times three is nine.”

■ Por is used in certain set expressions.

por adelantado	in advance	por escrito	in writing

desde

The preposition desde has several different uses.

- Desde is used to indicate time (see page 257).

El semestre es desde el 12 de enero hasta el 5 de mayo.

The semester is from January 12 to May 5.

—¿Desde cuándo estás aquí?

*“How long have you been here?”
 (“Since when are you here?”)*

—Estoy aquí desde hace cuatro semanas.

“I've been here for four weeks.”

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not translate the English expressions word for word.

- X ¿Cuánto tiempo has estado aquí?
- X He estado aquí por cuatro semanas.

- Desde is used to indicate a starting point leading to a destination.

Viajó desde Europa a California en un día.	She traveled from Europe to California in one day.
Me llamó desde su hotel en San José.	He called me from his hotel in San José.

ante

The preposition ante has several uses.

- Ante indicates “in the presence of” with a certain solemnity not implied by delante de (see page 234).

Tuvo que presentar su versión de los hechos ante el juez.	She had to present her version of the story before the judge.
--	--

- Ante is used in the expression ante todo to indicate “above all,” “most importantly.”

Ante todo, quiero graduarme de enfermera.	Most importantly, I want to get my nursing degree.
Ante todo cuida tu salud.	Above all, take care of your health.

hacia

The preposition hacia is used to indicate “toward.”

Ustedes van hacia el norte.	You all are headed north.
Sintió mucho cariño hacia su padre.	She felt a lot of affection for her father.

sobre

The preposition sobre has several uses.

- Sobre is an alternative for en, encima de, and por encima de to indicate place.

El libro está sobre la mesa.

Puse las llaves sobre el libro.

The book is on the table.

I put the keys on top of the book.

- Sobre can indicate “above” or “higher than.”

La ciudad está a 5.000 metros sobre el nivel del mar.

The city is 5,000 meters above sea level.

- Sobre can indicate a topic.

Tengo un libro sobre las flores silvestres de esta región.

I have a book about the wildflowers in this area.

- Sobre can indicate approximation.

Tenemos que leer sobre cien
páginas.

We have to read about a hundred pages.

- Sobre can indicate the addition of more of the same.

Sobre los problemas que ya tiene, ahora viene esto.

On top of the problems she already has, now this.

En ese pueblo, ocurre tragedia sobre tragedia.

In that town, one tragedy happens on top of another.

- Sobre can indicate close observation.

El jefe está siempre sobre sus empleados.

The boss is always watching what his employees do.

bajo

The preposition bajo has several uses.

- Bajo can indicate “below” or “lower than.”

Hace muchísimo frío. Está en cinco grados bajo cero.

It's freezing. It's five degrees below zero.

- Bajo can indicate “under the power/influence/protection of.”

La gente sufrió muchas desgracias bajo su gobierno.

The people suffered great misfortune during (under the power of) his government.

No debió manejar cuando estaba bajo la influencia de los medicamentos.

He shouldn't have been driving under the influence of the medicine.

Por fin estamos bajo techo.

We're finally indoors (under the protection of the roof).

- Bajo can indicate presence in certain natural settings.

Caminamos bajo la lluvia.
Se sentaron bajo la sombra de un árbol.
Se besaron bajo las estrellas.
Se puede ver bajo la luz de la luna.

We walked in the rain.
They sat in the shade of a tree.
They kissed under the stars.
You can see by the light of the moon.

- Bajo is used in certain expressions.

bajo cuerda	under the counter/table bajo juramento	under oath
bajo llave	under lock and key
bajo mano	on the quiet
bajo techo	under cover

Hicieron algunos pagos bajo cuerda.
Las joyas están bajo llave.

They made several under-the-counter payments.
The jewelry is under lock and key.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Caminamos en la lluvia.
- ✗ Se puede ver en la luz de la luna.

tras

The preposition tras has several uses.

- Tras can indicate “following.”

Tras los acontecimientos de ayer, ella toma más precauciones.

Following yesterday's events, she is being more careful.

- Tras can indicate pursuit.

Todos los chicos andan tras ella.

All the boys are after her.

- Tras can indicate tedious repetition.

Día tras día, trabajaba doce horas y volvía a casa en la noche.

Day after day, he worked 12 hours and came back home at night.

entre

The preposition entre has several uses.

- Entre indicates both “between” and “among.”

En la clase, me siento entre Juan y Miguel.

In the class I sit between Juan and Miguel.

Aquí estoy, entre gente de todas partes del mundo.

Here I am among people from all over the world.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the preposition de after entre.

- ✗ Me siento entre de Juan y Miguel.
- ✗ Estoy entre de gente de todas partes.

- Unlike most prepositions, entre is followed by the subject pronouns yo and tú, rather than mí and ti.

Esto es entre tú y yo.
¿Juan se sentó entre tu hermana y tú?

*This is between you and me.
Did Juan sit between you and your sister?*

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Esto es entre ti y mí.
- ✗ Juan se sentó entre ti y ella.

- Entre is used in division to mean “divided by.”

Dieciséis entre dos son ocho. Sixteen divided by two is eight.

según

The preposition según generally corresponds to English “according to.”

Hicimos el trabajo según nos indicó.

We did the job according to his instructions.

Según el periódico, hoy va a llover.

According to the paper, it's going to rain today.

Unlike most prepositions, según is followed by the subject pronouns yo and tú, rather than mí and ti.

Según tú, tenemos un examen mañana, pero yo no estoy tan seguro de eso.

According to you, we have an exam tomorrow, but I'm not so sure about that.

salvo and excepto

The prepositions salvo and excepto indicate exception.

Todos los chicos, salvo mi hermano, estaban contentos.

All the boys except my brother were happy.

Unlike most prepositions, salvo and excepto are followed by the subject pronouns yo and tú, rather than mí and ti.

Toda la familia, excepto yo, fue al campo.

The whole family went to the country, except for me.

AVOID THE

Blunder

- X según mí
- X según tí
- X salvo mí
- X salvo tí

OTHER CONJUNCTIONS

aunque	although, even if
de modo que	so
mientras que	while (in a comparison)
puesto que	since (because)

Review the conjunctions in the chart above.

The basic conjunctions are similar to, but not always equivalent to, their English counterparts.

y

The conjunction y, like the English “and,” is used to connect similar parts of speech.

Roberto y Ricardo estudian.

Roberto and Ricardo are studying.

Ana estudia y trabaja.

Ana studies and works.

Vamos a estudiar y trabajar.

We're going to study and work.

Ana es inteligente y trabajadora.

Ana is smart and hardworking.

When two or more adverbs of manner are connected by y, only the last one mentioned includes the suffix -mente (see page 244).

Roberto lee lenta y cuidadosamente.

Roberto reads slowly and carefully.

AVOID THE Blunder

X lentamente y cuidadosamente

When the word following y begins with the letter i- or the letters bi-, y changes to e.

Voy con Ana e Isabel.
Estudio español e historia.

I'm going with Ana and Isabel.
I study Spanish and History.

AVOID THE Blunder

X España y Inglaterra X islamismo y hinduismo

Y expressed as a question is used to ask for a response to an understood or assumed request for information.

SITUATION A young woman returns home after an important job interview.

HER FATHER	— ¿Y?	“So?”
THE YOUNG WOMAN	— Me contrataron!	“They hired me!”

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not assume that y is always translated as “and.”

The English correlative conjunctions “both … and …” can be expressed with tanto... como... in Spanish.

Tanto la madre como el hijo estudian español.

Both the mother and the son are studying Spanish.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not assume that “and” is always translated as y.

o

The conjunction o, like the English “or,” is used to indicate an option of one thing rather than another.

—¿Quieres helado de chocolate
o de vainilla?

“Do you want chocolate or vanilla ice cream?”

—No sé si quiero helado o no.

"I don't know whether I want ice cream or not."

The correlative conjunctions o... o... are used to present an ultimatum or to offer a choice.

¡O te portas bien, o te marchas!

Either you behave yourself, or you leave!

La reunión tiene que ser esta semana, o el martes o el miércoles.

The meeting has to be this week, on either Tuesday or Wednesday.

Usually only one o is used to translate “either ... or ...” in other contexts.

No sé qué voy a hacer. Iré al concierto o al cine.

I don't know what I'm going to do. I'll go to either the concert or the movies.

Ella no está conmigo. Está con su hermano o con su novio.

She isn't with me. She's with either her brother or her boyfriend.

When the word following o begins with the letter o- or the letters ho-, o changes to u.

Puedes usar esa palabra u otra.

You can use that word or another one.

No sé si la cita es mañana u hoy.

I don't know if the appointment is tomorrow or today.

AVOID THE Blunder

X ayer o hoy

X esta o otra

X Francia o Holanda

When the conjunction o is used between numbers, it is written with an accent mark.

Seremos unos 20 ó 30 personas.

*We'll be about 20 or 30 people./
There'll be about 20 or 30 of us.*

The expression o sea is used to signal a clarification, like the English “in other words” or “I mean.”

No fue como tú imaginas, o sea, no fue tan dramático.

It wasn't what you think, I mean, it wasn't that dramatic.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not assume that o is always translated as “or.”

ni, ni siquiera, and ni... ni...

The conjunction ni has several uses.

Ni or ni siquiera can express “not even.”

Ni (siquiera) su esposa lo sabe.	Not even his wife knows.
No ha visto ni (siquiera) a su mejor amigo.	He hasn't seen even his best friend.

The correlative conjunctions ni... ni... are used to express the lack of an alternative.

No viene ni Carlos ni Ricardo.	Neither Carlos nor Ricardo is coming.
Esos chicos ni trabajan ni estudian.	Those boys don't work or study.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not leave out the first ni.

 No viene Carlos ni Ricardo.

pues

The conjunction pues indicates a reason for the previous statement.

Ernesto no comprende la lección, pues no estuvo en clase ayer.	Ernesto doesn't understand the lesson because he wasn't in class yesterday.
Voy a invitar a Paco, pues es mi mejor amigo.	I'm going to invite Paco, since he's my best friend.

AVOID THE Blunder

The word pues has other meanings and can also be used as an adverb. Do not assume that it always has the same translation into English.

pero

The conjunction pero, like the English “but,” indicates a contrast with the previous statement.

La lección parece difícil, pero no lo es.	The lesson looks hard, but it isn't.
Tino no va a la fiesta, pero yo sí.	Tino isn't going to the party, but I am.

no... sino (que)...

The expressions no... sino... and no... sino que... are used to correct a previous statement.

Sino is used to correct any sentence element, with the exception of a conjugated verb.

No canta Julio, sino Enrique.

No quieren bailar, sino cantar.

No vamos al cine, sino al teatro.

No voy con Juan, sino con Mario.

Julio isn't singing; Enrique is.

*They don't want to dance;
they want to sing.*

*We're not going to the movies;
we're going to the theater.*

I'm not going with Juan;

I'm going with Mario.

AVOID THEBlunder

Be sure to repeat any preposition that occurs between sino and the correcting item.

✗ No vamos al cine, sino teatro.

✗ No voy con Juan, sino Mario.

Sino que is used to correct a previous statement when the conjugated verb is repeated or changed.

No vamos al cine, sino que vamos al teatro.

Ellos no alquilaron la casa, sino que la compraron.

*We're not going to the movies;
we're going to the theater.*

*They didn't rent the house;
they bought it.*

AVOID THEBlunder

Do not omit the que when there is a conjugated verb in the correction.

✗ No vamos al cine, sino vamos al teatro.

✗ No alquilaron la casa, sino la compraron.

apenas

The conjunction apenas refers to action that occurs immediately before new action (see page 247).

When apenas introduces a past action, it is followed by a verb in the indicative.

Apenas lo vio, corrió a ayudarlo. As soon as she saw him, she ran to help him.

When apenas introduces an action that has not yet taken place, it is followed by a verb in the subjunctive. It is an alternative to en cuanto.

Apenas lo sepa, te llamaré. Me dijo que apenas lo supiera, me llamaría.	As soon as I find out, I'll call you. He told me that as soon as he found out, he would call me.
---	---

The correlatives apenas... cuando... are used to express action that follows immediately.

Apenas empecé a leer cuando sonó el teléfono.	I had just begun to read when the phone rang.
--	--

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not confuse the conjunction apenas with the adverb apenas, which indicates a less than adequate amount or degree.

Other Common Conjunctions

There are many other connective words and expressions. Following are some of the most common.

- The conjunction aunque expresses the meaning “although” or “in spite of the fact that.”

When aunque introduces information that is new to the hearer, it is followed by a verb in the indicative mood.

Aunque mi hermano no durmió bien anoche, está listo para el examen.	Even though my brother didn't sleep well last night, he's ready for the test.
---	--

Aunque se discutieron ayer, hoy están de acuerdo.	Even though they argued yesterday, they are in agreement today.
--	--

When aunque precedes a fact that is already known to the hearer, it is followed by a verb in the subjunctive mood.

—¡Su novio es muy rico! —Aunque su novio tenga mucho dinero, es muy tacaño. —No dormí ni una hora anoche.	“Her boyfriend is rich!” “Even though her boyfriend has a lot of money, he's very stingy.” “I didn't get even an hour's sleep last night.”
--	---

—Aunque no durmieras anoche, pareces estar listo para el examen.

"Even if you didn't sleep last night, you seem to be ready for the test."

■ De modo que indicates a consequence.

Estaba muy alterado, de modo que lo llevaron a su casa para que se tranquilizara.

He was very upset, so they took him home to calm him down.

■ Mientras que is used in a comparison.

Yo trabajo todo el día, todos los días, mientras que tú te quedas en casa viendo la televisión.

I work all day every day, while you stay home watching TV.

■ Puesto que introduces a reason.

Tengo que volver a mi país, puesto que se me ha acabado
el dinero.

I have to go back to my country, since I've run out of money.

VOCABULARY

This page intentionally left blank.

WORDS

Cognates

Cognates are words that have a similar spelling and similar meaning in two languages. English and Spanish share many cognates, which are an enormous help in developing a working vocabulary. Following are a few examples of cognates.

Nouns

actor	capital	director	menú alcohol	cereal	error	mineral
ángel	chocolate	favor	mosquito animal	club	gas	motor
área	color	general	ópera
arquitecto	control	hotel	piano
banana	criminal	humor	profesor
cable	debate	idea	radio

- Many nouns that end in “-ion” in English end in -ción, -sión, or -xión in Spanish. These nouns are always feminine (see page 31). Following are some examples.

información	televisión
solución	conexión satisfacción

Just because a Spanish word is a cognate does not mean that it is always used exactly like it is in English. La televisión, for example, refers to TV programming, and el televisor is the TV set.

Quiero ver la televisión a las ocho. I want to watch TV at eight.
Ayer compramos un televisor nuevo. Yesterday we bought a new TV.

- A few masculine nouns end in -ión and do not have cognates in English.

el avión	the airplane	el guión	the script el camión	the truck	el sarampión	the measles

- Many nouns that end in “-ity” in English end in -dad in Spanish. These nouns are always feminine (see page 31).

cualidad	honestidad	seguridad
especialidad	posibilidad	sociedad
felicidad	responsabilidad

AVOID THE Blunder

Be careful spelling cognates that contain “qu” in English.

X qualidad

Add e- before English words beginning with sp-, st-, and sc-.

X specialidad

Be careful not to use a double s in posibilidad.

X possibilidad

Note the spelling difference in responsabilidad.

X responsabilidad

- The names of most academic subjects in English have cognates in Spanish. Many nouns of this type that end in “-y” or “-ology” in English end in -ía or -ología in Spanish.

anatomía	psicología*
biología	sociología filosofía

*Also spelled sicología.

AVOID THE Blunder

Equivalent usage often differs. In English, “science” is singular, but Spanish ciencias is plural. Also, in English, “physics” is plural, but Spanish física is singular.

X Estudia ciencia y físicas.

- Many noun cognates that end in “-nt” in English end in -nte in Spanish.

adolescente	inmigrante	restaurante
delincuente	paciente	sirviente
estudiante	presidente

- Certain nouns that end in “-ment” in English have cognates ending in -miento in Spanish.

argumento	pavimento
documento	suplemento fragmento

AVOID THE Blunder

Some of these cognates can be very tricky. Argumento means “argument” in the sense of “presentation of a case,” but not “a heated discussion.” “Government” is gobierno, and “disappointment” is desilusión. Also, medicamento is “medication.” Check these words in a dictionary before trusting them as cognates.

- Other noun cognates that end in “-ment” in English end in -miento in Spanish.

comportamiento	comportment (behavior) entretenimiento	entertainment
sentimiento	sentiment

AVOID THE Blunder

This group of cognates can also be tricky. Entrenamiento means “training” as in sports, while adiestramiento means “training” as in learning skills. Conocimiento is “knowledge,” and pimiento is “pepper.” Check these words in a dictionary before trusting them as cognates.

- Many English words that end in “-ance” or “-ence” have cognates that end in -ancia or -encia in Spanish. They are always feminine.

abundancia	emergencia	referencia
arrogancia	existencia	repugnancia
correspondencia	presencia

- Many English words that end in “-ist” have counterparts in Spanish that end in -ista for both males and females.

artista*	materialista	racista
feminista	optimista	socialista
lingüista	pesimista

Artista* refers to any creative person, not just a painter. An artista can be a pintor, músico, or actor, among other creative professions.

Verbs

Following is a sample of the many Spanish verbs that have English cognates.

demostrar (ue)	imitar	liberar	practicar fascinar	iniciar	manipular	servir (i, i) finalizar	insistir	necesitar	solucionar
ilustrar	inventar	obtener	visitar

Adjectives

Following is a sample of the many Spanish adjectives that have English cognates.

artístico	envidioso	liberal	quieto
decente	generoso	necesario	reciente
difícil	honesto	obvio	reservado
eficiente	inocente	popular	sincero

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use celoso if you want to say that you are “envious.” Envidioso means “envious” or “jealous” of someone because he or she has what you want. Celoso means “jealous” of someone because of another interest he or she has in someone or something else. A person who is celoso wants to have control over another person’s feelings.

✗ Estoy celosa de ella porque ganó el premio.

Adverbs

Many adverbs that end in “-ly” in English have cognates that end in -mente in Spanish (see pages 244–246). Following are a few examples.

artísticamente	inocentemente	probablemente
eficientemente	naturalmente	rápidamente
especialmente	obviamente	recientemente
generosamente	perfectamente	responsablemente
honestamente	posiblemente	sinceramente

AVOID THE Blunder

Even though cognates may convey similar meanings, they are not necessarily used in exactly the same way. For example, sinceramente means “sincerely,” but it is not used as the closing of a friendly letter, as is its English counterpart. A better closing in Spanish would be Afectuosamente or Cordialmente.

Falsos amigos

False cognates, often called falsos amigos, are words that look so similar in two languages that we expect them to have the same meaning in both—but they don’t! Because there are so many true cognates in English and Spanish, it is no wonder that these words have been labeled “false friends.” Following are the most common ones.

Nouns

SPANISH	ENGLISH	ENGLISH	SPANISH
NOUN	MEANING	NOUN	MEANING
apología	eulogy	apology	disculpa
arena	sand	arena	estadio
campo	field, countryside	camp	campamento

Este candidato es el mejor representante del pueblo.

This candidate is the best representative of the people.

Había más de cien personas en la fiesta.

There were more than a hundred people at the party.

AVOID THE Blunder

La gente is a singular noun that refers to all the people. Use las gentes only if you are referring to various tribes or other populations.

X las gentes right

el derecho a just claim

(see also pages 311 and 320)

Este grupo ha luchado por los derechos humanos.

This group has worked hard for human rights.

time	la vez el tiempo la hora divertirse (ie, i) pasarlo bien	an individual occasion the past, the present, and the future a point in time indicated by the clock have a good time have a good time
-------------	--	--

Él la llamó tres veces.	He called her three times.
Hemos perdido mucho tiempo discutiendo.	We wasted a lot of time arguing.
¿Qué hora es?	What time is it?
—¿Se divirtieron?	"Did you have a good time?"
—Sí, lo pasamos muy bien.	"Yes, we had a very good time."

AVOID THE Blunder

El tiempo also refers to the weather. Tener buen tiempo means “have good weather.”

- ✗ La llamó tres tiempos.
- ✗ ¿Qué tiempo es?
- ✗ Tuvimos un buen tiempo.

Verbs

appear	aparecer parecer	show up seem to be

be (see pages 87–89)

- Ser is used to indicate origin, nationality, religion, profession, civil status, ownership, composition, and descriptive characteristics of people and things.

Ramón es de México. Es católico.
Es médico. Es soltero.
Es simpático.
Esta chaqueta es de Guatemala.
Es de algodón. Es roja. Es mía.

*Ramón is from Mexico.
He's a Catholic. He's a doctor.
He's single. He's nice.
This jacket is from Guatemala.
It's cotton. It's red. It's mine.*

Ser is used to tell the current time and date, as well as the time, date, and location of events.

Hoy es miércoles, 12 de enero.
La reunión es mañana. Es a las diez. Es en la oficina del jefe.

*Today is Wednesday, January 12.
The meeting is tomorrow.
It's at 10 o'clock. It's in the boss's office.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Forget the misleading rule that ser indicates permanence. Many uses of ser are not necessarily permanent: es joven, soltero, gordo, pequeño, pobre, de Ramón.

■ Haber is used to state the existence of something. In all tenses, it is used only in the third-person singular, even when it is followed by a plural noun.

Hay una persona en la cocina.
Hay diez personas en la cocina.

*There is one person in the kitchen.
There are ten people in the kitchen.*

No había nada que leer.
Había tres libros en la mesa.

*There was nothing to read.
There were three books on the table.*

Hubo un accidente ayer.
Hubo dos accidentes ayer.

*There was an accident yesterday.
There were two accidents
yesterday.*

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ Habían tres libros. ✗ Hubieron dos accidentes.

■ Estar is used to tell the current condition of a person or thing.

Sara está enferma.
El dormitorio está sucio.
Su tío está muerto.
La máquina está rota.

*Sara is sick.
The bedroom is dirty.
His uncle is dead.
The machine is broken.*

Estar is used to tell the location of people and things.

Ana María no está en clase hoy porque está enferma.

La Argentina está en el sur de Sudamérica.

La oficina está en el tercer piso.
Todos estamos aquí para la reunión.

Ana María isn't in class today because she's sick.

Argentina is in the southern part of South America.

*The office is on the third floor.
We're all here for the meeting.*

Estar is used with a gerund to indicate ongoing activity (see page 115).

Mis amigos están estudiando en la biblioteca.

My friends are studying at the library.

Estar is used with a past participle to indicate a current condition (see page 87).

Las ventanas están abiertas.
La puerta está cerrada.

*The windows are open.
The door is closed.*

AVOID THE Blunder

Forget the misleading rule that estar indicates temporary meaning. Many uses of estar are not temporary.

- ✗ La Argentina es en Sudamérica.
- ✗ Su tío es muerto.

■ Tener is used to tell age. The word años is usually stated, and the word “old” is not translated. Since age is a characteristic, it answers the question ¿cómo es?

El muchacho tiene diez años.
Esta casa tiene cien años.

*The boy is ten.
This house is a hundred years old.*

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ El muchacho es diez.
- ✗ El muchacho tiene diez.
- ✗ Esta casa es cien años viejo.

Tener is used with certain nouns to indicate a current condition. It answers the question ¿cómo está?

tener (mucho) calor	be (very) hot
tener (mucho) frío	be (very) cold
tener (muchas) hambre	be (very) hungry
tener (mucho) miedo	be (very) afraid
tener (muchas) sed	be (very) thirsty
tener (mucho) sueño	be (very) sleepy

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Estoy hambre.
- ✗ Estoy sed.
- ✗ Estoy frío.

■ Muy used after ser and estar means “very.” Mucho(-a) is used after tener.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Tengo muy hambre.
- ✗ Tiene muy sueño.

be right	tener razón	make sense
	ser correcto	be the truth, behave appropriately
	estar correcto	be a correct response on a test can poder + infinitive be able to (because the possibility exists) saber + infinitive know how to

Sé manejar, pero hoy no puedo manejar porque no tengo coche. I can drive, but I can't drive today because I don't have a car.

eat comer eat
 desayunar eat breakfast
 almorzar eat lunch
 cenar eat dinner

Vamos a comer a las ocho.
 ¿A qué hora desayunan ustedes?
 No almuerzan hasta las dos.
 ¿Dónde quieres cenar?

We're going to eat at eight.
What time do you all eat breakfast?
They don't eat lunch until two.
Where do you want to eat dinner?

AVOID THE Blunder

El desayuno, el almuerzo, and la cena are meals that can be prepared, served, or enjoyed. But in Spanish, you “breakfast,” “lunch,” and “dine.”

- ✗ Voy a comer desayuno.
- ✗ Va comer almuerzo.
- ✗ Vamos a comer la cena.

go ir move from one place to another irse leave, go away
 subir go up
 bajar go down
 volverse loco(-a) go crazy

Tenemos que ir al mercado por leche. We have to go to the store for milk.

Tengo que irme. Se me hace tarde. El ascensor subió al séptimo piso. I have to go. I'm late.
The elevator went up to the seventh floor.

Queremos bajar al sótano. We want to go down to the basement.

Me estoy volviendo loca con tanto trabajo. I'm going crazy with so much work.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not confuse ir and irse.

- X El ascensor fue arriba al séptimo piso.
- X Tengo que ir.
- X Tenemos que irnos al mercado.

go and come	ir	go to another place (there)
	venir	come to where the speaker is (here)

Voy a tu casa mañana.

I'm coming to your house tomorrow.

Por favor, ven a mi oficina a las once.

Please come to my office at 11 o'clock.

AVOID THE Blunder

In English, it is possible to “come there,” when “there” means where the person you are talking to is or expects to be at the time of your arrival. In Spanish, this is not possible.

- X Vengo a tu casa mañana.
- X Venimos a tu fiesta el sábado.

have	hacer una fiesta	organize a party
	tener una fiesta	be invited to a party

¡Vamos a hacer una fiesta!

Let's have a party!

Tenemos una fiesta el viernes.

We have a party to go to on Friday.

have to	deber + infinitive	be obligated to
	tener que + infinitive	need to

Debemos pagar los impuestos
cada año.

We have to pay our taxes every year.

Me duele mucho el diente. Tengo que ir al dentista ahora mismo.

My tooth really hurts. I have to go to the dentist right away.

know	conocer	be acquainted with a person, have visited a place
	saber	be aware of information

No conozco Bolivia, pero conozco a muchos bolivianos.

I've never been to Bolivia, but I know a lot of Bolivians.

—¿Sabes tú dónde está Bolivia?
—Claro, sé que está al este del Perú.

*“Do you know where Bolivia is?”
“Of course, I know that it’s east of Peru.”*

leave salir go out of a place
 dejar not bring something with you, leave something behind

Humberto sale de su casa a las ocho de la mañana.
Dejó su maletín en su casa.

A Alejandro le gusta mucho Cristina.
Le gustan todas sus clases.
A mí me gusta mucho el chocolate.

She likes her colleagues.
I like her boyfriend.
Alejandro really likes Cristina.
She likes all her classes.
I like chocolate a lot.

AVOID THE Blunder

Keep in mind that in these constructions the person with the feeling is the indirect object, and the person or thing that causes the feeling is the subject.

- ✗ Su novio me caigo bien.
- ✗ Le gusta sus clases.
- ✗ Me gusto el chocolate.

AVOID THE Blunder

Gustar usually implies “attracted to.” Use querer to express “liking” family members or those in platonic relationships.

- ✗ Me gusta mi hermana.
- ✗ Le gusta mucho su abuelo.

love querer care for someone, love
 amar love unconditionally encantarle a uno be really delighted by a person or thing

Ella quiere mucho a sus padres.	She loves her parents a lot.
Te amo. Quiero casarme contigo.	I love you. I want to marry you.
Tú me encantas.	You enchant me.
Me encanta tu nuevo vestido.	I love your new dress. Where did you buy it?
¿Dónde lo compraste?

AVOID THE Blunder

Querer means “love” or “care for” when referring to people, but “want” when referring to things. Encantar means “love” when referring to things, but “entice,” “enchant,” or “delight” when referring to people.

X Amo el chocolate.

make	hacer hacer un ruido hacer/tender (ie) la cama anotar algo cometer un error ganar dinero	construct make a noise make the bed make a note of something make a mistake make money

take and bring	llevar	take (there)
	traer	bring (here)

Voy a tu casa y te llevo los documentos.

I'm coming to your house and I'll bring you the papers.

Carlos vino a mi casa y me trajo dos libros.

Carlos came to my house and brought me two books.

In English, you can “bring” something “there,” when “there” means where the person you are speaking to is or expects to be at the time of your arrival. In Spanish, this is not possible.

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use traer, unless you are already at your friend’s house and mean, “I brought you the documents.”

X Te traigo los documentos mañana.

try	intentar hacer tratar de hacer hacer un esfuerzo	make an effort to do something act to do something make an effort
Intenté hablar con él, pero no estaba en su casa cuando lo llamé.		I tried to talk to him, but he wasn't at home when I called him.

CONSTRUCTIONS

Spanish and English use very different constructions for certain concepts. Following are some examples.

English to Spanish

since

50

- to indicate “not good, not bad”: más o menos/regular
 - Hola Paco, ¿cómo van las cosas?
“Hi, Paco. How are things?”
 - Pues, más o menos.
“Oh, just so-so.”

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use así así to mean “so-so.”

—¿Cómo estás?
X —Así así.

will

- to ask a favor: question using a verb in the present tense
 - ¿Me ayudas con los paquetes? Will you help me with the packages?
 - ¿Me estacionas el coche? Will you park the car for me?
- to accept a request: verb in the present tense
 - Te ayudo con mucho gusto. I'll gladly help you.
 - Te estaciono el coche enseguida. I'll park the car for you right away.
- to make a promise: verb in the present or future tense
 - La llamo esta tarde a las cinco.
La llamaré esta tarde a las cinco. } I'll call you this afternoon at five.
- to predict the future: verb in the future tense
 - Su hijo será famoso. Your son will be famous.
 - Tú viajarás por el mundo. You will travel throughout the world.
- to indicate probability: verb in the future tense
 - ¿Qué vas a hacer?
—No sé. Me quedaré en casa
y veré la televisión. What are you going to do?
“I don't know. I'll probably stay home and watch TV.”

AVOID THE Blunder

Do not use the future tense in Spanish to translate all meanings of “will.” Rather than translate words individually, think of the function of the Spanish equivalent for the entire expression.

X —¿Me ayudarás con los paquetes?
X —¿Me llamarás esta tarde?

wish

- to express a sentiment: indirect object pronoun + desear

Te deseo un feliz cumpleaños. I wish you a happy birthday.
 Les deseamos toda la felicidad del mundo. We wish you all the happiness in the world.

- to express a wish that something were true: ojalá (que) + verb in imperfect subjunctive (see page 195)

Ojalá estuvieras aquí conmigo. I wish you were here with me.
 Ojalá tuviéramos más tiempo. I wish we had more time.

- to wish that something were true or had not happened: lamentar + infinitive

Lamento no poder decírtelo. I wish I could tell you.
 Lamento no haber ido a verla. I wish I had gone to see her.

wonder

“I wonder” is best expressed in Spanish by using a question in the future tense or in the conditional (see pages 145 and 156). The future is used to express wonder about present time. The conditional is used to express wonder about past time.

¿Dónde estará mi hermano? I wonder where my brother is.
 ¿Dónde estaría mi hermano? I wonder where my brother was.

would

“Would” has several meanings in English. Each meaning uses a different expression in Spanish.

- “would rather”: preferir (ie, i)

Preferimos quedarnos en casa. We would rather stay home.

- past tense of “will”; to express refusal to act: “wouldn’t,” “refused to”: negarse a/no querer

Se negó a ir al concierto. } He wouldn't go to the concert./
 No quiso ir al concierto. } He refused to go to the concert.

- past habitual action: verb in imperfect tense (see pages 132–138)

Ella me decía sus secretos She would always tell me her cuando éramos pequeñas. secrets when we were little.

- conditional action: verb in conditional (see pages 151–156)

Mi colega iría si pudiera. My colleague would come if she could.

Ella estaría hablando contigo ahora si fuera posible.
Ya nos habríamos ido si no hubiéramos perdido tanto tiempo.

*She would be talking to you right now if it were possible.
We would have left by now if we hadn't wasted so much time.*

- to make a polite request: poder in conditional

¿Podría usted hacerme un favor?
¿Podrían ustedes ayudarnos?

*Would you do me a favor?
Would you all help us?*

- “would like”: gustarle a uno in conditional; also, imperfect subjunctive of querer; “quisiera” + infinitive ¿Adónde te gustaría ir?

Me gustaría comer afuera esta noche.
Quisiera comer afuera esta noche.

Where would you like to go?

I would like to eat out tonight.

- “would you mind if”: importarle a uno in conditional

¿Te importaría si saliera temprano de la clase?

Would you mind if I left class early?

AVOID THE Blunder

Rather than translate “would” literally, think of the function of the Spanish equivalent for the entire expression.

Spanish to English

darle de alta release a patient darle de baja admit a patient

A Marta le dieron de alta del hospital ayer.

They released Marta from the hospital yesterday.

A su papá le dieron de baja ayer.

They admitted her father yesterday.

darle la bienvenida a alguien welcome someone

Vamos todos al aeropuerto para darles la bienvenida.

We're all going to the airport to welcome them.

desayunarse, almorzar (ue), cenar eat breakfast, eat lunch, eat dinner

No desayuno hasta las once.

I don't eat breakfast until 11 o'clock.

¿Quieres almorzar conmigo?

Will you eat lunch with me?

¿A qué hora cenan ustedes?

What time do you all eat dinner?

AVOID THE Blunder

In Spanish, you “breakfast,” “lunch,” and “dine.” The nouns for meals, el desayuno, el almuerzo, and la cena are used with the verbs preparar, cocinar, and servir.

- X No como el desayuno.
- X ¿Quieres comer almuerzo?
- X ¿A qué hora comen la cena?

despedirse de say good-bye to Tuvimos que despedirnos anoche.

We had to say good-bye to each other last night.

for the first time tonight.

fijarse en notice, pay attention to Mi esposo ni se ha fijado en que me he cortado el pelo.

¡Fíjate en cómo lo hacen los otros!

My husband hasn't even noticed that I had my hair cut.
Pay attention to how the others do it.

soler usually (do)

¿A qué hora suelen cenar?
Solemos cenar a las ocho.

What time do you usually eat dinner?
We usually eat dinner at eight.

tratarse de be about

—¿De qué se trata la película?
 —Se trata de la vida en un pueblo pequeño.

*“What’s the movie about?”
 “It’s about life in a small town.”*

Negative Constructions

In Spanish, as opposed to English, a negative clause must have no or another negative word before the verb.

- Negative sentences are often expressed using a double negative, with no preceding the verb and another negative word following the verb.

—¿Tienes algo en la mano?	“Do you have something in your hand?”
—No, no tengo nada en la mano.	“No, I don’t have anything in my hand.”
—¿Está alguien en la casa? —No, no está nadie.	“Is anyone in the house?” “No, no one is there.”
—¿Conoces a algún carpintero bueno? —No, no conozco a ningún carpintero aquí.	“Do you know a good carpenter?” “No, I don’t know a single carpenter here.”
—¿Quieres ir a alguna parte? —No, no quiero ir a ninguna parte.	“Do you want to go anywhere?” “No, I don’t want to go anywhere.”
Algún día volverá. No volverá nunca.	He’ll come back one day. He’ll never come back.
Ella va al cine y yo también.	She’s going to the movies, and so am I.
Ella no va a estudiar ni yo tampoco.	She’s not going to study, and I’m not either.
Él quiere cenar e ir al cine.	He wants to eat dinner and go to the movies.
Ella no quiere ni cenar ni ir al cine.	He doesn’t want to eat dinner or go to the movies.

AVOID THE Blunder

- ✗ Tengo nada en la mano.
 ✗ Volverá nunca.

- A negative word other than no sometimes precedes the verb, and the no is omitted.

Nada es más importante que la salud.

Nadie está en la casa.

Ningún carpintero quiere hacer este proyecto.

Nunca volverá.

No quiero ir al cine. Tampoco quiero quedarme aquí.

Ella no quiere hacer nada, ni quiere ir al cine.

Nothing is more important than health.

No one is in the house.

No carpenter wants to do this project.

She'll never come back.

I don't want to go to the movies.

I don't want to stay here either.

She doesn't want to do anything.

She doesn't even want to go to the movies.

AVOID THE Blunder

✗ No nadie está en casa.

✗ No nunca volverá.

On Friday I'm going to a party at a friend's house. I'm going to go with two other girls. I don't know what they're going to wear, but I plan to wear my new black skirt with a pink blouse. I'm going to wear my black high heels and some silver earrings. My friends are coming to get me at seven, so I'm going to have to change my clothes fast because my last class doesn't end until 5:30. I'm sure we're going to have a good time.

E Cuando estaba joven, viví en la ciudad con mis padres y _____ mis hermanos. Todos los domingos fuimos a el pueblo para comer almuerzo a la casa de mis abuelos. También fueron mis tíos con sus hijos, y a veces invitábamos _____ alguno amigo. En fin, era muchas gentes que comerían y tendrían un buen tiempo en esa casa en domingos. Mi abuela, la mejor cocinera en el mundo, preparó una grande comida, con por lo menos dos tipos de carne, varios platos de verduras, dos o tres ensaladas, y frutas. Nunca faltaba el pan especial hecho por mano por mi abuela. Luego se servía un pastel o una torta de postre. _____ Todo el mundo _____ gustaban a comer en casa de mi abuela. Yo me gustaba a jugar con mis primos, pero lo que yo me gustaba más era sentando en la mesa con los viejos y escuchando a sus cuentos.

When I was young I lived in the city with my parents and my brothers and sisters. Every Sunday we went to the country to eat lunch at my grandparents' house. My aunts and uncles and their kids always went too, and sometimes we invited a friend as well. So there were always a lot of people who would eat and have fun at that house on Sundays. My grandmother, the best cook in the whole world, used to prepare a huge meal, always with at least two kinds of meat, several platters of vegetables, two or three salads, and fruit. There were always my grandmother's homemade biscuits. Later a pie or cake was served for dessert. Everybody liked to eat at my grandmother's house. I liked to play with my cousins, but what I liked best was sitting at the table with the old people and listening to their stories.

F Uno domingo cuando estuvimos en mis abuelos' casa, mi hermano se caió fuera de un árbol, donde estaba jugando con nuestros primo. Todos estábamos muy preocupado. Alguien llamaba _____ la ambulancia. Mientras esperábamos para ayuda, mi mamá trataba a calmar _____ mi hermano, que fue agitado. Él no lloraba, aunque estaba muy herido. Yo trataba a calmar _____ mi hermanita, que sí lloraba por lo ocurrido. Por fin llegaba la ambulancia. Los paramédicos examinaban _____ mi hermano y llevaron lo a el hospital, donde determinaron que rompió su clavícula. Le ponían algunas vendas, le daron un calmante y luego llevábamos lo a casa.

One Sunday when we were at my grandparents' house, my brother fell out of a tree, where he was playing with our cousin. We were all really worried. Somebody called an ambulance. While we were waiting for help, my mother tried to soothe my brother, who was upset. He didn't cry, even though he was badly hurt. I tried to soothe my little sister, who cried because of what happened. Finally the ambulance arrived. The paramedics examined my brother and took him to the hospital, where they determined that he had broken his collarbone. They put some bandages on him, gave him a tranquilizer, and then we took him home.

I “¿Qué van a hacer ustedes cuando _____ graduan?” pidió la señora que visitaba la universidad con sus hija. Una chica contestó, “voy a estudiar medicina y algún día seré médico.” Otra dijó, “tomaré un viaje alrededor el mundo y no vuelveré hasta _____ me canso de la aventura.” Otras dijieron que no supieron que van _____ hacer. Algunas fueron seguros de que quisieron conseguir casados y tener hijos algún día, sino otras no.

“What are you all going to do when you graduate?” asked the woman who was visiting the university with her daughter. One girl answered, “I’m going to study medicine and one day I’ll be a doctor.” Another said, “I’ll take a trip around the world and I won’t come back until I get tired of the adventure.” Others said they didn’t know what they were going to do. Some were sure that they wanted to get married and have children one day, but others weren’t.

J Para el año 2050, todos nosotros seremos viejo y habremos hecho muchas cosas. Mi hermano dice _____ se habrá jubilado después que ha trabajado cuarenta años. Se habrá casado _____ su novia coriente y tendrán tres hijos. Los niños ya habrán terminados sus carreras y ellos vivirán en varias partes del mundo. Mi hermano piensa _____ se reunirán todos por lo menos cuatro veces un año. Su novia dice que ella también se habrá jubilada y que sí, se habrá casado a mi hermano. Pero ella dice que no tendrán tres hijos, pero dos, y que los dos vivirán cerca _____ sus padres cuando son grandes.

By the year 2050, we’ll all be old and we will have done a lot of things. My brother says that he will have retired after working forty years. He will have married his present girlfriend and they will have three children. The children will have already finished their education and will be living in different parts of the world. My brother thinks they will all get together at least four times a year. His girlfriend says that she will have retired too, and that, yes, she will have married my brother. But she says they won’t have three children, but two, and that both of them will live near their parents when they are grown.

K Si yo ganaba “el gordo” de la lotería, o si alguien me dio diez millon dólares, antes que yo hice otra cosa, yo contrataría a alguien quien serviría como mi gerente personal, que manejaría el dinero, que lo invertiría bien, que me ayudaría en elegir proyectos filantrópicos y que aseguraría que no perdería el dinero tan rápido que lo habría ganado. Luego dejaría trabajando y pensaría de la mejor manera de disfrutar de la vida. Yo creo que buscaría una casa elegante, sino que no muy grande, y que también yo compraría una casa nueva para mis padres. Yo compraría un coche de lujo. Yo tomaría viajes a los países que me parecieron interesantes, pero antes que yo tomaba cada viaje, yo estudiaría el idioma y la cultura del lugar. Yo leería mucho para aprender más del mundo. Claro, yo también tendría muchas fiestas en la nueva casa y invitaría _____ todos mis amigos.

If I won the lottery jackpot, or if someone gave me ten million dollars, before I did anything else, I would hire someone to be my personal manager, to take care of the money, to invest it well, to help me to choose charitable projects, and to make sure that I didn't lose the money as fast as I had gotten it. Then I would stop working and would think about the best way to enjoy life. I think I would look for an elegant house, but not a big one, and I would also buy a new house for my parents. I would buy a luxury car. I would take trips to the countries that seemed interesting, but before taking each trip, I would study the language and the culture of the place. I would read a lot, to learn more about the world. Of course I would also have a lot of parties at the new house, and I would invite all my friends.

L Mi tío ya es viejo y él dice él ha vivido bien. Claro, hay cosas que habría cambiado si había tenido la oportunidad, pero en general está contento. El más triste tiempo de su vida fue diez años pasados, cuando mi tía morió de cáncer. Durante estos diez años, mi tío _____ ha sentido muy sólo. Él habría gustado mucho disfrutar de sus esposa's compañía. Sin embargo, sus dos hijas visitan a él todos los días, y si necesita cualquiera cosa, sólo tiene que decirlo y se cumple el deseo en seguida. _____ siente dichoso y muy orgulloso de su familia, pues no conoce _____ ninguno otro anciano que tiene hijos tan atentos. También es muy agradecido de haber gozado de bien salud todos estos años.

My uncle is old now, and he says he has lived well. Of course, there are things he would have changed if he had had the chance, but in general he's happy. The saddest time of his life was ten years ago, when my aunt died of cancer. For these ten years, my uncle has been lonely. He would have liked to have had his wife by his side. Still, his two daughters visit him every day, and if he needs anything, he only has to mention it and it's done. He feels lucky and proud of his family—he doesn't know anybody else his age who has such attentive children. He's also very grateful to have been in good health all these years.

Catch the Blunders (pages 331–336)

A Estoy en mi primer año de la universidad. Vivo en una residencia, que se llama “Jefferson Hall”, con dos compañeras de cuarto, Mary y Jenna. Las dos son muy simpáticas y nos llevamos bien. Mary es bastante seria y estudia mucho. Jenna es buena estudiante, pero no estudia tanto como Mary. Nuestro dormitorio no es grande, pero es cómodo y bonito.

B Como quiero ser médico, estudio biología y química, que me gustan mucho. Mis clases son los lunes y los miércoles desde las diez de la mañana hasta las once y media, en Washington Hall. También tengo que estudiar inglés, historia y español. El español es difícil para mí, pero me gusta y creo que es importante para mi carrera. La clase de inglés es los martes y los jueves a las nueve en Harrison Hall, la de historia es a mediodía los mismos días y en el mismo edificio y la de español es de lunes a jueves desde las dos de la tarde hasta las tres, en Tyler Hall. No tengo que asistir a clases los viernes.

C Entramos en un dormitorio de la universidad y vemos esta escena: Hay ocho estudiantes sentados en el suelo preparándose para un examen. Están tratando de recordar todos los datos sobre la Guerra Civil de los Estados Unidos. Una chica tiene una pizarra pequeña en la cual está escribiendo las fechas importantes. Un chico le está explicando a su amigo lo que pasó al final de la guerra. Otros dos chicos están leyendo sus libros de texto. Una estudiante está durmiendo y su amiga está tratando de despertarla. Un muchacho está hablando por celular con su novia. Nadie está viendo la televisión. Todos beben café y esperan la llegada de unas pizzas.

D El viernes tengo una fiesta en la casa de un amigo. Voy a ir con otras dos chicas. No sé qué van a llevar ellas, pero yo pienso llevar mi nueva falda negra con una blusa rosada. Voy a usar unos zapatos negros de tacón alto y unos pendientes de plata. Mis amigas vienen a buscarme a las siete, así que voy a tener que cambiarme de ropa rápido porque mi última clase no termina hasta las 5:30. Estoy segura de que vamos a divertirnos mucho.

E Cuando era joven, vivía en la ciudad con mis padres y con mis hermanos. Todos los domingos íbamos al pueblo para almorzar a la casa de mis abuelos. También iban mis tíos con sus hijos, y a veces invitábamos a algún amigo. En fin, había mucha gente que comía y se divertía en esa casa los domingos. Mi abuela, la mejor cocinera del mundo, preparaba una gran comida, con por lo menos dos tipos de carne, varios platos de verduras, dos o tres ensaladas y frutas. Nunca faltaba el pan especial hecho a mano por mi abuela. Luego se servía un pastel o una torta de postre. A todo el mundo le gustaba comer en casa de mi abuela. A mí me gustaba jugar con mis primos, pero lo que me gustaba más era sentarme en la mesa con los viejos y escuchar sus cuentos.

F Un domingo cuando estábamos en la casa de mis abuelos, mi hermano se cayó de un árbol, donde estaba jugando con nuestro primo. Todos estábamos muy preocupados. Alguien llamó a la ambulancia. Mientras esperábamos ayuda, mi mamá trataba de calmar a mi hermano, que estaba agitado. Él no lloraba, aunque estaba muy herido. Yo trataba de calmar a mi hermanita, que sí lloraba por lo ocurrido. Por fin llegó la ambulancia. Los paramédicos examinaron a mi hermano y lo llevaron al hospital, donde determinaron que se le había roto la clavícula. Le pusieron algunas vendas, le dieron un calmante y luego lo llevamos a casa.

G Una clase de español está planeando hacer una fiesta para celebrar el final del semestre. El profesor quiere que los estudiantes traigan platos auténticos de la cocina hispana. Les dice a tres chicas que准备en arroz con pollo al estilo colombiano. Les sugiere a otras dos que sigan una receta para unas papas al estilo peruano. A un chico le recomienda que haga una tortilla española, y a otro que prepare un flan. El profesor les da recetas para todos estos platos. Los estudiantes salen entusiasmados, pensando en su fiesta y en la comida rica que van a cocinar.

I “¿Qué van a hacer ustedes cuando se gradúen?” preguntó la señora que visitaba la universidad con su hija. Una chica contestó, “voy a estudiar medicina y algún día seré médico”. Otra dijo, “haré un viaje alrededor del mundo y no volveré hasta que me canse de la aventura”. Otras dijeron que no sabían qué iban a hacer. Algunas estaban seguras de que querían casarse y tener hijos algún día, pero otras no.

J Para el año 2050, todos nosotros seremos viejos y habremos hecho muchas cosas. Mi hermano dice que se habrá jubilado después de haber trabajado cuarenta años. Se habrá casado con su novia actual y tendrán tres hijos. Los hijos ya habrán terminado sus carreras y vivirán en varias partes del mundo. Mi hermano piensa que se reunirán todos por lo menos cuatro veces al año. Su novia dice que ella también se habrá jubilado y que sí, se habrá casado con mi hermano. Pero ella dice que no tendrán tres hijos, sino dos, y que los dos vivirán cerca de sus padres cuando sean grandes.

K Si yo ganara “el gordo” de la lotería, o si alguien me diera diez millones de dólares, antes de hacer otra cosa, contrataría a alguien que sirviera como mi gerente personal, que manejara el dinero, que lo invirtiera bien, que me ayudara en elegir proyectos filantrópicos y que asegurara que no perdiera el dinero tan rápido como lo hubiera ganado. Luego dejaría de trabajar y pensaría en la mejor manera de disfrutar de la vida. Creo que buscaría una casa elegante, pero no muy grande, y que también compraría una casa nueva para mis padres. Compraría un coche de lujo. Haría viajes a los países que me parecieran interesantes, pero antes de hacer cada viaje, estudiaría el idioma y la cultura del lugar. Leería mucho para aprender más del mundo. Claro, también haría muchas fiestas en la nueva casa e invitaría a todos mis amigos.

L Mi tío ya es viejo y dice que ha vivido bien. Claro, hay cosas que habría cambiado si hubiera tenido la oportunidad, pero en general está contento. La época más triste de su vida fue hace diez años, cuando mi tía murió de cáncer. Durante estos diez años, mi tío se ha sentido muy solo. Le habría gustado mucho disfrutar de la compañía de su esposa. Sin embargo, sus dos hijas lo visitan todos los días, y si necesita cualquier cosa, sólo tiene que decirlo y se cumple el deseo en seguida. Se siente dichoso y muy orgulloso de su familia, pues no conoce a ningún otro anciano que tenga hijos tan atentos. También está muy agradecido de haber gozado de buena salud todos estos años.
